

L. angl. o

75

Robinson Ready

or

the Wreck of the Pacific.

Robinson Hardy

The Water of the Pacific

Robinson Ready
or
the Wreck of the Pacific.

Written for young people by Captain Marryat.

Für die deutsche Jugend mit belehrenden Noten und einem Wörterbuche versehen.

Zweite Auflage.

Leipzig,
Baumgärtner's Buchhandlung.

1857.

P R E F A C E.

I promised my children to write a book for them. It was a hasty promise, for I never considered whether I was capable of so doing. On my requesting to know what kind of a book they would prefer, they said that they wished me to continue a work called the „Swiss Family Robinson,“ which had never been completed, and which appeared peculiarly to interest them. I sent for the work and read it: it was originally written in German, translated into French, and from French into English, — a very fair evidence of its merits as amusing to children; but I found difficulties which were to me insurmountable, and which decided me not to continue that work, but to write another in the same style; and I mention this more with a view to prevent any accusation of plagiarism, than with any intent to depreciate the work referred to. I have said that it is very amusing; but the fault which I find in it is, that it does not adhere to the probable, or even the possible, which should ever be the case in a book, even if fictitious, when written for children. I pass over the seamanship, or rather the want of it, which occasions impossibilities to be performed on board of the wreck, as that is not a matter of any consequence: as in the comedy, where, when people did not understand Greek, Irish did just as well, so it is with a large portion of the seamanship displayed in naval writings. But what compelled me to abandon the task was, that much ignorance, or carelessness, had been displayed in describing the vegetable and animal productions of the island on which the family had been wrecked. The island is supposed to be far to the southward, near to Van Diemen's Land; yet, in these temperate latitudes, we have not only plants, but animals, introduced which could only be found in the interior of Africa or the torrid zone, mixed up with those really indigenous to the climate. This was an error which I could not persuade myself to follow up. It is true that it is a child's book; but I consider, for that very reason, it is necessary that the author should be particular in what may appear to be trifles, but which really are not, when it is remembered how strong the impressions are upon the juvenile mind. Fiction, when written for young people, should, at all events, be based upon truth; and I could not continue a narrative under the objections which I have stated.

Whether I have succeeded or not in the construction of my own, is another question. I shall, however, take the opinions of the children, rather than of the critics, on this point.

ROBINSON READY,
OR THE WRECK OF THE PACIFIC.

CHAPTER I.

It was in the month of October, 18—, that the Pacific, a large ship, was running before a heavy gale of wind in the middle of the vast Atlantic Ocean. She had but little sail¹⁾, for the wind was so strong, that the canvas would have been split into pieces by the furious blasts before which she²⁾ was driven through the waves, which were very high, and following her almost as fast as she darted through their boiling waters; sometimes heaving up her stern and sinking her bows so deep into the hollow of the sea, that it appeared as if she would have dived down underneath the waves; but she was a fine vessel, and the captain was a good seaman, who did what he considered best for the safety of his vessel, and then put his trust in that Providence who is ever watchful over us.

1) Sail wird bald im Singular als collectiv, bald im Plural gebraucht. So sagt man: to make sail, segeln, schiffen (nach); to set sail, unter Segel gehen, to strike sail, die Segel streichen. Auch: we saw three sail, (statt vessels). 2) Warum das Schiff im Englischen gern weiblich gebraucht wird, darüber giebt der Verfasser später selbst einen sehr sinnreichen Aufschluß.

The captain stood before the wheel³⁾, watching the men who were steering the ship; for when you are running before a heavy gale, it requires great attention to the helm: and as he looked around him and up at the heavens, he sung in a low voice the words of a sea song: —

„One wide water all around us,
All above us one black sky.“

And so it was with them; — they were in the middle of the Atlantic, not another vessel to be seen, and the heavens were covered with black clouds, which were borne along furiously by the gale; the sea ran mountains high, and broke into large white foaming crests, while the fierce wind howled through the rigging of the vessel.

Besides the captain of the ship and the two men at the wheel, there were two other personages on deck: one was a young lad about twelve years old, and the other a weatherbeaten old seaman, whose grisly locks were streaming in the wind, as he paced aft and looked over the taffrail of the vessel.

The young lad, observing a heavy sea coming up on the stern of the vessel, caught hold of the old man's arm, crying out — „Won't that great wave come into us, Ready?“

„No, Master William, it will not: don't you see how the ship lifts her quarters⁴⁾ to it? — and now it has passed underneath us. But it might happen, and then what would become of you, if I did not hold on, and hold you on also? You would be washed overboard.“

„I don't like the sea much, Ready; I wish we

3) The wheel, das Rad, nämlich the wheel of the helm, das Steuerrad. Das Steuerruder (wovon der Griff the helm genannt wird) wird nämlich durch ein Rad in Bewegung gesetzt, das auf manchen Schiffen eine perpendiculare, auf andern eine horizontale Stellung hat. 4) Quarters, deutsch: die Windvierung, d. h. der Theil der äußeren Seite eines Schiffes, in der Höhe der großen Ruften, und von diesen an gerechnet bis zum Spiegel.

were safe on shore again," replied the lad. „Don't the waves look as if they wished to beat the ship all to pieces?"

„Yes, they do; and they roar as if angry because they cannot bury the vessel beneath them: but I am used to them, Master Willy, and with a good ship like this, and a good captain and crew, I don't care for them."

„But sometimes ships do sink, and then every body is drowned."

„Yes, Master William; and very often the very ships sink which those on board⁵⁾ think are most safe. We can only do our best, and after that we must submit to the will of Heaven."

„What little birds are those flying about so close to the water?"

„Those are Mother Carey's chickens, Master William, as we sailors call them. You seldom see them except in a storm, or when a storm is coming on."

The birds which William referred to were the stormy petrels.

„Were you ever shipwrecked on a desolate island, like Robinson Crusoe?"

„Yes, Master William, I have been shipwrecked; but I never heard of Robinson Crusoe. So many have been wrecked and undergone great hardships, and so many more have never lived to tell what they have suffered, that it's not very likely that I should have known that one man you speak of, out of so many."

„Oh! but it's all in a book which I have read. I could tell you all about it — and so I will when the ship is quiet again; but now I wish you would help me down below, for I promised mamma not to stay up long."

„Then always keep your promises like a good lad," replied the old man; „now give me your hand, and I'll answer for it that we will fetch the hatchway⁶⁾ without

5) on board für who are on board. 6) Unter hatchway versteht man den Eingang vom obern Deck in die unteren Räume, Weg durch die Lufen.

a tumble; and when the weather is fine again, I'll tell you how I was wrecked, and you shall tell me all about Robinson Crusoe."

Having seen Master William safe to the cabin door, the old seaman returned to the deck, for it was his watch.

Masterman Ready, for such was his name, had been more than fifty years at sea, having been bound apprentice⁷⁾ to a collier which sailed from South Shields, when he was only ten years old. His face was browned from long exposure, and there were deep furrows on his cheeks; but he was still a hale and active man. He had served many years on board of a man-of-war, and had been in every climate: he had many strange stories to tell, and he might be believed even when his stories were strange, for he would not tell an untruth. He could navigate a vessel, and, of course⁸⁾, he could read and write; he had read his Bible over and over again. The name of Ready was very well suited to him, for he was seldom at a loss⁹⁾; and in cases of difficulty and danger, the captain would not hesitate to ask his opinion, and frequently take his advice. He was on board as second mate¹⁰⁾ of the vessel.

The Pacific was, as we have before observed, a very fine ship, and well able to contend with the most violent storm. She was of more than four hundred tons¹¹⁾ burthen, and was then making a passage out to New South Wales, with a valuable cargo of English hardware, cutlery, and other manufactures. The captain was a good navigator and seaman, and moreover a good man, of a cheerful, happy disposition, always making the best of every thing¹²⁾, and when accidents did happen, always more inclined to laugh than to look grave. His name was Osborn. The first mate, whose name was

7) to bind one apprentice, Einen in die Lehre bringen. 8) of course, natürlich, es versteht sich. 9) to be at a loss, in Verlegenheit sein. 10) second mate, der zweite Steuermann. 11) tons auch tuns geschrieben, von 2000 Pfund oder 42 Kubikfuß. 12) to make the best of a thing, aus einer Sache den bestmöglichen Vortheil ziehen.

Mackintosh, was a Scotchman, rough and ill-tempered, but paying strict attention to his duty — a man that Captain Osborn could trust, but whom he did not like.

Ready we have already spoken of, and it will not be necessary to say any thing about the seamen on board, except that there were thirteen of them, hardly a sufficient number to man so large a vessel; but just as they were about to sail, five of the seamen, who did not like the treatment they had received from Mackintosh, the first mate, had left the ship, and Captain Osborn did not choose¹³⁾ to wait until he could obtain others in their stead. This proved infortunate, as the events which we shall hereafter relate will show.

CHAPTER II.

Master William, whom we have introduced to the reader, was the eldest boy of a family who were passengers on board, consisting of the father, mother, and four children: his father was a Mr. Seagrave, a very well-informed clever man, who having for many years held an office under government at Sidney, the principal town in New South Wales, was now returning from a leave of absence of three years. He had purchased from the government several thousand acres of land; it had since risen very much in value, and the sheep¹⁴⁾ and cattle which he had put on it were proving a source of great profit. His property had been well managed by the person who had charge of it during his absence in England, and he was now taking out with him a variety of articles of every description for its improvement, and for his own use, such as furniture for his house, implements of agriculture, seeds, plants, cattle, and many other things too numerous to mention.¹⁵⁾

13) I don't choose to wait, es beliebt mir nicht zu warten.

14) Sheep wird, wie cattle, collectiv gebraucht. 15) to mention für to be mentioned.

Mrs. Seagrave was an amiable woman, but not in very strong health. The family consisted of William, who was the eldest, a clever steady boy, but, at the same time, full of mirth and humour; Thomas, who was six years old, a very thoughtless but goodtempered boy, full of mischief, and always in a scrape¹⁶⁾; Caroline, a little girl of seven years; and Albert, a fine strong little fellow, who was not one year old: he was under the charge of a black girl who had come from the Cape of Good Hope to Sidney, and had followed Mrs. Seagrave to England. We have now mentioned all the people on board of the Pacific: perhaps we ought not to forget two shepherd's dogs, belonging to Mr. Seagrave, and a little terrier, which was a great favourite of Captain Osborn, to whom she¹⁷⁾ belonged. And now we will proceed: — It was not until the fourth day from its commencement that the gale abated, and then it gradually subsided until it was nearly a calm. The men who had been watching night after night during the gale, now brought all their clothes which had been drenched by the rain and spray, and hung them up in the rigging to dry: the sails also which had been furled, and had been saturated by the wet, were now loosened and spread out that they might not be mildewed. The wind blew mild and soft, the sea had gone down¹⁸⁾, and the ship was running through the water at the speed of about four miles an hour. Mrs. Seagrave, wrapped up in a cloak, was seated upon one of the armchairs near the stern of the ship, her husband and children were all with her enjoying the fine weather, when Captain Osborn, who had been taking an observation of the sun with his sextant, came up to them.

„Well, Master Tommy, you are very glad that the gale is over?“

16) full of mischief, voll Schadenfreude. — To be always in a scrape, immer in Verlegenheit (vulgo in die Patsche) kommen.
 17) Im Allgemeinen werden zwar die Thiere neutral benannt, doch bedient man sich, anstatt des it, des he oder she, wenn man die Absicht hat, das männliche Geschlecht vom weiblichen zu unterscheiden. (S. Note 129.) 18) had gone down, hatte sich beruhigt.

„I didn't care,“ replied Tommy, „only I spilt all my soup. But Juno tumbled off her chair, and rolled away with the baby, till papa, picked them both up.“

„It was a mercy that poor Albert was not killed,“ observed Mrs. Seagrave.

„And so he might have been, if Juno had not thought only of him and nothing at all about herself,“ replied Mr. Seagrave.

„That's very true, sir,“ replied Captain Osborn. „She saved the child, and I fear, hurt herself.“

„I thump¹⁹⁾ my head very hard,“ said Juno, smiling.

„Yes, and it's lucky that you have a good thick woolly coat over it,“ replied Captain Osborn, laughing.

„Never mind, Juno, you are a good girl.“

„It is 12 o'clock by the sun, sir,“ said Mackintosh, the first mate, to the captain.

„Then bring me up the latitude, Mr. Mackintosh, while I work out the longitude²⁰⁾ from the sights which I took this morning. In five minutes, Mr. Seagrave, I shall be ready to prick off over our place on the chart.“

„Here are the dogs come up on deck,“ said William; „I dare say they are as glad of the fine weather as we are. Come here, Romulus! Here, Remus, — Remus!“

„I should like to go down now, my dear,“ said Mrs. Seagrave; „perhaps Ready will see the baby down safe.“

„That I will, Ma'am,“ said Ready, „putting his quadrant on the capstern: „now, Juno, give me the child, and go down first; — stern foremost²¹⁾, you stupid girl! how often do I tell you that? Some day or another you will come down with a run²²⁾.“

„And break my head,“ said Juno.

„Yes, or break your arm; and then who is to hold the child?“

19) I thump für I thumped, in der incorrecten Sprache einer Negerin. 20) Dies bezieht sich auf die, mittels astronomischer Instrumente zu findenden Breite- und Längengrade. 21) Stern foremost, hier so viel als: zurückgebohen. 22) with a run, im Schuß.

As soon as they were all down in the cabin, the captain and Mr. Seagrave marked the position of the vessel on the chart, and found that they were one hundred and thirty miles from the Cape of Good Hope.

„If the wind holds, we shall be in to-morrow,“ said Mr. Seagrave to his wife. „Juno, perhaps you may see your father and mother.“

Poor Juno shook her head, and a tear or two stole down her dark cheek. With a mournful face she told them that her father and mother belonged to a Dutch boor, who had gone with them many miles into the interior: she had been parted from them when quite a little child, and had been left at Cape Town.

„But you are free now, Juno,“ said Mrs. Seagrave; „you have been to England, and whoever puts his foot on shore in England, becomes from that moment free.“

„Yes, Missy, I free²³); but still I have no fader or moder,“ replied Juno, weeping. But little Albert patted her cheek, and she was soon smiling again, and playing with the little boy.

CHAPTER III.

The next morning the Pacific arrived at the Cape and anchored in Table Bay.

„Why do they call this Table Bay, Ready?“ said William.

„I suppose it's because they call that great mountain the Table Mountain, Master William; you see how flat the mountain is on the top.“

„Yes, it is quite as flat as a table.“

„Yes, and sometimes you will see the white clouds rolling down over the top of it in a very curious manner, and that the sailors call spreading the tablecloth; it is a sign of bad weather.“

23) I free für I am free.

„Then I hope they will not spread the tablecloth while we are here, Ready;“ said William, „for I shall certainly have no appetite. We have had bad weather enough already, and mamma suffers so much from it. What a pretty place it is!“

„We shall remain here two days, sir,“ said Captain Osborn to Mr. Seagrave, „if you and Mrs. Seagrave would like to go on shore.“

„I will go down and ask Mrs. Seagrave,“ said her husband, who went down the ladder, followed by William.

„Upon the question being put to Mrs. Seagrave, she replied that she was quite satisfied with the ship having no motion, and did not feel herself equal²⁴⁾ to going on shore; it was therefore decided that she should remain on board with the two younger children, and that, on the following day, Mr. Seagrave should take William and Tommy to see Cape Town, and return on board before night.

The next morning, Captain Osborn lowered down one of the large boats, and Mr. Seagrave, accompanied by Captain Osborn, went on shore with William and Tommy. Tommy had promised his mamma to be very good; but that he always did, and almost always forgot his promise directly²⁵⁾ he was out of sight. As soon as they landed, they went up to a gentleman's house, with whom Captain Osborn was acquainted. They staid for a few minutes to drink a glass of lemonade, for it was very warm; and then it was proposed that they should go to the Company's Gardens and see the wild beasts which were confined there, at which William was much delighted, and Tommy clapped his hands with joy.

„What are the Company's Gardens, papa?“ inquired William.

„They were made by the Dutch East India Company, at the time that the Cape of Good Hope was in their possession. They are, properly speaking, Botanical

24) I feel myself not equal to a thing, ich fühle mich nicht geeignet, gestimmt, aufgelegt zu Etwas. 25) Hier muß der Deutsche when ausgelassen denken.

Gardens; but, at the same time, the wild animals are kept there. Formerly there were a great many, but they have not been paid attention to²⁶⁾ lately, for we have plenty of these animals in England now."

"What shall we see?" said Tommy.

"You will see lions, Tommy, a great many in a large den together," said Captain Osborn.

"Oh! I want to see a lion."

"You must not go too near them, recollect."

"No, I won't," said Tommy.

As soon as they entered the gates, Tommy escaped from Captain Osborn, and ran away in his hurry to see the lions; but Captain Osborn caught him again, and held him fast by the hand.

"Here is a pair of very strange birds," said the gentleman who accompanied them; "they are called Secretaries, on account of the feathers which hang behind their heads, as the feather of a pen does when a clerk puts it behind his ear: but they are very useful, for they are snake-killers; indeed, they would, if they could, live altogether upon snakes, which they are very great enemies to, never letting one escape. They strike them with their feet, and with such force as to kill them immediately."

"Are there many snakes in this country?" inquired William.

"Yes, and very venomous snakes," replied Mr. Seagrave, "so that these birds are very useful in destroying them."

They continued their walk until they came to the den of the lions. It was a large place, inclosed with a strong and high wall of stone, with only one window to it for the visitors to look at them, as it was open above. This window was wide, and with strong iron bars running from the top to the bottom; but the width between the bars was such that a lion could put his paw out with ease; and they were therefore cautioned not to go too near. It was a fine sight to see eight or ten of these noble-looking animals lying down in various attitudes, quite indifferent apparently to the people outside, basking in the sun, and slowly moving their tufted tails to and fro. William examined them at a respectful distance from the bars; and so did Tommy, who had his mouth open with astonishment, in which there was at first not a little fear mixed, but he soon got bolder. The gentleman who had accompanied them, and who had been long at the Cape, was relating to Mr. Seagrave and Captain Osborn some very curious anecdotes about the lion. William and they were so interested, that they did not perceive that Tommy had slipped back to the grated window of their den. Tommy looked at the lions, and then he wanted to make them move about: there was one fine full-grown young lion, about three years old, who was lying down nearest to the window; and Tommy took up a stone and threw it at him: the lion appeared not to notice it, for he did not move, although he fixed his eyes upon Tommy; so Tommy became more brave, and threw another, and then another, approaching each time nearer to the bars of the window.

26) they-to, man hat ihnen keine Aufmerksamkeit geschenkt.

All of a sudden the lion gave a tremendous roar, and sprang at Tommy, bounding against the iron bars of the cage with such force that, had they not been very strong, it must have broken them. As it was, they shook and rattled so that pieces of mortar fell from the stones. Tommy shrieked; and, fortunately for himself, fell back and tumbled head over heels²⁷⁾, or the lion's paws would have reached him. Captain Osborn and Mr. Seagrave ran up to Tommy, and picked him up: he roared with fright as soon as he could fetch his breath, while the lion stood at the bars, lashing his tail, snarling and showing his enormous fangs.

„Take me away — take me on board the ship,” cried Tommy, who was terribly frightened.

27) Richtiger wäre wohl heels over head.

„What did you do, Tommy?“ said Captain Osborn.

„I won't²⁸⁾ throw any more stones, Mr. Lion; I won't indeed,“ cried Tommy, looking terrified towards the animal.

Mr. Seagrave scolded Tommy well for his foolish conduct, and by degrees he became more composed; but he did not recover himself until they had walked some distance away from the lion's den.

They then looked at the other animals which were to be seen; Tommy keeping a most respectful distance from every one of them. He wouldn't even go near to a Cape sheep with a broad tail.

When they had seen every thing, they went back to the gentleman's house to dinner; and, after dinner, they returned on board, when Tommy's adventure with the lion was told to his mother, who declared that she never should be able to trust him out of her sight.

CHAPTER IV.

The following morning the fresh water and provisions were received on board, and once more the Pacific stretched her broad canvas to the winds, and there was every prospect of a rapid voyage, as for many days she continued her passage with a fair wind and flowing sheet. But this did not continue: it fell calm²⁹⁾, and remained so for nearly three days, during which not a breath of wind was to be seen on the wide expanse of water; all nature appeared as if in repose, except that now and then an albatross would drop down at some distance from the stern of the vessel, and, as he swam lazily along with his wings half furled, pick up the fragments of food which had been thrown over the side.

28) won't, sehr häufig im gemeinen Leben für I will not.
 29) It fell calm, the ship was becalmed, das Schiff wurde von einer Windstille überfallen.

„What great bird is that, Ready?“ inquired William.

„It is an albatross, Master William, the largest sea-bird we have. Their wings are very long. I have seen them shot, and they have measured eleven feet from the tip of one wing to the tip of the other when the wings have been spread out.“

„It is the first one that I have seen,“ said William.

„Because you seldom meet them north of the Cape, sir: people say that they go to sleep on the wing, balancing themselves high up in the air.“

On the third day of the calm, the barometer fell so low as to induce Captain Osborn to believe that they should have a severe gale, and every preparation was made to meet it, should it come on. Nor was he mistaken³⁰): towards midnight the clouds gathered up fast, and as they gathered up in thick piles, heaped one over the other, the lightning darted through them in every direction; and as the clouds rose up, so did the wind, but at first only in heavy gusts, and then lulling again to a calm.

„Ready,“ said Captain Osborn, „how do you think we shall have the wind?“

„Why, Captain Osborn, to tell you the truth, I don't think it will be steady to one point long. It may at first blow hard from the north, but it's my idea it will shift soon to some other quarter, and blow still harder.“

„What think you, Mackintosh?“

„We'll have plenty of it, and a long steady gale, that's my notion; and the sooner we ship³¹) the dead lights the better.“

Mr. Seagrave, with William, happened to be standing by at the time of this conversation, and at the term dead lights Willy's face expressed some anxiety. Ready perceived it, and said —

30) I am mistaken, ich irre mich. 31) To ship wird in der Seesprache oft für einsetzen, befestigen gebraucht. So sagt man auch to ship the vans, the swivel-guns, the tiller &c.

„That's a foolish name they give to the shutters which go over the cabin-windows to prevent the water from breaking into the cabin when a vessel sails before the wind; you know we had them on the last time that we had a gale, so don't you go down to frighten your mother by telling her that the dead lights are shipped.“

„I was not afraid, Ready, but I was thinking of my mother, I acknowledge; she has been so very weak these last two days.“

„But Ready,“ said Captain Osborn, „why do you think that we shall have a shift of wind?“

„Well, I don't know; perhaps I was wrong,“ replied the old man, „and Mr. Mackintosh is right; the wind does seem to come steady from the north-east, that's certain;“ and Ready walked away to the binacle, and looked at the compass. Mr. Seagrave and William then went below, and Mr. Mackintosh went forward to give his orders. As soon as they were all gone, Ready went up again to Captain Osborn, and said —

„Captain Osborn, it's not for me³²⁾ to contradict Mr. Mackintosh, but that's of little consequence in a time like this: I should have held to my opinion, had it not been that the gentleman passenger and his son were standing by, but now, as the coast is clear, I tell you that we shall have something worse than a gale of wind. I have been in these latitudes before, and I am an old seaman as you know. There's something in the air, and there has been something during the last three days of calm, which reminds me too well of what I have seen here before; and I am sure that we shall have little better than a hurricane, as far as wind goes — and worse in one point, that it will last much longer than hurricanes generally do. I have been watching, and even the birds tell me so, and they are told by their nature, which is never mistaken. That calm has been nothing more than a repose of the winds previous to their being roused up to do their worst; and that is my real opinion.“

32) It is not for me, es geziemt sich nicht für mich.

„Well, and I'm inclined to agree with you, Ready, so we must send top-gallant yards³³⁾ down on deck, and all the small sails and lumber out of the tops, Get the try-sail aft and bent, and lower down the gaff. I will go forward.“

They had no time to lose; their preparations were hardly complete before the wind had settled to a fierce gale from the north-east. The sea rose rapidly, topsail after topsail was furled; and by dusk the Pacific was flying through the water with the wind on her quarter, under reefed foresail and storm staysail³⁴⁾. It was with difficulty that three men at the wheel could keep the helm, such were the blows which the vessel received from the heavy seas on the quarter. Not one seaman in the ship took advantage of his watch below to go to sleep that night, careless as they generally are; the storm was too dreadful. About three o'clock in the morning the wind suddenly subsided; it was but for a minute or two, and then it again burst on the vessel from another quarter of the compass, as Ready

33) Da in diesem Buche so Vieles von Segeln und Segelstangen (yards) vorkommt, so wird eine kurze Classification nicht unwillkommen sein. Im Allgemeinen kann man die Segel eintheilen 1) nach der Art ihrer Befestigung, nämlich in Raasegel, yard-sails, und Stagssegel, stay-sails. Die ersteren hängen an den Raaken, d. h. Querstangen, die letzteren sind an den Stagen, d. h. starken Tauen befestigt. Dann unterscheidet man sie 2) nach dem Orte, wo sie angebracht werden. Die an den Masten befestigten führen den Namen der Masten, nämlich: main-sail, am main-mast, Mittel- oder Hauptmast — fore-sail, am fore-mast, Fockmast — mizzen-sail, am mizzen oder mizzen-mast, der Besanmast (zunächst dem Steuerruder). Außerdem ganz vorn die sprit-sails, und the jib, Klüver; ganz hinten the driver, Brodwiner, und mancherlei kleinere, wie Flügel allerwärts, wenn nöthig, angebrachte Segel, Lee-segel, studding-sails. Endlich setzt man noch, je nachdem sie dem Schiffsdeck näher oder ferner in die Höhe stehen top, top-gallant und top-gallant-royal zu, z. B. main-sail, main-top-sail, main-top-gallant, main-top-gallant-royal, die aber im Deutschen leider die mannichfaltigsten Namen haben. 34) Storm bedeutet hier so viel als die bei einem Sturme einzusetzenden (Stag-Segel).

had foretold, splitting the foresail into fragments, which lashed and flogged the wind till they were torn away by it, and carried far to leeward.³⁵⁾ The heavens above were of a pitchy darkness, and the only light was from the creaming foam of the sea on every side. The shift of wind, which had been to the west-north-west, compelled them to alter the course of the vessel, for they had no chance but to scud, as they now did, under bare poles³⁶⁾; but in consequence of the sea having taken its run from the former wind, which had been north-east, it was, as sailors call it, cross, and every minute the waves poured over the ship, sweeping all before their weight of waters. One poor man was washed overboard, and any attempt made to save him would have been unavailing. Captain Osborn was standing by the weather gunnel³⁷⁾, holding one by one of the belaying pins³⁸⁾, when he said to Mackintosh, who was near him:

„How long will this last, think you?“

„Longer than the ship will,“ replied the mate, gravely.

„I should hope not,“ replied the captain; „still it cannot look worse. What do you think, Ready?“

„Far more fear from above than from below just now,“ replied Ready, pointing to the yard-arms of the ship, to each of which were little balls of electric matter attached, flaring out to a point. „Look at those two clouds, sir, rushing at each other; if I — —.“

Ready had not time to finish what he would have said, before a blaze of light, so dazzling that it left them all in utter darkness for some seconds afterwards, burst upon their vision, accompanied with a peal of thunder at which the whole vessel trembled fore and aft. A crash — a rushing forward — and a shriek were heard, and when they had recovered their eyesight, the foremast had been rent by the lightning as if it had been a lath, and the ship was in flames: the men at the wheel, blinded by the lightning, as well as appalled, could not steer; the ship broached to³⁹⁾ — away went the mainmast over the side — and all was wreck, confusion, and dismay.

35) leeward ist das Gegentheil von windward; ersteres mit, letzteres gegen den Wind. 36) Under bare poles, alle Segel eingezogen. 37) Mit weather als Adjectiv bezeichnet man die dem Winde ausgesetzte Seite. Gunnel für gun-wale, das aber stets wie gunnel ausgesprochen wird (der Dahlbord). 38) Belaying pins, die Zapfen, an denen das laufende Tauwerk befestigt wird.

Fortunately the heavy seas which poured over the forecastle soon extinguished the flames, or they all must have perished; but the ship lay now helpless, and at the mercy of the waves beating violently against the wrecks of the masts which floated too leeward, but were still held fast to the vessel by their rigging. As soon as they could recover from the shock, Ready and the first mate hastened to the wheel to try to get the ship before the wind; but this they could not do, as, the foremast and mainmast being gone, the mizzenmast prevented her paying off and answering to the helm.⁴⁰⁾ Ready, having persuaded two of the men to take the helm, made a sign to Mackintosh (for now the wind was so loud that they could not hear each other speak), and, going aft, they obtained axes, and cut away the mizzen-rigging; the mizen-topmast and head of the mizenmast went over the side, and then the stump of the foremast was sufficient to get the ship before the wind again. Still there was much delay and much confusion, before they could clear away the wreck of the masts; and, as soon as they could make enquiry, they found that four of the men had been killed by the lightning and the fall of the foremast, and there were now but eight remaining, besides Captain Osborn and his two mates.

39) To broach to, nach des Seemanns Sprache: eine Gule fangen, d. h. auf den Wind laufen. 40) Answering to the helm, d. h. das Schiff führte die Bewegungen nicht aus, die mit dem Steuerruder bewirkt werden sollten.

CHAPTER V.

Sailors are never discouraged by danger as long as they have any chance of relieving themselves by their own exertions. The loss of their shipmates, so instantaneously summoned away, — the wrecked state of the vessel, — the wild surges burying them beneath their angry waters, — the howling of the wind — the dazzling of the lightning, and the pealing of the thunder, did not prevent them from doing what their necessity demanded. Mackintosh, the first mate, rallied the men, and contrived himself to fix a block and strap to the still smoking stump of the foremast; a rope was roved through the block, and the main-top-gallant sail hoisted, so that the vessel might run faster before the gale, and answer her helm better than she did.

The ship was again before the wind, and comparatively safe, notwithstanding the heavy blows she now received from the pursuing waves. Night again came on, but there was no repose, and the men were worn out with exposure and fatigue. Captain Osborn and Ready had often gone down to afford some assistance and comfort to the passengers in the cabin. Mrs. Seagrave, worn out with fear and anxiety, had become seriously unwell; and her husband watched her; the children were persuaded to remain in their beds, and the infant never left the arms of the patient and unwearied Juno.

The third day of the gale dawned, but the appearances were as alarming as ever: the continual breaking of the seas over the stern had washed away the binacles, and it was impossible now to be certain of the course the ship had been steered, or the distance which had been run; the leaky state of the vessel proved how much she had already suffered from the violent shocks which she had received, and the certainty was apparent, that if the weather did not abate, she could not possibly withstand the force of the waves much longer.

The countenance of Captain Osborn showed great anxiety: he had a heavy responsibility on his shoulders — he might lose a valuable ship, and still more valuable cargo, even if they did not all lose their lives; for they were now approaching where the sea was studded with low coral islands, upon which they might be thrown by the waves and wind, without having the slightest power to prevent it in their present disabled condition.

Ready was standing by him when Captain Osborn said —

„I don't much like this, Ready; we are now running on danger, and have no help for it.“

„That's true enough,“ replied Ready: we have no help for it; it is God's will, sir, and His will be done.“

„Amen,“ replied Captain Osborn solemnly; and then he continued, after a pause, „There were many captains who envied me when I obtained command of this fine ship, — would they change with me now?“

„I should rather think not, Captain Osborn, but you never know what the day may bring forth. You sailed with this vessel, full of hope — you now, not without reason, feel something approaching to despair; but who knows? it may please the Almighty to rebuke those angry winds and waves, and to-morrow we may again hope for the best; at all events you have done your duty — no man can do more. I do wish that Mr. Mackintosh would not swear so; I always think that the winds blow harder, as if angry that their Divine Master should be defied by such poor worms as we are.“

„You are right,“ replied Captain Osborn; „but hold hard, Ready, that sea's aboard of us.“

Ready had just time to cling with both hands to the belaying pins when the sea poured over the vessel, with a volume of water which for some time swept them off their legs; they clung on firmly, and at last recovered their feet.

„She started a timber or two with that blow, I rather think,“ said Ready, as he took off his hat to shake the water from it.

„I'm afraid so; the best vessel ever built could not stand such shocks long,“ replied Captain Osborn; „and at present, with our weak crew, I do not see that we can get more sail upon her.“

All that night the ship flew in darkness before the gale. At daybreak the wind abated, and the sea went down: the ship was, however, still kept before the wind, for she had suffered too much to venture to put her broadside to the sea. Preparations were now made for getting up jury-masts⁴¹⁾; and the worn-out seamen were busily employed, under the direction of Captain Osborn and his two mates, when Mr. Seagrave and William came upon deck.

William stared about him: he perceived, to his astonishment, that the tall masts, with all their rigging and sails, had disappeared, and that the whole deck was in a state of confusion and disorder.

„See, my child,“ said Mr. Seagrave, the wreck and devastation which are here. See how the pride of man is humbled before the elements of the great Jehovah.“

„Ay, Master Willy,“ said old Ready, „look around you, as you well may. Do you remember the verses in the Bible? — if not, I remember them well, for I have often read them, and have often felt the truth of them: „They that go down into the sea in ships, that do business in great waters, these see the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the deep.“

„But, father,“ said Willy, after a pause, „how shall we ever get to Sydney without masts or sails?“

„Why, Master William,“ replied Ready, „we

41) Unter jury-masts versteht man die Nothmaste, die, wenn die eigentlichen Maste zerschmettert worden, errichtet werden.

must do what we can: we sailors are never much at a loss, and I dare say before night you will find us under some sort of sail again. We have lost our great masts, so we must put up jury-masts, as we call them, that is, little ones, and little sails upon them; and, if it pleases God, we shall see Sydney yet. How is Madam, sir?" continued Ready to Mr. Seagrave; „is she better?"

„I fear she is very weak and ill," replied Mr. Seagrave; „nothing but fine weather will do her any good. Do you think that it will be fine now?"

„Why, sir, to tell you the truth, I fear we shall have more of it yet: I have not given my thoughts to the captain, as I might be mistaken; but still I think so — I've not been fifty years at sea without learning something. I don't like the gathering of that bank there⁴²⁾, Mr. Seagrave, and I shouldn't wonder if it were to blow again from the very same quarter, and that before dark."

„God's will be done," replied Mr. Seagrave, „but I am very fearful about my poor wife, who is completely worn to a shadow⁴³⁾."

„I shouldn't think so much about that, sir, as I really never knew of people dying that way, although they suffer much. Master William, do you know that we have lost some of our men since you were down below?"

„No — I heard the steward say something outside about the foremast; but I did not like to ask, as mamma was so frightened."

„You were a kind boy for that, Master William; but hear me, — we have lost five of our smartest and best men — Wilson was washed overboard — Fennings and Masters struck dead with the lightning — and Jones and Emery crushed by the fall of the foremast."

42) The gathering of that bank, daß sich Zusammenziehen dieses Wolkendamms. 43) worn to a shadow, zum Schatten abgemagert.

Master William, did any of these men imagine, when they left the Cape, or indeed the day or the hour before it happened, that their souls were to be required of them, and their bodies should be now floating hundreds of miles from the land? You are young, Master Willy, but you cannot think too early of your Maker, or call to mind what they say in the burial service, — „In the midst of life we are in death.“

„Thank you, Ready, thank you for the lesson you have given my son,“ said Mr. Seagrave; and, William, treasure it up in your memory.“

„Yes, Master William, they are the words of an old man who has seen many and many a one who was full of youth and spirits called away before him, and who is grateful to God that he has been pleased to preserve his life, and allow him to amend his ways⁴⁴⁾. We must seek the Lord in our youth, and then we shall be prepared when he thinks fit to summon us away.“

„I have been thinking,“ said Mr. Seagrave, after a silence of a minute or two, „that a sailor has no right to marry.“

„I’ve always thought so, sir,“ replied Ready; „and I dare say many a poor deserted sailor’s wife, when she has listened to the wind and rain in her lonely bed, has thought the same.“

„With my permission,“ continued Mr. Seagrave, „my boys shall never go to sea if there is any other profession to be found for them.“

„Well, Mr. Seagrave, they do say that it’s no use⁴⁵⁾ baulking a lad if he wishes to go to sea, and that if he is determined, he must go: now I think otherwise — I think a parent has a right to say no, if he pleases, upon that point; for you see, sir, a lad, at the early age at which he goes to sea, does not know his own mind⁴⁶⁾. Every high-spirited boy wishes to go to sea

44) To amend his ways, seinen Lebenswandel zu bessern.
 45) It is no use, es ist vergebens. 46) does — mind, weiß selbst nicht, was er will.

— it's quite natural; but if the most of them were to speak the truth, it is not that they so much want to go to sea, as that they want to go from school or from home, where they are under the control of their masters or their parents.“

„Very true, Ready; they wish to be, as they consider they will be, independent.“

„And a pretty mistake they make of it, sir. Why, there is not a greater slave in the world than a boy who goes to sea, for the first few years after his shipping: for once they are corrected on shore, they are punished ten times at sea, and they never again meet with the love and affection they have left behind them. It is a hard life, and there have been but few who have not bitterly repented it, and who would not have returned, like the prodigal son⁴⁷⁾, and cast themselves at their father's feet, only that they have been ashamed⁴⁸⁾.“

„That's the truth, Ready, and it is on that account that I consider that a parent is justified in refusing his consent to his son going to sea, if he can properly provide for him in any other profession. There never will be any want of sailors, for there always will be plenty of poor lads whose friends can do no better for them; and in that case the seafaring life is a good one to choose, as it requires no other capital for their advancement than activity and courage.“

„Exactly what I thought myself, sir,“ replied Ready. „May I ask how Master Tommy and the other children are, and poor Juno?“

„They are all quite well, although they have been a little bruised with sliding about,“ replied Mr. Seagrave, „but I must stay here no longer, Mrs. Seagrave will want me in the cabin. William, will you stay on deck?“

„Better not, Master William, we are all too busy,

47) the prodigal son, der verlorene Sohn (in der Bibel).

48) only-ashamed, wenn sie sich nicht geschämt hätten.

and I cannot look after you now: there'll be no sleep this night for any of us, fair or foul⁴⁹⁾; we are weak-handed⁵⁰⁾ now. So good-night, gentlemen, both of you."

CHAPTER VI.

Mr. Seagrave and William went down below into the cabin, where they found that there was plenty of employment; the steward had brought a basin of very hot pea-soup for the children. Tommy, who was sitting up in the bed-place with his sister, had snatched it out of Juno's left hand, for she held the baby with the other, and in so doing had thrown it over Caroline, who was screaming; while Juno, in her hurry to assist Caroline, had slipped down on the deck with the baby, who was also crying with fright, although not hurt. Unfortunately, Juno had fallen down upon Vixen the terrier, who in return had bitten her in the leg, which had made Juno also cry out; while Mrs. Seagrave was hanging her head out of her standing bed-place, frightened out of her wits⁵¹⁾ at the accident, but unable to be of any assistance. Fortunately, Mr. Seagrave came down just in time to pick up Juno and the baby, and then tried to comfort little Caroline, who after all was not much scalded, as the soup had had time to cool.

„Massa Tommy is a very naughty boy," cried Juno, rubbing her leg. Master Tommy thought it better to say nothing — he was duly admonished — the steward cleaned up the mess, and order was at length restored.

In the meantime, they were not idle upon deck: the carpenter was busy fixing a step for one of the

49) fair or foul, das Wetter mag gut oder schlecht sein.
 50) weak-handed, schwach an Mannschaften. 51) to be frightened out of one's wits, vor Schreck fast den Verstand verloren haben.

spare topmasts instead of a mainmast, and the men were fitting the rigging; the ship unfortunately had sprung a leak⁵²⁾, and four hands at the pumps interfered⁵³⁾ very much with their task. As Ready had prophesied, before night the gale blew, the sea rose again with the gale, and the leaking of the vessel increased, so much, that all other labour was suspended for that at the pump. For two more days did the storm continue, during which time the crew were worn out with fatigue — they could pump no longer: the ship, as she rolled, proved that she had a great deal of water in her hold — when, melancholy as were their prospects already, a new disaster took place, which was attended with most serious results. Captain Osborn was on the forecastle giving some orders to the men, when the strap of the block which hoisted up the maintop-gallant yard on the stump of the foremast gave way⁵⁴⁾, the yard and sail came down on the deck, and struck him senseless. As long as Captain Osborn commanded them, the sailors had so high an opinion of his abilities as a seaman, and were so encouraged by his cheerful disposition, that they performed their work well and cheerfully; but now that he was, if not killed, at all events senseless and incapable of action, they no longer felt themselves under control. Mackintosh was too much disliked by the seamen to allow his words to have any weight with them. They were regardless of his injunctions or requests, and they now consulted among themselves.

„The gale is broke⁵⁵⁾, my men, and we shall have fine weather now,“ observed Ready, going up to the sailors on the forecastle. „The wind is going down fast.“

„Yes,“ replied one of the men, „and the ship is going down fast, that's quite as certain.“

52) to spring a leak, leck werden. 53) interfered — task, standen ihrer Aufgabe sehr im Wege. 54) to give way, nachgeben. 55) the gale is broke, der Sturm hat ausgetobt; so sagt man the weather breaks (up).

„A good spell⁵⁶⁾ at the pumps would do us some good now,“ replied Ready. „What d’ye say, my lads?“

„A glass of grog or two would do us more,“ replied the seaman. „What d’ye say, my boys? I don’t think that the captain would refuse us, poor fellow, if he could speak.“

„What do you mean to do, my lads?“ enquired Mackintosh; „not get drunk I hope?“

„Why not?“ observed another of the men; „the ship must go down soon.“

„Perhaps she may — I will not deny it,“ said Mackintosh; „but that is no reason why we should not be saved: now, if you get drunk, there is no chance of any one being saved, and my life is precious to me. I’m ready to join with you in any thing you please, and you may decide what is to be done; but get drunk you shall not, if I can help it, that’s certain.“

„And how can you help it?“ replied one of the seamen, surlily.

„Because two resolute men can do a great deal — I may say three, for in this instance Ready will be of my side, and I can call to my assistance the cabin passengers — recollect the fire-arms are all in the cabin. But why should we quarrel? — say at once what you intend to do; and if you have not made up your minds, will you listen to what I propose?“

As Mackintosh’s courage and determination were well known, the seamen again consulted together, and then asked him what he proposed.

„We have one good boat left, the new yawl on the booms: the others, as you know, are washed away, with the exception of the little boat astern, which is useless, as she is knocked almost to pieces. Now we cannot be very far from some of the islands, indeed I think we are among them now. Let us fit out the boat with every thing which we require, go about our work steadily and quietly, drink as much grog now as will not hurt us, and take a good provision of it with us. The boat is complete with her masts, sails, and oars; and it's very hard if we do not save ourselves somewhere. Ready, do I give good advice or not?"

56) a spell, in der Seemannssprache: eine freiwillige Arbeit.

„You give very good advice, Mackintosh — only what is to become of the cabin passengers, the women, and children? and are you going to leave poor Captain Osborn, who lays there abaft, breathless and insensible? or what do you mean to do?"

„We won't leave the captain," said one of the seamen.

„No — no!" exclaimed the others.

„And the passengers?"

„Very sorry⁵⁷⁾ for them," replied the former spokesman; „but we shall have enough to do to save our own lives, the boat is not overlarge."

„Well, my lads, I agree with you," said Mackintosh. „Charity begins at home. What do you say, then? — shall it be so?"

„Yes," replied the seamen, unanimously; and Ready knew that it was in vain to expostulate. They now set about preparing the boat, and providing for their wants. Biscuits, salt pork, two or three small casks of water, and a barrel of rum were collected at the gangway; Mackintosh brought up his quadrant and a compass, some muskets, powder and shot; the carpenter, with the assistance of another man, cut away the ship's bulwarks down to the gunnel, so as to enable them to launch the boat overboard, for they could not of course⁵⁸⁾ hoist her out now that the masts were gone. In an hour every thing was prepared. A long rope was made fast to the boat, which was brought to the gunnel ready for launching overboard, and then the ship's broadside was brought to the wind⁵⁹⁾. Ready had taken no part in their labour; he had once or twice sounded the well, to ascertain if the water gained upon the ship, and then sat down by the side of Captain Osborn, who still remained insensible from the blow which he had received on his head. As the ship was brought to the wind Mr. Seagrave came on deck and looked around him.

57) Man sagt oft very sorry, Sir, für I am (we are) very sorry. 58) of course, natürlich, wie sich versteht. 59) to bring a ship to the wind, ein Schiff gegen den Wind drehen (im Gegensatz von before).

He perceived the boat ready for launching, the provisions and water at the gangway, the ship brought to the wind, and rolling slowly to the heave of the sea; at last he saw Ready sitting down by Captain Osborn, who was apparently dead. „What is all this, Ready?“ enquired Seagrave. „Are they going to leave the ship? have they killed Captain Osborn?“

„No, sir — not quite so bad as that. Poor Captain Osborn was struck down by the fall of the yard, and has been insensible ever since: but, as to the other matter, I fear that is decided; you see they are launching the boat.“

„But my poor wife, she will never be able to go — she cannot move — she is so ill!“

„I'm afraid, Mr. Seagrave, that they have no idea of taking either you, or your wife, or your children, with them.“

„What! leave us here to perish? Merciful Heaven! how cruel — how barbarous!“

„It is not kind, Mr. Seagrave, but still you see it is the law of nature. When it is a question of life, it is every one for himself, for life is sweet: they are not more unkind than they would be to each other, if there were too many for the boat to hold. I've seen all this before in my time,“ replied Ready, gravely.

„My wife! my children!“ cried Mr. Seagrave, covering his face with his hands. „But I will speak to them,“ continued he after a pause; „surely they will listen to the dictates of humanity; at all events⁶⁰⁾“

60) at all events, auf alle Fälle.

Mr. Mackintosh will have some power over them. Don't you think so, Ready?"

„Well, Mr. Seagrave, if I must speak, I confess to you that there is not a harder heart among them than that of Mr. Mackintosh, and it's useless speaking to him or any one of them; and you must not be too severe upon them neither: the boat is small, and could not hold more people with the provisions which they take with them — that is the fact. If they were to take you and your family into the boat, it might be the cause of all perishing together; if I thought otherwise I would try what I could do to persuade them, but it is useless.“

„What must be done then, Ready?"

„We must put our trust in a merciful God, Mr. Seagrave, who will dispose of us as he thinks fit.“

„We must. What! do not you go with them?"

„No, Mr. Seagrave. I have been thinking about it this last hour, and I have made up my mind⁶¹⁾ to remain with you. They intend to take poor Captain Osborn with them, and give him a chance, and have offered to take me; but I shall stay here.“

„To perish?" replied Mr. Seagrave, with surprise.

„As God pleases, Mr. Seagrave. I am an old man, and it is of little consequence; and I hope that I am a prepared man as far as I have been able. I tell you, Mr. Seagrave, I think much more of your children than I do for myself. I care little whether I am taken away a year or two sooner, but I do not like to see blossoms cut off in early spring: I may be of use if I remain, for I've an old head upon my shoulders, and I could not leave you all to perish when you might be saved if you only knew how to act. But here the seamen come — the boat is all ready, and they will now take poor Captain Osborn with them.“

The sailors came aft, and lifted up the still insen-

61) to make up one's mind, einen Entschluß fassen.

sible captain. As they were going away, one of them said, „Come, Ready, there's no time to lose.“

„Never mind me⁶²), Williams; I shall stick to the ship,“ replied Ready. „I wish you success with all my heart: and Mr. Mackintosh, I have but one promise to exact from you, and I hope you will not refuse me; which is, that if you are saved, you will then not forget those you leave here on board, and take measures for their being searched for among the islands.“

„Nonsense, Ready! come into the boat,“ replied the first mate.

„I shall stay here, Mr. Mackintosh; and I only beg that you will promise me what I ask. Acquaint Mr. Seagrave's friends with what has happened, and where it is most likely we may be found, if it please God to save us: that is all that is necessary. Do you promise me that?“

„Yes I do, Ready, if you are determined to stay: but,“ continued he, going up to Ready, and whispering to him, „it is madness: — come away, man!“

„Good-bye, Mr. Mackintosh,“ replied Ready, extending his hand. „You will keep your promise?“

After much further expostulation on the part of Mackintosh and the seamen, to which Ready gave a deaf ear, the boat was pushed off, and they made sail to the north-east.

62) never mind me, um mich kümmernere dich gar nicht — to stick to a thing, an einer Sache fest halten, einer Sache treu bleiben.

CHAPTER VII.

For some time after the boat had shoved off from the ship, old Ready remained with his arms folded, watching it in silence. Mr. Seagrave stood by him; his heart was too full for utterance, for he imagined that as the boat increased her distance from the vessel, so did every ray of hope depart, and that his wife and children, himself, and the old man who was by his side, were doomed to perish. His countenance was that of a man in utter despair. At last old Ready spoke.

„They think that they will be saved and that we must perish, Mr. Seagrave; they forget that there is a Power above, who will himself decide that point — a power compared to which the efforts of weak man are as nought.“

„True,“ replied Mr. Seagrave, in a low voice; „but still what chance we can have on a sinking ship, with so many helpless creatures around us, I confess that I cannot imagine.“

„We must do our best, and submit to His will,“ replied Ready, who then went aft, and shifted the helm, so as to put the ship again before the wind.

As the old man had foretold to the seamen before they quitted the vessel, the gale was now over, and the sea had gone down considerably. The ship, however, dragged but slowly through the water, and after a short time Ready lashed the wheel, and went forward. On his return to the quarter-deck, he found Mr. Seagrave had thrown himself down (apparently in a state of despair) upon the sail on which Captain Osborn had been laid after his accident.

„If you are praying, Mr. Seagrave, I am sorry to interrupt you, but if you are not, but are overcome with your situation, perhaps I may be able to give you some little hope.“

„I have been praying,“ replied Mr. Seagrave, raising himself up, „and, since that, I have been trying to collect my thoughts, which I acknowledge to be very confused. The great pang will be to communicate to my wife our hopeless situation.“

„If I thought our situation hopeless,“ replied Ready, „I would candidly say so; but there always is hope, even at the very worst — and there always ought to be trust in that God without whose knowledge not a sparrow falls to the ground. But, Mr. Seagrave, I shall speak as a seaman, and tell you what our probabilities are. The ship is half-full of water, from her seams having opened by the straining in the gale, and the heavy blows which she received; but, now that the gale has abated, she has recovered herself very much. I have sounded the well, and find that she has not made many inches within the last two hours, and probably, as she closes her seams, will make less. If, therefore, it pleases God that the fine weather should continue, there is no fear of the vessel sinking under us for some little time; and as we are now amongst the islands, it is not impossible, nay it is very probable, that we may be able to run her ashore, and thus save our lives. I thought of all this when I refused to go in the boat, and I thought also, Mr. Seagrave, that if you were to have been deserted by me as well as by all the rest, you would have been unable yourself to take advantage of any chances which might turn up in your favour, and therefore I have remained, hoping, under God's providence, to be the means of assisting you and your family in this sore position. I think now it would be better that you should go down into the cabin, and with a cheerful face encourage poor Mrs. Seagrave with the change in the weather, and the hopes of arriving in some place of safety. If she does not know that the men have quitted the ship, do not tell her; say that the steward is with the other men, which will be true enough, and, if possible, leave her in the dark as to what has taken place; Master William can be trusted, and if you will send him here to me, I will talk to him. What do you think, Mr. Seagrave?"

„I hardly know what to think, Ready, or how sufficiently to thank you for your self-devotion, if I may so term it, in this exigency. That your advice is excellent, and that I shall follow it, you may be assured; and, should we be saved from the death which at present stares us in the face, my gratitude —“

„Do not speak of that, sir, I am an old man with few wants, and whose life is of little use now. All I wish to feel is, that I am trying to do my duty in that situation into which it has pleased God to call me. What can this world offer to one whom has roughed⁶³⁾ it all his life, and who has neither kith nor kin⁶⁴⁾ that he knows of to care about his death? Thank you kindly, Mr. Seagrave, nevertheless: now I think you had better⁶⁵⁾ go down, and I will look about me a little.“ Mr. Seagrave pressed the hand of Ready, and went down without making any reply. He found that his wife had been asleep for the last hour, and was not yet awake. The children were also quiet in their beds. Juno and William were the only two who were sitting up.

William made a sign to his father that his mother was asleep, and then said in a whisper, „I did not like to leave the cabin while you were on deck, but the steward has not been here these two hours: he went to milk the goat for baby and has not returned. We have had no breakfast, none of us.“

„William, go on deck,“ replied his father; „Ready wishes to speak to you — I will stay here.“

William went on deck to Ready, who soon explained to him the position in which they were placed;

63) The world has roughed me, etwa: die Welt hat mir hart mitgespielt. 64) neither kith nor kin, vulgo: weder Kind noch Regel. — That he knows of, so viel er weiß. 65) you had better, ihr thätet besser.

he pointed out to him the necessity of his doing all he could to assist his father and him, and not to alarm his mother in her precarious state of health. William, who, as it may be expected, looked very grave, did, however, immediately enter into Ready's views, and proceeded to do his best. „Now, Ready,“ said he, „you know the steward has left⁶⁶⁾ with the other men, and when my mother wakes she will ask why the children have had no breakfast. What can I do?“

„I don't know; but I think you can milk one of the goats if I show you how, while I go and get the other things ready; I can leave the deck, for you see the ship steers herself very nicely; — and, Master William, I have sounded the well just before you came up, and I don't think she makes much water; and,“ continued he, looking round him, and up above, „we shall have fine weather, and a smooth sea before night.“

By the united exertions of Ready and William the breakfast was prepared while Mrs. Seagrave still continued in a sound sleep. The motion of the ship was now very little: she only rolled very slowly from one side to the other, for she was heavy with the water which had leaked into her; the sea and wind had gone down, and the sun shone brightly over their heads; the boat had been out of sight some time⁶⁷⁾ and the ship did not go through the water faster than three miles an hour, for she had no other sail upon her than the maintop-gallant-sail hoisted up on the stump of the foremast. Ready, who had been some time down in the cabin, proposed to Mr. Seagrave that Juno and all the children should go on deck. „They cannot be expected to be quiet, sir; and, now that Madam is in such a sweet sleep, it would be a pity to wake her. After so much fatigue she may sleep for hours, and the longer the better, for you know that (in a short time, I trust,) she will have to exert herself." Mr. Seagrave agreed to the good sense of this proposal, and went on deck with Juno and the children, leaving William in the cabin to watch his mother. Poor Juno was very much astonished when she came up the ladder and perceived the condition of the vessel, and the absence of the men; but Mr. Seagrave told her what had happened, and cautioned her against saying a word to Mrs. Seagrave. Juno promised that she would not; but the poor girl perceived the danger of their position, and, as she pressed little Albert to her bosom, a tear or two rolled down her cheeks — she was not thinking of herself, but of what would become of her little charge. Even Tommy and Caroline could not help asking where the masts and sails were, and what had become of Captain Osborn.

66) To leave, hier: davongehen. Eigentlich has left the ship. 67) Had-time, war schon seit einiger Zeit nicht mehr sichtbar.

"Look there, sir," said Ready, pointing out some floating sea-weed to Mr. Seagrave.

"I perceive it," said Mr. Seagrave; "but what then?"

"That by itself would not be quite proof," replied Ready, "but we sailors have other signs and tokens. Do you see those birds hovering over the waves?"

"I do."

"Well, sir, those birds never go far from land, that's all: and now, I'll go down for my quadrant; for, although I cannot tell the longitude just now, at all events I can find out the latitude we are in, and then by looking at the chart shall be able to give some kind of guess where about we are, if we see land soon."

"It is nearly noon now," observed Ready, reading off his quadrant, "the sun rises very slowly. What a happy thing a child is! Look, sir, at those little creatures playing about and as merry now, and as unaware of danger, as if they were at home in their parlour. Although nothing pains me more when it does take place, I often think, sir, it is a great blessing for a child to be called away early, and that it is selfish in parents to repine.“

„Perhaps it is,“ replied Mr. Seagrave, looking mournfully at his children.

„It's twelve o'clock, sir. I'll just go down and work the latitude⁶⁸), and then I'll bring up the chart.“

Mr. Seagrave remained on deck. He was soon in deep and solemn thought; nor was it to be wondered at — the ship a wreck and deserted — left alone on the wide water with his wife and helpless family, with but one to assist him: had that one deserted him as well as the rest, what would have been his position then? utter helplessness! And now what had they to expect? Their greatest hopes were to gain some island, and, if they succeeded, perhaps a desert island, perhaps an island inhabited by savages — to be murdered, or to perish miserably of hunger and thirst. Or, allowing that they did find the means of subsistence, what then? Were they to remain there for their lives⁶⁹), and die unknown and unheeded? It was not until some time after these reflections had passed through his mind, that Mr. Seagrave could recall himself to a sense of thankfulness to the Almighty for having hitherto preserved them, or could say with humility, „O Lord! thy will, not mine, be done.“ But, having once succeeded in repressing his murmurs and his doubts of the goodness of Providence, he then felt that he had courage and faith to undergo every trial which might be imposed upon him.

„Here is the chart, sir,“ said Ready, „and I have drawn a pencil line through our latitude: you perceive that it passes through this cluster of islands; and I think we must be among them, or very near. Now I must put something on for dinner, and then look sharp out for the land. Will you take a look round, Mr. Seagrave, especially a-head and on the bows.“

68) To work the latitude, den Breitegrad (durch Berechnung) auf der Karte suchen. 69) For their lives, i. e. (to save their lives).

Ready went down to see what he could procure for dinner, as the seamen, when they left the ship, had collected almost all which came first to hand. He soon procured a piece of salt beef and some potatoes, which he put into the saucepan, and then returned on deck.

Mr. Seagrave was forward, looking over the bows, and Ready went there to him.

„Ready, I think I see something, but I can hardly tell what it is: it appears to be in the air, and yet it is not clouds. Look there, where I point my finger.“

„You're right, sir,“ replied Ready, „there is something; it is not the land which you see, but it is the trees upon the land which are refracted, as they call it, so as to appear, as you say, as if they were in the air. That is an island, sir, depend upon it; but I will go down and get my glass.“

„It is the land, Mr. Seagrave,“ said Ready, after examining it with his glass — „yes, it is so,“ continued he, musing; „I wish that we had seen it earlier; and yet we must be thankful.“

„Why so, Ready?“

„Only, sir, as the ship forges⁷⁰⁾ so slowly through the water, I fear that we shall not reach it before dark, and I should have wished to have had daylight to have laid her nicely on it.“

„There is very little wind now.“

„Well, let us hope that there will be more,“ replied Ready; „if not, we must do our best; — but I must now go to the helm, for we must steer right for the island; it would not do⁷¹⁾ to pass it, for, Mr. Seagrave, although the ship does not leak so much as she did, yet I must now tell you that I do not think that she could be kept more than twenty-four hours above water. I thought otherwise this morning when I sounded the well; but when I went down in the hold for

70) to forge, schmieden, hier: sich gleichsam durchhämmern.

71) it would not do, es würde sehr übel sein.

the beef, I then perceived that we were in more danger than I had any idea of: however, there is the land, and every chance of escape; so let us thank the Lord for all his mercies.“

„Amen!“ replied Mr. Seagrave.

Ready went to the helm and steered a course for the land, which was not so far distant as he had imagined, for the island was very low: by degrees the wind freshened up, and they went faster through the water; and now, the trees, which had appeared as if in the air, joined on to the land, and they could make out that it was a low coral island covered with groves of cocoa-nuts. Occasionally Ready gave the helm up to Mr. Seagrave, and went forward to examine. When they were within three or four miles of it, Ready came back from the forecastle, and said, I think I see my way pretty clear, sir: you see we are to the windward of the island⁷²⁾ and there is always deep water to the windward of these sort of isles, and reefs and shoals to leeward; we must, therefore, find some little cleft in the coral rock to dock her in, as it were⁷³⁾, or she may fall back into deep water after she has taken the ground, for sometimes these islands run up like a wall, with forty or fifty fathom of water close to the weather sides of them; but I do see a spot where I think she may be put on shore with safety. You see those three cocoa-nut trees close together on the beach? Now, sir, I cannot well see them as I steer, so do you go forward, and if I am to steer more to the right, put out your right hand, and if to the left, the same with your left; and, when the ship's head is as it ought to be, then drop the hand which you have raised.“

„I perfectly understand you, Ready,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; who then went forward and directed the steering of the vessel as they neared the island. When they were within half a mile of it, the colour of the water changed, very much to the satisfaction of Ready, who knew that the weatherside of the island would not be so steep as was usually the case: still it was an agitating moment as they ran on to the beach. They were now within a cable's length, and still the ship did not ground; a little nearer, and there was a grating at her bottom — it was the breaking off of the coral-trees which grew below like forests under water — again she grated, and more harshly, then struck, and then again; at last she struck violently, as the swell lifted her farther on, and then remained fast and quiet. Ready let go the helm to ascertain the position of the ship. He looked over the stern and around the ship, and found that she was firmly fixed, fore and aft, upon a bed of coral rocks.

72) to island, luvwärts, auf der den Passatwinden entgegensehenden Seite der Insel. Die andere Seite heißt die Lenzseite (leeward.) 73) as it were, gleichsam, so zu sagen.

CHAPTER VIII.

„All's well so far, sir,“ said Ready to Mr. Seagrave; „and now let us return thanks to Heaven.“

Ready kneeled down on the deck, took off his hat, and remained a short time in prayer. Mr. Seagrave did the same: the children at first looked on, and wondered, and then knelt⁷⁴⁾ down by the side of them, following the example of Juno.

As they rose, William came up and said, — „Father, my mother has sent me to you; she was awakened by the noise under the ship's bottom, and is frightened — will you go down to her?“

„Yes, my child, directly,“ said Mr. Seagrave.

74) Oben kneeled, hier knelt — beide Formen recht, aber auffallend nahe hinter einander gebraucht.

„What is the matter, my dear — and where have you all been?“ exclaimed Mrs. Seagrave, when her husband went down below⁷⁵). I, have been so frightened — I was in such a sound sleep, and I was awakened with such a dreadful noise.“

„Be composed, my dear,“ replied Mr. Seagrave: „we have been in great danger, and are now, I trust, in safety. Tell me, are you not better for your long sleep⁷⁶)?“

„Yes, much better — much stronger; but do tell me what has happened.“

„Much took place, dearest, before you went to sleep, which was concealed from you; but now, as I expect we shall all go on shore in a short time —“

„Go on shore, my dear?“

„Yes, on shore. Now be calm, and hear what has happened, and how much we have reason to be grateful to Heaven.“

Mr. Seagrave then entered into a detail of all that had passed. Mrs. Seagrave heard him without reply; and when he had finished, she threw herself in his arms, and wept bitterly.

Mr. Seagrave remained with his wife, using all his efforts to console her, until Juno re-appeared with the children, for it was now getting late; and then Mr. Seagrave returned on deck to consult with Ready.

„Well, sir,“ said Ready, when Mr. Seagrave went up to him, „I have been looking well about me, and I think that we have great reason to be thankful. The ship is fast enough, and will not move until some violent gales come on and break her up; but of that there is no fear at present: the little wind that there is, is going down, and we shall have a calm before morning.“

75) down below ist hier der Gegensatz von on deck. 76) for steht hier etwa für on account of oder by means of, nicht für trotz, wie z. B. I don't believe him for all his swearing.

„I grant that there is no immediate danger, Ready; but how are we to get on shore? — and, when on shore, how are we to exist?“

„I have thought of that too, sir, and I must have your assistance, and even that of Master William, to get the little boat on board to repair her: her bottom is stove in⁷⁷⁾, it is true, but I am carpenter enough for that, and with some well-tarred canvass I can make her sufficiently water-tight to land us all in safety, until I have an opportunity of putting her in better order. We must set to⁷⁸⁾ at daylight.“

„And when we get on shore?“

„Why, Mr. Seagrave, where there are cocoa-nut trees in such plenty as there are on that island, there is no fear of starvation, even if we had not the ship's provisions. I expect a little difficulty with regard to water, for the island is low — very low, and small; but we cannot expect to find every thing exactly as we wish.“

„I am thankful to the Almighty for our preservation, Ready; but still there are feelings which I cannot get over. Here we are cast away upon a desolate island, which perhaps no ship may ever come near, so that there is little change of our being taken off. Here we may live and die — here my children may grow up, — yes, grow old, after they have buried you, their father, and their mother, and follow us to the same tomb. All their prospects in life, all mine — all blasted — all my hopes overthrown — it is a melancholy and cruel fate, Ready, and that you must acknowledge.“

„Mr. Seagrave, as an old man compared to you, I may venture to say that you are ungrateful to Heaven to give way to these repinings. What is said in the book of Job? „Shall we receive good of the Lord, and shall we not receive evil?“ Besides, who knows whether good may not proceed from what appears evil? You talk of your children and of their prospects, Mr. Seagrave, but can you tell what might have happened if you had arrived at Sydney, and had followed up your worldly concerns? Most children promise fair⁷⁹); but, when they arrive at manhood, do they always prove equal to the expectations of their parents? Who knows but what this visitation upon them may have preserved them from wickedness, or from a violent death in the midst of their wickedness from being cut off in their prime — from disgracing you and their good mother? I beg your pardon, Mr. Seagrave, I hope I have not offended you; but indeed, sir, I felt that it was my duty to speak as I have done.“

77) stove feltener als staved (von to stave einstoßen). 78) to set to, d. h. work.

„You have reproved me very justly, Ready; and I thank you for it,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „I will repine no more, but make the best of it⁸⁰).“

„And trust in God, sir, who, if he thinks fit, will restore you once more to your friends, and increase ten-fold your flocks and herds.“

„That quotation becomes very apt, Ready,“ replied Mr. Seagrave, smiling, „considering that all my prospects are in flocks and herds upon my land in New South Wales. I must put myself under your orders; for, in our present position, you are my superior — knowledge is power. Can we do any thing to-night?“

„I can do a little, Mr. Seagrave; but you cannot assist me till to-morrow morning, except indeed to help me to drag these two spars aft; and then I can rig a pair of sheers, and have them all ready for hoisting up to-morrow morning to get the boat in. You see, with so little strength on board, and no masts, we shall be obliged to contrive.“

Mr. Seagrave assisted Ready in getting the two spars aft, and laid on the spot which was required.

79) to promise fair, zu guten Hoffnungen berechtigen. 80) to make the best of it, sich so gut als möglich in seine Lage schicken.

„There now, Mr. Seagrave, you may go down below. Master William had better let loose the two dogs, and give them a little victuals⁸¹), for we have quite forgot them, poor things. I shall keep watch to-night, for I have plenty to do, and plenty to think of; so, good-night, sir.“

Mr. Seagrave wished Ready good-night, and went below. Ready remained on deck, lashing the heads of the spars, and fixing his tackles ready for the morrow. When all was done, he sat down upon one of the hen-coops aft, and remained in deep thought. At last, tired with watching and exertion, the old man fell asleep. He was awakened at daylight by the dogs, who had been set a liberty, and who, after walking about the ship and finding nobody, had then gone to sleep at the cabin door. At daybreak they had roused up, and going on deck had found old Ready asleep on the hencoop, and were licking his face in their joy at having discovered him. „Ay,“ said the old man, as he got off the hencoop, „you’ll all three be useful, if I mistake not, by and by⁸²). Down Viven, down — poor creature, you’ve lost a good master, I’m afraid.“

„Stop — now let me see,“ said Ready, talking to himself; „first — but I’ll get the logboard and a bit of chalk, and write them down, for my memory is not quite so good as it was.“

Ready placed the logboard on the hencoop, and then wrote on it with the chalk: — „Three dogs, two goats, and Billy the kid (I think there’s five pigs); fowls (quite enough); three or four pigeons (I’m sure); the cow (she has lain down and won’t get up again, I’m afraid, so we must kill her); and there’s the Merino ram and sheep belonging to Mr. Seagrave —

81) Webster sagt von victuals: we never apply this word to that on which beasts or birds feed, davon müssen aber diejenigen Thiere ausgenommen werden, welche mit dem Menschen oft die Nahrung theilen. 82) by and by, bald, sehr bald, — by the by, bei der Gelegenheit, à propos.

plenty of live stock⁸³⁾. Now, what 's the first things we must get on shore after we are all landed — a spar and top-gallant-sail for a tent, a coil or two of rope, a mattress or two for Madam and the children, two axes, hammer and nails, something to eat — yes, and something to cut it with. There, that will do for the present," said old Ready, getting up. „Now I'll just light the fire, get the water on, and, while I think of it, boil two or three pieces of beef and pork to go on shore with them; and then I'll call up Mr. Seagrave, for I reckon it will be a hard day's work: and may we have God's blessing on it!"

CHAPTER IX.

As soon as Ready had executed his intentions, and had fed the animals, he went to the cabin, and called Mr. Seagrave and William. With their assistance the sheers were raised, and secured in their place; the boat was then hooked on, but, as one person was required to bear it clear of the davits and taffrail, they could not hoist it in.

„Master William, will you run down to Juno, and tell her to come on deck to assist us — we must all work now! Madam will hold the baby for a few minutes.“

„William soon returned with Juno, who was a strong girl; and, with her assistance, they succeeded in getting the boat in, and then they sent Juno down again into the cabin.

The boat was turned over, and Ready commenced his work; while Mr. Seagrave, at his request, put the pitch-pot on the galley fire, all ready for pitching the canvass when it was nailed on. It was not till dinner-time that Ready, who had worked hard, could patch up the boat; he then payed⁸⁴⁾ the canvass and the seams which he had caulked with pitch both inside and out.

83) Unter live stock versteht man Hausvieh zur Nuzung.

„I think we shall do now, sir,“ said Ready; „we’ll drag her to the gangway and launch her. It’s fortunate for us that they did clear away the gunnel, as we shall have no trouble.“

A rope was made fast to the boat, to hold her to the ship: she was then launched over the gunnel by the united exertions of Mr. Seagrave and Ready, and to their great satisfaction she appeared to leak very little.

„Now, sir,“ said Ready, „what shall we do first — take some things on shore, or some of the children?“

„What do you say, Ready?“

„Why then, sir, with submission to you, I think as the water is as smooth as glass, and we can land anywhere, (for which we ought to be most thankful, having women and infants⁸⁵⁾ to take on shore,) that you and I had better go first to reconnoitre, — it is not two hundred yards to the beach, and we shall lose but little time.“

„Very well, Ready, I will first run down and tell my wife.“

„And, in the meanwhile, I’ll put the sail into the boat, and one or two other things; it will be so much time saved.“

Ready put the sail in, an axe, a musket, and some cord. Mr. Seagrave came up again; they both got into the boat, and pulled on shore.

When they landed, they found that they could see nothing of the interior of the island, the cocoa-nut groves were so thick; but to their right they perceived, at about a quarter of a mile off, a small sandy cove, with brushwood growing in front of the cocoa-nut trees.

84) To pay, als regelmäßiges Zeitwort, betheeren, mit Talg bestreichen, oder dergl. 85) A child ist erst a babe oder baby, dann an infant, bis etwa zum dritten Jahre.

„That,“ said Ready, pointing to it, must be our location, as the Americans call it. Let us get into the boat again, Mr. Seagrave, and pull to it; it is but a little way to pull, but a long way to carry the things in the boat.“

In a few minutes they arrived at the cove, the water was shallow, and as clear as crystal. Beneath the boat's bottom they could see beautiful shells, and the fish darting about in every direction.

The sand extended about forty yards from the water, and then commenced the brushwood, which ran back about forty yards further, intermingled with single cocoa-nut trees, until it joined the cocoa-nut grove. They pulled the boat in, and landed.

„What a lovely spot this is!“ exclaimed Mr. Seagrave; „and perhaps mortal man has never yet visited it till now: those cocoa-nuts have borne their fruit year after year, have died, and others have sprung up in their stead; and here has this spot remained, perhaps for centuries, all ready for man to live in, and to enjoy whenever he should come to it.“

„Providence is bountiful, Mr. Seagrave,“ replied Ready, „and suppliess our wants when we least expect it. If you please we will walk a little way into the wood: take the gun as a precaution, sir, not that there appears to be much occasion⁸⁶⁾ for it — there is seldom any thing wild on these small islands, except a pig or two has been put on shore by considerate Christians. I once sailed with a captain on these seas, and he never landed on a desolate island without putting a couple of pigs or something on shore to breed, in case any body should hereafter be shipwrecked; it was a kind thought.“

„It was, Ready; well, now that we are in the grove, what do you think?“

86) occasion ist Veranlassung, opportunity, Gelegenheit.

„I was looking for a place to fix a tent up for the present, sir, and I think that on that little rise would be a very good place till we can look about us and do better; but we have no time now, sir, for we have plenty of trips to make before nightfall. If you please, we'll haul the sail and other articles on to the beach, and then return on board.“

As they were pulling the boat back, Ready said, „I've been thinking about what is best, Mr. Seagrave. Would Mrs. Seagrave mind your leaving her? — if not, I should say we should have Juno and Master William on shore first, as they can be of use.“

„I do not think that she will mind being left on board with William and the children, provided that I return for her when she is to come on shore herself with the baby.“

„Well then, let Master William remain on board, if you please, sir. I'll land you and Juno, Master Tommy, and the dogs, this time, for they will be a protection in case of accidents. You and Juno can be doing something while I return by myself⁸⁷⁾ for the articles we shall require.“

As soon as they arrived on board, Mr. Seagrave went down to cheer his wife with the account of what they had seen, and he obtained her consent to the arrangement made by Ready. While he was down below, Ready had cast off the lashings of the two spars which had formed the sheers, and dragging them forward, had launched them over the gunnel, with lines fast to them, ready for towing on shore. In a few minutes Juno and Tommy made their appearance on deck; Ready put some tools into the boat, and a couple of shovels, which he brought up when he went for the dogs, and once more they landed at the sandy cove. Tommy stared about him a great deal, but did not speak, until he saw the shells lying on the beach, when he screamed with delight, and began to pick them up 87) by myself, ganz allein.

as fast as he could; the dogs barked and galloped about, overjoyed at being once more on shore; and Juno smiled as she looked around her, saying to Ready, „What a nice place!“

„Now, Mr. Seagrave, I'll remain on shore with you a little. First, we'll load the musket in case of need, and then you can put it out of the way of Master Tommy, who fingers every thing, I observe. We will take up the sail between us. Juno, you can carry the tools; and then we can come back again for the spars, and the rope, and the other things. Come, Master Tommy, you can carry a shovel at all events⁸⁸), and that will make you of some use. We must all work now.“

Having taken all these things to the little knoll which Ready had pointed out before, they returned for the spars; and in two trips they had carried every thing there, Tommy with the second shovel on his shoulder, and very proud to be employed.

„Here are two trees which will answer our purpose pretty well,“ said Ready, „as they are far enough apart: we must lash the spars up to them, and then throw the sail over, and bring it down to the ground at both ends; that will be a beginning at all events; and I will bring some more canvass on shore, to set up the other tent between these other trees, and also to shut up the two ends of both of them, then we shall have a shelter for Madam, and Juno, and the younger children, and another for Master William, Tommy, and ourselves. Now, sir, I'll leave you to finish while I go on board again.“

„But how can we reach so high, Ready?“

„Why, sir, we can manage that by first lashing a spar as high as we can conveniently reach, and then standing on that while we lash the other in its proper place. I shall bring another spar on shore, that we may do the same when we set up the other tent.“

88) at all events, auf alle Fälle.

Having by this plan succeeded in lashing the spar high enough, and throwing the sail over the spar, Ready and Mr. Seagrave spread it out, and found that it made a very good-sized tent.

„Now, sir, I'll return on board; in the mean time if you can cut pegs from the brushwood to fasten the sail down to the ground, and then with the shovel cover the bottom of it with sand to keep it down, it will be close enough when it is all finished. There's my knife, sir, if you hav'n't got⁸⁹⁾ one.“

„I shall do very well,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „Juno can help me to pull the canvass out tight when I am ready.“

„Yes; and in the mean time, Juno, take a shovel, and level the inside of the tent nice and smooth, and throw out all those old cocoa-nut leaves, and look if you see any vermin lurking among them. Master Tommy, you must not run away; and you must not touch the axes, they will cut you if you do. It may be as well to say⁹⁰⁾, Mr. Seagrave, that should any thing happen, and you require my assistance, you had better fire off the gun, and I will come on shore to you immediately. But that's not very likely,“ continued Ready, who then walked down to the beach, and stepping into the boat, pulled on board of the ship.

CHAPTER X.

When Ready returned on board he first went down into the cabin to acquaint Mrs. Seagrave and William with what they had done. Mrs. Seagrave naturally felt anxious about her husband being on shore alone, and Ready informed her that they had agreed that if any thing should occur Mr. Seagrave would fire the musket. He then went down into the sail-room to get some canvass, a new top-gallant-sail which was there, and a palm⁹¹⁾ and needles with twine. Scarcely had he got them out, and at the foot of the ladder, when the report of the musket was heard, and Mrs. Seagrave rushed out of the cabin in the greatest alarm; Ready seized another musket, jumped into the boat, and pulled on shore as fast as he could. On his arrival, quite out of breath, for as he pulled on shore he had his back towards it, and could see nothing, he found Mr. Seagrave and Juno busy with the tent, and Master Tommy sitting on the ground crying very lustily. It appeared that, while Mr. Seagrave and Juno were employed, Master Tommy had crept away to where the musket was placed up on end against a cocoa-nut tree, and, after pulling it about some little while, had touched the trigger. The musket went off; and, as the muzzle was pointed upwards, the charge had brought down two large cocoanuts, which fell close to where Tommy was under the tree, and, had they hit him, would certainly have killed him. Mr. Seagrave, who was aware what an alarm this would produce on board the vessel, had been scolding him soundly, and now Master Tommy was crying⁹²⁾, to prove how very penitent he was.

89) To get wird oft ganz überflüssig angewendet; so sagt man oft I have got such a book, für: so ein Buch habe ich. 90) It may be as well to say, etwa: ich möchte fast rathen, es wäre vielleicht nicht übel &c.

„I had better return on board immediately, sir, and tell Mrs. Seagrave,“ said Ready.

„Do pray, my good fellow,“ replied Mr. Seagrave.

Ready then returned to the ship, and explained matters⁹³⁾, and then recommenced his labour.

91) A palm ist, nach Webster, an instrument used in sewing canvass instead of a thimble, französisch paumet, deutsch Platen. 92) To cry und to weep sind wohl zu unterscheiden. Letzteres ist Sache des Gemüths. Webster sagt to weep ist to shed tears from any passion, was von kleinen Kindern wohl nicht gesagt werden kann. 93) To explain matters, die Sache auseinander setzen.

Having put into the boat the sailmakers's bag, with palm and needles, two mattresses, and blankets from the captain's state room, the saucepan with the beef and pork, and a spar which he towed astern, Ready found that he had as much as he could carry; but, as there was nobody but himself in it, he came on shore very well. Having, with the assistance of Mr. Seagrave and Juno, got all the things up to the knoll, Ready lashed the spar up for the second tent, and then leaving them to fix it up like the other, he returned again on board. Juno had cleaned the tent out very nicely, and said that she had not found any animals or insects among the leaves. Before he went, Ready gave Tommy a stick, and told him to watch the beef and pork, and not allow the dogs to eat it all up, and Tommy, who was on his good behaviour, stood sentry over it as grave as a judge. Ready made two other trips to the ship, bringing with him more bedding, a bag of ship's biscuits, another of potatoes, plates, knives and forks, spoons, frying pans and other cooking utensils, and a variety of other articles. He then showed Juno how to fill up the ends of the first tent with the canvass and sails he had brought on shore, so as to enclose it all round; Juno took the needle and twine, and worked very well. Ready, satisfied that she would be able to get on without them, now said: „Mr. Seagrave, we have but two hours more daylight, and it is right that Mrs. Seagrave should come on shore now: so, if you please, we'll go off and fetch her and the children. I think we shall be able to do very well for the first night; and if it pleases God to give us fine weather, we may do a great deal more to-morrow — indeed as long as the fine weather lasts, we must work hard in getting things on shore, for one good gale would, in all probability, beat the vessel to pieces. I stowed the hold⁹⁴⁾ myself, and know where most of the things are to be found, but I fear it will not be possible to get out many articles which would be useful.“

94) To stow the hold, die Güter im Schiffsraum zusammenlegen und packen, nicht nur daß sie festliegen, sondern daß das Schiff im Gleichgewicht bleibt.

As soon as they arrived on board, Mr. Seagrave went down to his wife to propose her going on shore. She was much agitated, and very weak from her illness, but she behaved courageously notwithstanding, and, supported by her husband, she gained the deck, William following with the baby, and his little sister Caroline carried by Ready. With some difficulty they were all at last placed in the boat and shoved off; but Mrs. Seagrave was so ill, that her husband was obliged to support her in his arms, and William took an oar. They landed very safely, and carried Mrs. Seagrave up to the tent, and laid her down on one of the mattresses. She asked for a little water.

„And I have forgotten to bring any with me: well, I am a stupid old man; but I'll go on board directly,“ said Ready: „to think⁹⁵⁾ that I should be so busy in bringing other things on shore and forget the greatest necessity in life! The fact is, I intended to look for it on the island as soon as I could, as it would save a great deal of trouble.“

Ready returned on board as fast as he could, and brought on shore two kegs of fresh water, which he and William rolled up to the tent.

Juno had completely finished her task, and Mrs. Seagrave having drank some water, declared that she was much better.

„I shall not return on board any more to-night,“ said Ready, „I feel tired — very tired indeed.“

„You must be, my good man,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „you have been up many nights, and have worked very hard all day. Do not think of doing any more.“

95) To think, etwa: sollte man wohl glauben, sollte es ein Mensch für möglich halten.

„And I hav'n't touched food this day, or even quenched my thirst," replied Ready, sitting down.

„You are ill, are you not, Ready?" said William.

„A little faint, Master William; I'm not so young as I was. Could you give me a little water?"

„Stop, William, I will," said Mr. Seagrave, taking up a tin can which had been filled for his wife: „here Ready, drink this."

„I shall be better soon, sir; I'll just lie down a little, and then I'll have a biscuit and a little meat."

„Poor old Ready was indeed quite tired out; but he ate something, and felt much revived. Juno was very busy; she had given the children some of the salt meat and biscuit to eat. The baby, and Tommy, and Caroline had been put to bed, and the second tent was nearly ready.

„It will do very well for to-night, Juno," said Mr. Seagrave; „we have done work enough for this day."

„Yes, sir," replied Ready, and I think we ought to thank God for his mercies to us before we go to sleep. Have we not much to thank him for? Had the weather been bad, and the water rough, should we have been so comfortably on shore as we are now? Has it not been a mercy?"

„You remind me of my duty, Ready; let us thank Him for his goodness, and pray to Him for his protection before we go to sleep."

„Do my dear husband," said Mrs. Seagrave, from her tent; „I can hear you and join with you."

Mr. Seagrave then offered up a prayer of thankfulness; and they all retired to rest.

CHAPTER XI.

Mr. Seagrave was the first who awoke and rose from his bed on the ensuing morning. He stepped out of the tent, and looked around him. The sky was clear and brilliant. A light breeze ruffled o'er the surface of the water, and the tiny waves rippled one after another upon the white sand of the cove. To the left of the cove the land rose, forming small hills, behind which appeared the continuation of the coconut groves. To the right, a low ridge of coral rocks rose almost as a wall from the sea, and joined the herbage and brushwood at about a hundred paces while the wreck of the Pacific, lying like some huge stranded monster, formed the prominent feature in the landscape. The sun was powerful where its beams could penetrate; but where Mr. Seagrave stood, the coconut waved their feathering leaves⁹⁶⁾ to the wind, and offered an impervious shade. A feeling of the extreme beauty of the scene, subdued by the melancholy created by the sight of the wrecked vessel, pervaded the mind of Mr. Seagrave as he meditated over it.

„Yes,“ thought he, „if tired with the world and its anxieties, I had sought an abode of peace and beauty, it would have been on a spot like this. How lovely is the scene! — what calm — what content — what a sweet sadness does it create! How mercifully have we been preserved when all hope appeared to be gone; and how bountifully have we been provided for, now that we have been saved, — and yet I have dared to repine, when I ought to be full of gratitude! May God forgive me! Wife, children, all safe, nothing to regret but a few wordly goods and a seclusion from the world for a time — yes, but for how long a time! — What! rebellious still! — for the time that it shall please God 96) to feather statt to fan, bis jekt befannt.

in his wisdom to ordain.“ Mr. Seagrave turned back to his tent. William, Tommy, and old Ready still remained fast asleep. „Excellent old man, thought Mr. Seagrave, „if ever we return to the busy scenes of life, your kindness and your Christian feelings shall have their reward, as far as it is in my power to repay you. What a heart of oak⁹⁷⁾ is hid under that rugged bark! — Had it not been for his devotion⁹⁸⁾ — his utter sacrifice of self — where might I and all those dear helpless creatures have been now? Sleep on, good old man, and may Heaven bless you!“

The dogs who had crept into the tent and laid themselves down upon the mattresses by the side of William and Tommy, now fawned upon Mr. Seagrave. William woke up with their whining, and having received a caution from his father not to wake old Ready, he dressed himself and came out.

„Had I not better call Juno, father,“ said William; „I think I can, without waking mamma, if she is asleep.“

„Then do, if you can, my boy; and I will see what cooking utensils Ready has brought on shore.“

William soon returned to his father, stating that his mother was in a sound sleep, and that Juno had got up without waking her or the two children.

„Well, we'll see if we cannot get some breakfast ready for them, William. Those dry cocoa-nut leaves will make an excellent fire.“

„But, father, how are we to light the fire? we have no tinder-box or matches.“

„No; but there are other ways, William, although, in most of them, tinder is necessary. The savages can produce fire by rubbing a soft piece of wood against a hard one. I'm afraid that we should be a long while doing that, but we have gunpowder, and can make

97) A heart of oak? — uns Deutschen kann dies wie a heart of stone erscheinen, und Seagrave will gerade das Gegentheil sagen. 98) had—devotion, ohne seine Hingebung.

tinder by wetting it and rubbing it on a rag or piece of paper, or indeed a piece of soft wood; and we have two ways of igniting gunpowder — one is by a flint and steel, and the other by collecting the sun's rays into one focus by a magnifying glass.“

„We have no magnifying glass.“

„No; but we can obtain one out of a telescope when we go on board again; at present we have no other means than with the musket.“

„But, father, when we have lighted the fire, what have we to cook? we have no tea or coffee.“

„No, I do not think we have,“ replied Mr. Seagrave.

„But we have potatoes, father.“

„Yes, William, but don't you think it would be better if we made our breakfast of the cold beef and pork and ship's biscuit for once, and not use the potatoes? we may want them all to plant you know: but why should we not go on board of the ship ourselves? you can pull an oar pretty well⁹⁹), and we must all learn to work now, and not leave every thing for poor old Ready to do. It will be some time before¹⁰⁰) we are as handy as that old man, or as prepared to meet every difficulty. Come, William.“

Mr. Seagrave then went down to the cove: the little boat was lying on the beach, just lifted by the rippling waves; they pushed her off, and got into her. „I knew where the steward kept the tea and coffee, father,“ said William, as they pulled on board; „Mamma would like some for breakfast I'm sure, and I'll milk the goats for baby.“

Although they were neither of them very handy at the oar, they were soon alongside of the ship; and, having made the boat fast, they climbed on board.

„William first went down to the cabin for the tea

99) He can pull an oar pretty well, daß an wie etwa in: er führt eine gute Klinge. 100) It will be some time before ic., es wird eine Weile dauern, ehe ic.

and coffee, and then left his father to collect other things while he went to milk the goats which he did in a tin pan. He then poured the milk into a bottle, which he had washed out, that it might not be spilt, and went back to his father.

„I have filled these two baskets full of a great many things, William, which will be very acceptable to your mamma. What else shall we take?“

„Let us take the telescope at all events, father; and let us take a whole quantity of clothes — they will please mamma: the clean ones are all in the drawers — we can bring them up in a sheet; and then, father, let us bring some of the books on shore; and I'm sure mamma will long for her Bible and prayer-book; — here they are.“

„You are a good boy, William,“ replied Mr. Seagrave. „I will now take those things up to the boat, and then return for the rest.“

In a short time every thing was put into the boat, and they pulled on shore again. They found Juno, who had been washing herself, waiting for them at the cove, to assist to take up the things.“

„Well, Juno, how do you find yourself this morning?“

„Quite well, massa,“ said Juno: and then pointing to the clear water, she said, „Plenty fish here.“

„Yes, if we only had lines,“ replied Mr. Seagrave. „I think Ready has both hooks and lines somewhere. Come, Juno, take up this bundle of linen to your tent: we can manage all the rest.“

„Then, Juno, you may as well take this bottle of milk, which I got for little Albert's breakfast.“

„Tankee, Massa William, dat very good of you.“

„And you must be quick, Juno; for there's Tommy on his legs, and running about in his shirt.“

When they arrived at the tent they found that every one was awake except old Ready, who appeared still to sleep very sound. Mrs. Seagrave had passed a very good night, and felt herself much refreshed.

William made some touch-paper¹⁰¹), which he lighted with one of the glasses from the telescope, and they soon had a good fire. Mr. Seagrave went to the beach, and procured three large stones to rest the saucepan on; and in half an hour the water was boiling, and the tea made.

CHAPTER XII.

Juno had taken the children down to the cove, and, walking out into the water up to her knees, had dipped them in all over, as the shortest way of washing them, and had then dressed them and left them with their mother, while she assisted William to get the cups and saucers and plates for breakfast. Every thing was laid out nice and tidy between the two tents, and then William proposed that he should awaken¹⁰²) old Ready.

„Yes, my boy, you may as well now — he will want his breakfast; and, besides, he would not like to be away when we all meet to return thanks to God before we sit down to our meal.“

„William went and pushed Ready on the shoulder. „Ready, have you had sleep enough?“ said William, as the old man sat up.

„Yes, Master William. I have had a good nap I expect, and now I will get up, and see what I can get for breakfast for you all.“

„Do,“ replied William, laughing.

Ready was soon dressed, for he had only taken off his jacket when he laid down. He put it on, and came out of the tent: when, to his astonishment, he found the whole party (Mrs. Seagrave having come out 101) Touch-paper, Streich- oder Zündpapier, sowie touch-wood.

102) Man sagt to awake, to awaken, to wake, to waken.

with the children,) standing round the breakfast, which was spread on the ground.

„Good morning, Ready,“ said Mrs. Seagrave, extending her hand. Mr. Seagrave also shook hands with him.

„You have had a good long sleep, Ready,“ said Mr. Seagrave, „and I would not waken¹⁰³⁾ you after your fatigue of yesterday.“

„I thank you kindly, sir; and I am glad to see that Madam is so well: and I am not sorry to see that you can do so well without me,“ continued Ready, smiling.

„Indeed, but we cannot, I'm afraid,“ replied Mrs. Seagrave; „had it not been for you¹⁰⁴⁾ and your kindness, where should we have been now?“

„We can get a breakfast ready without you,“ said Mr. Seagrave; „but without you, my good fellow, I think we never should have required another breakfast by this time; but we will tell Ready all we have done while we eat our breakfast: now, my dear, if you please.“ Mrs. Seagrave then read a chapter from the Bible, and afterwards they all knelt down while Mr. Seagrave offered up a prayer.

While they were at breakfast, William told Ready how they had gone on board, and what they had brought on shore, and he also mentioned how Juno had dipped all the children in the sea.

„But Juno must not do that again,“ replied Ready, „until I have made all safe; you know that there are plenty of sharks about these islands, and it is very dangerous to go into the water.“

„Oh, Mr. Seagrave, what an escape they have had!“¹⁰⁵⁾ cried Mrs. Seagrave, shuddering.

„It's very true,“ continued Ready; „but they don't keep so much to the windward of the islands where 103) Siehe die vorige Note. 104) Had it not been for you, wenn Sie nicht gewesen wären. 105) What an escape they have had! etwa: welcher nahe liegenden Gefahr sind sie nicht entgangen!

we are at present; but still that smooth cave is a very likely place for them to come into; so it's just as well not to go in again, Juno, until I have time to make a place for you to bathe in in safety; but we have plenty to do before we think of that, and as soon as we can get as much as we want from the ship, we must decide whether we shall stay here or not."

"Stay here or not, Ready! — what do you mean?"

"Why, we have not yet found any water, and that is the first necessity of life — if there is no water on this side of the island, we must pitch our tents somewhere else."

"That's very true," replied Mr. Seagrave; "I wish we could find time to explore a little."

"So we can, sir; but we must not lose this fine weather. It may be rough to-morrow, and then we shall not be able to get any thing from the ship. We had better go now. You, sir, William and me¹⁰⁶). You and William can remain on board to collect the things, and I will land them on the beach for Juno to bring up."

The whole day was spent in landing every variety of article which they thought could be useful. All the small sails, cordage, twine, canvass, small casks, saws, chisels, and large nails, and elm and oak plank, were brought on shore before dinner. After they had taken a hearty dinner, they went to work again. The cabin tables and chairs, all their clothes, some boxes of candles, two bags of coffee, two of rice, two more of biscuits, several pieces of beef and pork, and bags of flour, for they could not manage to get a whole cask out, some more water, the grindstone, and Mrs. Seagrave's medicine chest were then landed. When Ready came off again, he said. "Our poor boat is getting very leaky, and will not take much more on shore without being repaired; and Juno has not been able to 106) Ein sehr gewöhnlicher Fehler, me statt I zu brauchen.

get half the things up — they are too heavy for one person — I think we shall do pretty well now, Mr. Seagrave; and we had better, before it is dark, get all the animals on shore. I don't much like to trust them to swim on shore, but they are awkward things in a boat. We'll try a pig, at all events; and while I get one up, do you and Master William tie the legs of the fowls, and put them into the boat; as for the cow, she cannot be brought on shore, she is still lying down, and, I expect, won't get up again any more; it is the way with those animals¹⁰⁷), however, I have given her plenty of hay, and, if she don't rise, why I will kill her, and we can salt her down¹⁰⁸).“

Ready went down below, and the squealing of the pig was soon heard; he came on deck with it hanging over his back, by the hind legs, and threw it into the sea over the gunnel: the pig floundered at first; but after a few seconds, turned its head away from the ship and swam for the shore.

„He goes ashore straight enough,“ said Ready, who with Mr. Seagrave and William, was watching the animal; but a minute afterwards, Ready exclaimed, —

„I thought as much — we've lost him¹⁰⁹)!“

„How?“ replied Mr. Seagrave.

„D'ye see that black thing above water pushing so fast to the animal? — that's the back of a shark, and he will have the poor thing — there, he's got him!“ said Ready, as the pig disappeared under the water with a heavy splash. Well, he's gone; better the pig than your little children, Mr. Seagrave.“

„Yes, indeed, God be praised! — that monster might have been close to them at the time that Juno took them into the water.“

„He was not far off, I reckon,“ replied Ready; „however, he must be content with what he has got, 107) it is the way with, es geht so mit u. 108) Dies down könnte auch wegbleiben. 109) him oder her für it nicht selten, wenn von Thieren die Rede ist.

for he'll get no more. We'll go down now and tie the legs of the other four pigs, and bring them up; with what's already in the boat they will be a good load."

As soon as the pigs were in the boat, Ready sculled it on shore, while Mr. Seagrave and William brought up the goats and sheep ready for the next trip. Ready soon returned; „Now this will be our last trip for to-day, and, if I am any judge of the weather, our last trip for some days; it is banking up very thick in the offing¹¹⁰). This trip we'll be able to put into the boat a bag of corn for the creatures, in case we require it, and then we may say good bye¹¹¹) to the ship for a day or two at least. I have given the cow water, left a bucket or two with her, and a truss of hay; but I don't much expect we shall find her alive when we come back to the ship again."

They then all got into the boat, which was very deeply laden, for the corn was heavy, but they got safe on shore, although they leaked very much. Having landed the goats and sheep, William led them up to the tent, where they remained very quietly; the pigs had run away, and so had the fowls; but this was to be expected. The beach was quite covered with the quantity of things they had brought on shore.

„That's what I call a good day's work, Mr. Seagrave," said Ready; „the little boat has done its duty well; but we must not venture in her again until I have put her into a little better condition."

They were not at all sorry, after their hard day's work, to find that Juno had prepared coffee for them; and while they were drinking it, they narrated to Mrs. Seagrave the tragical death of the poor pig by the shark. Mrs. Seagrave embraced her little boy, who was in her arms, when she heard the tale; and when she lifted up her head again, there was a tear of thankfulness rolling down her cheek. Poor Juno appeared¹¹²⁾ quite frightened at the danger which the children had been in, even now that it was all over.

110) the offing or offin, die hohe See. 111) To say good bye, Lebewohl sagen.

„We shall have plenty to do here to-morrow,“ observed Mr. Seagrave, „in getting things into their places.“

„We shall have plenty to do for some time, I expect,“ replied Ready. „In two months, or thereabouts¹¹³⁾, we shall have the rainy season come on, and we must be under cover before that time, if we possibly can. We can't expect this weather to last all the year round.“

„What's the first thing we must do, Ready?“ inquired Mr. Seagrave.

„To-morrow, we had better fix up another tent or two, to stow away all the articles we have brought on shore: that will be one good day's work; we shall then know where to lay our hands upon every thing, and see what we want.“

„That's very true; and what shall we do then?“

„Why then, sir, I think we must make a little expedition to explore the island, and find out where we must build our house.“

„Can we build a house?“ said William.

„Oh, yes, sir, and with more ease than you would think. There's no tree so valuable as the cocoa-nut tree; and the wood is so light that we can easily move it about.“

„Well, I think it's time for us all to go to bed,“ said Mr. Seagrave. „William, bring your mamma the Bible.“

112) Hier läßt sich der Unterschied zwischen to appear und to seem deutlich erkennen. 113) Von thereabout und thereabouts sagt Webster: the latter is less proper but most commonly used.

CHAPTER XIII.

We shall, for the future, omit the regular daily routine of our party on the island, as we shall have quite enough to do to narrate the various incidents which each day brought forth. When breakfast was over the next morning, Ready observed, „Now, Mr. Seagrave, we must hold a council of war, and decide upon an exploring party for to-morrow; and, when we have settled that, we will find some useful way of employing ourselves for the rest of the day. The first question is, of whom is the party to consist? — and upon that I wish to hear your opinion.“

„Why, Ready,“ replied Mr. Seagrave, „it appears to me that you and I should go.“

„Surely not both of you, my dear,“ interrupted Mrs. Seagrave. „You can do without my husband, can you not, Ready?“

„I certainly should have liked to have had Mr. Seagrave to advise with¹¹⁴⁾, ma'm,“ replied Ready; „but still I have thought upon it, and do not think that Master William would be quite sufficient protection for you; or, at all events, you would not feel that he was, which is much the same thing; and so, perhaps, if Mr. Seagrave has no objection, it would perhaps be better that he remained with you.“

„Would you go alone, then, Ready?“ said Mr. Seagrave.

„No, sir, I do not think that would be right, either — some accident might happen; there is no saying¹¹⁵⁾ what might happen, although there is every appearance of safety; but we are in the hands of Providence, who doeth with us as He¹¹⁶⁾ thinks fit. I should like, there-

114) To advise with a person, mit Jemandem zu Rathe gehen. 115) There is no saying, man kann nicht sagen. 116) He, da Providence für God steht.

fore, to have some one with me: the question is, whether it be Master William or Juno?"

„Take me," said Tommy.

„Take you, Master Tommy!" said Ready, laughing; „then I must take Juno to take care of you. No; I think they cannot spare you. Your mamma will want you when we are gone; you are so useful in gathering wood for the fire, and taking care of your little sister and brother, that your mother cannot part with you; so I must have either Juno or your brother William."

„And which would you prefer, Ready?" said Mrs. Seagrave.

„Master William, certainly, ma'am, if you will let him go with me, as you could ill spare the girl. I was only afraid you would raise some objection."

„Indeed, I do not like it; I would rather lose Juno for a time," replied Mrs. Seagrave.

„My dear wife," said Mr. Seagrave, „what did Ready just now say? — that we were in the hands of Providence. Recollect how Providence has preserved us in such awful dangers — how we are landed in safety. And now, will you not put trust in that Providence, when the dangers are, as I trust, only imaginary."

„I was wrong, my dear husband, very wrong; but sickness and suffering have made me, I fear, not only nervous and frightened, but selfish: I must and will shake it off. Hitherto I have only been a clog and an incumbrance to you; but I trust I shall soon behave better, and make myself useful. If you think, my dear husband, that it would be better that you should go with Ready instead of William, I am quite content; I was very wrong, indeed, to raise an objection at the time. Go, then, with Ready, and may Heaven protect you both!"

„No, ma'am," replied Ready, „Master William will do just as well. Indeed ma'am, I would go by myself with pleasure: I have no fears of any thing happening; but still we know not what the day may bring forth, and I might be taken ill — I might hurt myself — I am an old man, you know; and then I was thinking that if any accident was to happen to me, you might miss me — that's all — I did not say it for my own sake."

„That I am sure you did not, my good old friend," replied Mrs. Seagrave; „but a mother is foolish at times."

„Over-anxious, ma'am, perhaps, but not foolish, begging your pardon," replied Ready.

„Well, then, William shall go with you, Ready; — that point's settled," observed Mr. Seagrave: „what is the next?"

„The next is to prepare for our journey. We must take some provisions and water with us, a gun and some ammunition, a large axe for me, and one of the hatchets for Master William; and, if you please, Romulus and Remus had better come with us, and Vixen shall remain with you. Juno, put a piece of beef and a piece of pork into the pot. Master William, will you fill four quart bottles with water, while I sew up a knapsack out of canvass for each of us?"

„And what shall I do, Ready?" said Mr. Seagrave.

„Why, sir, if you will have the kindness to sharpen the axe and the hatchet on the grindstone, it would be of great service, and Master Tommy can turn it, he is such a strong little man, and so fond of work."

Tommy jumped up directly; he was quite strong enough to turn the grindstone, but he was much fonder of play than work; but as Ready had said that he was fond of it, he wished to prove that such was the case, and Tommy did work very hard; for Ready, who was making the knapsacks, sat by them, and when Tommy was inclined to leave off, he praised him for behaving so well, and pointed out to Mrs. Seagrave what a clever boy he was; so Tommy, who liked to be praised, turned the handle of the grindstone until the perspiration ran down his forehead. Before they went to prayers and retired for the night, the axe was sharpened, the knapsacks made, and every thing else ready.

„When do you intend to start, Ready?“ said Mr. Seagrave.

„Why, sir, I should like to get off at the dawn of day, when the heat is not so great.“

„And when do you intend to come back?“ said Mrs. Seagrave.

„Why, madam, we have provisions enough for three days; if we start to-morrow morning, which is Wednesday, I hope to be back some time on Friday evening; but I won't be later than Saturday morning if I can help it.“

„Good night — and good bye, mother,“ said William, „for I shall not see you to-morrow.“

„God bless and protect you, my dear child,“ replied Mrs. Seagrave. „Take care of him, Ready, and good bye to you till we meet¹¹⁷⁾.“

Mrs. Seagrave went into the tent to hide the tears which she could not suppress. „It's all new to her now, sir,“ observed Ready; „in a little while she won't mind it so much¹¹⁸⁾.“

„Very true, Ready,“ said Mr. Seagrave; „but she is nervous and weak just now; and as she never has yet parted with her children for an hour, and her boy is going she knows not where, I think she takes it pretty well¹¹⁹⁾.“

„She does, sir, she does,“ replied Ready: „a mother's fears are as natural as a mother's love. If I find I cannot do all I wish by the time agreed, I will come back at all events, and start again.“

„Do, Ready; that will give her confidence: and now, good bye, and may success attend you!“

117) till we meet, bis auf Wiedersehen. 118) she — much, sie wird sich nicht mehr soviel kümmern. 119) she takes it pretty well, sie erträgt es ziemlich gut.

CHAPTER XIV.

Ready was up before the sun had appeared, and he awakened William; they dressed themselves in silence, because they did not wish that Mrs. Seagrave should be disturbed. The knapsacks had been already packed, with two bottles of water in each, wrapped round with cocoa-nut leaves, to prevent their breaking, and the beef and pork divided between each knapsack. Ready's, which was larger than William's, held the biscuit and several other things which Ready had prepared in case they might require them; and round his waist he twisted two cords, to tie the dogs if required.

As soon as the knapsacks were on, Ready took the axe and gun, and asked William if he thought he could carry a small spade on his shoulder, which they had brought on shore along with the shovels. William replied that he could; and the dogs, who¹²⁰⁾ appeared to know they were going, were already standing by them, when Ready went to one of the small water casks, took a drink himself, gave one to William, and then as much to the dogs as they would drink. Having done this, just as the sun rose, they turned into the cocoa-nut grove, and were soon out of sight of the tents.

„Now, Master William, do you know,“ said Ready, stopping after they had walked twenty yards, „by what means we may find our way back again; for you see this forest of trees is rather puzzling, and there is no path to guide us?“

„No, I am sure I cannot tell: I was thinking of the very same thing when you spoke; and of Tom Thumb¹²¹⁾, who strewed peas to find his way back, but could not do it, because the birds picked them all up.“

120) who, statt which, bei Thieren, nicht ungewöhnlich. Vgl. Note 109. 121) Tom Thumb, auch Hop-o'-my-thumb, der Däumling im allbekannten Märchen.

„Well, Tom Thumb did not manage well, and we must try to do better; we must do as the Americans always do in their woods, we must blaze the trees.“

„Blaze them! what, set fire to them?“ replied William.

„No, no, Master William. Blaze is a term they use (why, I know not, except that there must be a term for every thing) when they cut a slice of the bark off the trunk of a tree, just with one blow of a sharp axe, as a mark to find their way back again. They do not blaze every tree, but about every tenth tree as they go along, first one to the right, and then one to the left, which is quite sufficient; and it is very little trouble, — they do it as they walk along, without stopping. So now we'll begin: you take the other side, it will be more handy for you, to have your hatchet in your right hand; I can use my left. See now — just a slice off the bark — the weight of the axe does it almost, and it will serve for a guide through the forest for years.“

„What an excellent plan!“ observed William, as they walked along, occasionally marking the trees.

„But I have another friend in my pocket,“ replied Ready, „and I must use him soon.“

„What is that?“

„Poor Captain Osborn's pocket-compass. You see, William, the blazing will direct us how to go back again; but it will not tell us what course we are now to steer. At present, I know we are going right, as I can see through the wood behind us; but by and by we shall not be able, and then I must make use of the compass.“

„I understand that very well: but tell me, Ready, why do you bring the spade with us — what will be the use of it? You never said you were going to take one yesterday morning.“

„No, Master William, I did not, as I did not like to make your mother anxious about any thing; but the fact is, I am very anxious myself about one thing, and that is as to whether there is any water on this island;

if there is not, we shall have to quit it sooner or later, for although we may get water by digging in the sand, it would be too brackish to use for any time, and would make us all ill. We have not much on shore now; and if the bad weather comes on, we may not be able to get any more from the wreck. Now, very often, there will be water if you dig for it, although it does not show above ground; and therefore I brought the spade."

"You think of every thing, Ready."

"No, I do not, Master William; but in our present situation, I think of more things than perhaps your father and mother would: they have never known what it is to be put to their shifts¹²²⁾ — they have never been in situations requiring them to think about such things; but a man like me, who has been all his life at sea, and who has been wrecked, and suffered hardships and difficulties, and has been obliged to think or die, has a greater knowledge, not only from his own sufferings, but by hearing how others have acted when they were in distress. Necessity, they say, is the mother of invention; and it's very true, Master William, for it sharpens a man's wits; and it is very curious what people do contrive when they are compelled to do so, especially seamen.

"And where are we going to now, Ready?"

"Right to the leeward side of the island; and I hope we shall be there before it is dark."

"Why do you call it the leeward side of the island?"

"Because among the islands the winds almost always blow one way: we landed on the windward side; the wind is at our back; now put up your finger, and you will feel it even among the trees."

"No, I cannot," replied William, as he held up his finger.

122) To be put to one's shifts, auf seine eigenen Kräfte angewiesen sein.

„Then wet your finger, and try again.“

William wet his finger in his mouth, and held it up again: „Yes, I do feel it now,“ said he; „but why is that?“

„Because the wind blows against the wet, and you feel the cold.“

As Ready said this, the dogs growled, then started forward, and barked.

„What can be there?“ cried William.

„Stand still, Master William,“ replied Ready, cocking his gun, „and I will go forward to see.“ Ready advanced cautiously with the gun to his hip. The dogs barked more furiously; and at last, out of a heap of cocoa-nut leaves collected together, out burst all the pigs which had been brought on shore, grunting and galloping away as fast as they could, with the dogs in pursuit of them.

„It's only the pigs, Master William,“ said Ready, smiling; „I never thought I should be half-frightened by a tame pig. Here, Romulus! here, Remus! come back!“ continued Ready, calling to the dogs. „Well, Master William, this is our first adventure.“

„I hope we shall not meet with any one more dangerous,“ replied William, laughing; „but I must say that I was alarmed.“

„No wonder; for although not likely, it is possible there may be wild animals on this island, or even savages; we must always be prepared for the worst in an unknown country; but being alarmed is one thing, Master William, and being afraid is another: a man may be alarmed, and stand his ground¹²³), as you did; but a man that is afraid will run away.“

„I do not think I shall ever run away and leave you, Ready, if there is danger.“

Ready and William continued their way through the cocoa-nut grove for more than an hour longer, marking the trees as they went along; they then sat down to take their breakfast, and the two dogs lay down by them.

123) To stand one's ground, seinen Platz behaupten.

„Don't give the dogs any water, Master William, nor any of the salt meat; give them biscuit only.“

„But they are very thirsty; may not I give them a little?“

„No; we shall want it all ourselves, in the first place¹²⁴); and, in the next, I wish them to be thirsty. And, Master William, take my advice, and only drink a small quantity of water at a time¹²⁵): it is quite sufficient to quench the thirst; and the more you drink, the more you want.“

„Then I should not eat so much salt meat.“

„Very true; the less you eat the better, unless we find water, and fill our bottles again.“

„But we have our axes, and can always cut down a cocoa-nut, and get the milk from the young nuts.“

„Very true; and fortunate it is that we have that to resort to¹²⁶); but still we could not do very well on cocoa-nut milk alone, even if it were to be procured all the year round. Now, Master William, we will go on if you do not feel tired.“

Not in the least; I am tired of seeing nothing but the stems of the cocoa-nut trees, and shall be very glad when we are through the wood.“

„Then the faster we walk, the better,“ said Ready; „as far as I could judge as we were coming to the island, we must be about half-way across now.“

Ready and William recommenced their journey; and, after half an hour's walking, they found that the ground was not so level as it had been — sometimes they went gradually up hill, at others down¹²⁷).

„I am very glad to find the island is not so flat here, Master Willy; we have a better chance of finding water.“

124) In the first place, (lat. primo loco) für's Erste.

125) At a time, auf einmal. 126) To resort to a thing, zu Et-was seine Zuflucht nehmen. 127) At others, nämlich at other times.

„But, look, it is much steeper before us,” replied William, as he barked a tree; „it’s quite a hill.”

„So much the better — let us push on.”

The ground now became more undulating, although still covered with cocoa-nut trees, even thicker together than before. They continued their march, occasionally looking at the compass, until William showed symptoms of weariness, for the wood had become more difficult to get through than at first.

„How many miles do you think we have walked, Ready?” said Willy.

„About eight, I should think.”

„Not more than eight?”

„No; I do not think that, altogether, we have made more than two miles an hour; it’s slow work, travelling by compass, and marking the trees; but I think the wood looks lighter before us, now that we are at the top of this hill.”

„It does, Ready; I fancy I can see the blue sky again.”

„Your eyes are younger than mine, Master William, and perhaps you may — however, we shall soon find out.”

They now descended into a small hollow, and then went up hill again. As soon as they arrived at the top, William cried out, „The sea, Ready! there’s the sea!”

„Very true, Master William, and I’m not sorry for it.”

„I thought we never should have got out of that nasty wood again,” said William, as he impatiently pushed on; and at last stood clear of the cocoa-nut grove. Ready soon joined him, and they surveyed the scene before them in silence.

CHAPTER XV.

„Oh! how beautiful!“ exclaimed William, at last; „I'm sure mamma would like to live here. I thought the other side of the island very pretty, but it's nothing compared to this.“

It's very beautiful, Master William,“ replied Ready, thoughtfully.

Perhaps a more lovely scene could scarcely be imagined. The cocoa-nut grove terminated about a quarter of a mile from the beach very abruptly, for there was a rapid descent for about thirty feet from where they stood to the land below, on which was a mixture of little grass knolls and brushwood, to about fifty yards from the water's edge, where it was met with dazzling white sand, occasionally divided by narrow ridges of rock which ran inland. The water was of a deep blue, except where it was broken into white foam on the reefs, which extended for miles from the beach, and the rocks of which now and then showed themselves above water. On the rocks were perched crowds of gannets and men-of-war birds, while others wheeled in the air, every now and then darting down into the blue sea, and bringing up in their bills a fish out of the shoals, which rippled the water, or bounded clear of it in their gambols. The form of the coast was that of a horse-shoe bay — two points of land covered with shrubs extending far out on each side. The line of the horizon, far out at sea, was clear and unbroken.

Ready remained for some time without speaking; he scanned the horizon right and left; he surveyed the reefs in the distance; and then he turned his eyes along the land. At last William said —

„What are you thinking of, Ready?“

„Why, I am thinking that we must look for water as fast as we can.“

„But why are you so anxious?“

„Because, Master Willy, I can see no island to leeward of us as I expected, and therefore there is less chance of getting off this island; and this bay, although very beautiful, is full of reefs, and I see no inlet, which makes it awkward for many reasons. But we cannot judge at first sight. Let us now sit down and take our dinner, and after that we will explore a little. Stop — before we leave where we stand we must make a good mark upon the trees close to where we have come out of the wood, or we shall not find our blaze again in a hurry when we wish to go back again.“

Ready cut two wide marks in the stems of the cocoa-nut trees, and then descended with William to the low ground, where they sat down to eat their dinner. As soon as their meal was finished they first walked down to the water's edge, and Ready turned his eyes inland to see if he could discover any little ravine or hollow which might be likely to contain fresh water. „There are one or two places there,“ observed Ready, pointing to them with his finger, „where the water has run down in the rainy season: we must examine them carefully, but not now; to-morrow will be time enough. I want to find out whether there is any means of getting our little boat through this reef of rocks, or otherwise we shall have very hard work (if we change our abode to this spot) to bring all our stores through that wood; it would take us weeks, if not months; so we will pass the rest of this day in examining the coast, Master William, and to-morrow we will try for fresh water.“

„Look at the dogs, Ready, they are drinking the sea-water, poor things.“

„They won't drink much of that I expect; you see they don't like it already.“

„How beautiful the corals are — look here, they grow like little trees under the water, — and look here, here is really a flower in bloom growing on that rock just below the water.“

„Put your finger to it, Master William,“ said Ready.

William did so, and the flower, as he called it, immediately shut up.

„Why, it's flesh, and alive!“

„Yes, it is; I have often seen them before: they call them, I think, sea-anemones — they are animals; but I don't know whether they are shellfish¹²⁸⁾ or not. Creation is very wonderful. Now, let us walk out to the end of this point of land, and see if we can discover any opening in the reef. The sun is going down, and we shall not have more than an hour's daylight, and then we must look out for a place to sleep in.“

„But what is that?“ cried William, pointing to the sand — „that round dark thing?“

„That's what I'm very glad to see, Master William: it's a turtle; they come up about this time in the evening to drop their eggs, and then they bury them in the sand.“

„Can't we catch them?“

„Yes, we can catch them if we go about it quietly; but you must take care not to go behind them, or they will throw such a shower of sand upon you, with their hind flappers or fins, that they would blind you and escape at the same time. The way to catch them is to get at their heads and turn them over on their backs by one of the forefins, and then they cannot turn back again.“

„Let us go and catch that one.“

„Indeed, Master William, I should think it very foolish to do it, as we could not take it away, and it would die to-morrow from the heat of the sun. It's not right to take life away uselessly, and if we destroy that turtle now, we may want it another time.“

„I did not think of that, Ready: if we come to live here, I suppose we shall catch them whenever we want them.“

128) fish hat nur dann fishes zum Plural, wenn sie gezählt gedacht werden. Man sagt there is a great variety of fish in our ponds. We counted the fishes we had caught.

„No, we shall not, for they only come on shore in the breeding season; but we will make a turtlepond somewhere which they cannot get out of, but which the sea flows into; and then when we catch them we will put them into it, and have them ready for use as we require them.“

„That will be a very good plan,“ replied William.

They now continued their walk; and, forcing their way through the brushwood which grew thick upon the point of land, soon arrived at the end of it.

„What is that out there?“ said William, pointing to the right of where they stood.

„That is another island, Master William, which I am very glad to see even in that direction, although it will not be so easy to gain it, if we are obliged to leave this for want of water; it is, however, possible that we might. It is a much larger island than this at all events,“ continued Ready, scanning the length of the horizon, along which he could see the tops of the trees. — „Well, Master Willy, we have done very well for our first day. I am rather tired, and so, I presume, are you; so now we will go and look for a place to lie down and pass the night.“

They returned to the high ground where the coconut grove ended, and collecting together several branches and piles of leaves, made a good soft bed under the trees.

„And now we'll have a little water, and go to bed. Look, Master William, at the long shadow of the trees! the sun has nearly set.“

„Shall I give the dogs some water, now, Ready? see, poor Remus is licking the sides of the bottles.“

„No, do not give them any: it appears to be cruel, but I want the intelligence of the poor animals to-morrow, and the want of water will make them very keen, and we shall turn it to good account¹²⁹⁾. So now, 129) To turn a thing to good account, sich eine Sache zu Nütze machen.

William, we must not forget to return thanks to a merciful God, and to beg His care over us for this night: we little know what the day may bring forth. Could you ever have imagined, a month back, that you would be on this island in company with an old man like me, sleeping in the open air? If any one had told you so, you would never have believed it; yet here you are, William, and you see how He disposeth of us as He thinks proper. Good night, sir!“

CHAPTER XVI.

William slept as sound¹³⁰) as if he had been on shore in England upon a soft bed in a warm room — so did old Ready; and when they awoke the next morning it was broad daylight. The poor dogs were suffering for want of water, and it pained William very much to see them with their tongues out, panting and whining as they looked up to him. „Now, Master William,“ said Ready, „shall we take our breakfast before we start, or have a walk first?“

„Ready, I cannot really drink a drop of water myself, and I am thirsty, unless you give a little to these poor dogs.“

„I pity the poor dumb creatures as much as you do, Master Willy; depend upon it, it's not out of unkindness; on the contrary, it is kindness to ourselves and them too, which makes me refuse it to them; however, if you like, we will take a walk first, and see if we can find any water. Let us first go to the little dell to the right, and if we do not succeed, we will try farther on where the water has run down during the rainy season." William was very glad to go, and away they went, followed by the dogs, Ready having taken up the spade, which he carried on his shoulder. They soon came to the dell, and the dogs put their noses to the ground, and snuffed about; Ready watched them; at last they lay down panting.

130) Sound gehört zu den Adjectiven, die ein doppeltes Adverb haben (sound, soundly).

„Let us go on, sir," said Ready thoughtfully; they went on to where the run of water appeared to have been — the dogs snuffled about more eagerly than before.

„You see, Master William, these poor dogs are now so eager for water, that if there is any, they will find it out where we never could. I don't expect water above ground, but there may be some below it. This beach is hardly far enough from the water's edge, or I should try in the sand for it."

„In the sand! — but would it not be salt?" replied William.

„No; not if at a good distance from the sea-beach, for you see, William, the sand by degrees filters the sea-water fresh, and very often when the sand runs in a long way from the high-water mark¹³¹), if you dig down, you will find good fresh water, at other times it is a little brackish, but still fit for use. I wish that this fact was better known among seamen than it is, it would have saved many a poor fellow from a great deal of agony. There's nothing so dreadful as being without water, Master William. I know what it is to be on an allowance of half a pint a day, and I assure you it is cruel work."

„Look, Ready, at Romulus and Remus — how hard they are digging with their paws there in the hollow."

„Thanks to Heaven that they are, Master William; you don't know how happy you have made me feel; for, to tell you the truth, I was beginning to be alarmed."

131) High-water mark, or flood-mark is the mark which the sea makes on the shore, at flowing water, and the highest tide.

„But why do they dig?“

„Because there is water there, poor animals. Now you see the advantage of having kept them in pain¹³²⁾ for a few hours; it is in all probability the saving of all of us, for we must either have found water or quitted this island. Now let us help the poor dogs with the spade, and they shall soon be rewarded for their sufferings.“

Ready walked quickly to where the dogs continued digging: they had already got down to moist earth, and were so eagerly at work, that it was with difficulty he could get them out of his way to use his spade. He had not dug two feet before the water trickled down, and in four or five minutes the dogs had sufficient to plunge their noses in, and to drink copiously.

„Look at them, sir, how they enjoy it, — so did the Israelites fainting in the desert, when Moses struck the rock of stone, and the water poured out in torrents for their relief. Do you recollect that part of the Scriptures, Master William?“

„To be sure I do. I have a picture of it at home.“

„Well, I don't think any Israelite among them felt more grateful than I do now, William. This was the one thing wanting, but it was the one thing indispensable. Now we have every thing we can wish for on this island, and if we are only content, we may be happy — ay, much happier than are those who are worrying themselves to heap up riches, not knowing who shall gather them. See, the poor animals have had enough at last — and how they have swelled themselves out! Now, shall we go back to breakfast?“

„Yes,“ replied William: „I shall enjoy it now, and have a good drink of water myself.“

„That is a plenteous spring, depend upon it, sir,“ said Ready, as they walked back to where they had slept and left their knapsacks; „but we must clear it out further up among the trees, where the sun cannot reach it, and then it will be cool, and not be dried up. We shall have plenty of work for the next year at least, if we remain here. Where we are now will be a capital spot to build our house on."

132) And if the dogs became mad?

As soon as the breakfast was over, Ready said, — „Now we must go down and explore the other point, for you see, Master William, I have not yet found a passage through the reef, and as our little boat must come round this side of the island, it is at the point on this side that I must try to find an entrance. When I was on the opposite point it did appear to me that the water was not broken close to this point; and should there be a passage we shall be very fortunate."

They soon arrived at the end of the point of land, and found that Ready was not wrong in his supposition; the water was deep, even close to the beach, and there was a passage of many yards wide. The sea was so smooth, and the water so clear, that they could see down to the rocky bottom, and watched the fish as they darted along. „Look there," said Willy, pointing out about fifty yards from the beach „a great shark, Ready."

„Yes, I see him¹³³⁾, sir," replied Ready: „there's plenty of them here, depend upon it; and you must be very careful how you get into the water here: the sharks always keep to the leeward of the island, and for one you'll find where Juno bathed your little brother, you will find fifty here. I'm quite satisfied now, William, we shall do very well, and all we have now to think of is moving away from the other side of the island as fast as possible."

„Shall we go back to-day?"

„Yes, I think so, for we shall only be idle here, and your mother is anxious about you, depend upon it. It is not twelve o'clock, I should think, and we shall have plenty of time; for you see it is one thing to walk through a wood and mark your way, and another to go back again with the path pointed out to you. So I think we had better start at once; we will leave the spade and axe¹³⁴⁾ here, for it is no use taking them back again. The musket I will carry, for although it is not likely to be wanted, still we must always be prepared. First, let us go back and look at the spring, and see how the water flows, and then we will be off."

133) S. die 17te Note.

As they walked along the edge of the sandy beach they found the sea-birds hovering close to them: all of a sudden a large shoal of fish threw themselves high and dry on the sand, and they were followed by several of a larger size, which also lay flapping on the beach, while the sea-birds, darting down close to the feet of William and Ready, and seizing up the fish, flew away with them.

"How very strange," said William, surprised.

"Yes, sir: but you see how it is — the small fish were chased by the larger ones, which are bonettas, and in their fright ran upon the beach. These bonettas were so anxious to catch them, that they came on shore also, and then the gannets picked them all up. There's a moral in this, Master William, — when people are too eager in their pursuit they run blindly into danger."

"But the little fish were not in pursuit?"

"No; I referred to the large — with the little fish it was out of the frying-pan into the fire¹³⁵⁾, as the old proverb says: but let us go on to the spring."

"They found the hole which Ready had dug quite full of water, and, tasting it, it proved very sweet and good. Overjoyed at this discovery, they covered up the articles they agreed to leave behind them with some boughs under the notched cocoa-nut trees, and, calling the dogs, set off on their journey back again to the cove.

134) Man schreibt axe und ax, spricht aber immer ax. 135) out of the frying-pan into the fire, deutsch: aus dem Regen in die Traufe.

CHAPTER XVII.

Guided by the marks made on the trees, William and Ready made rapid progress in their return, and in less than two hours found themselves almost clear of the wood which had taken them nearly eight hours to force their way through on the day before.

„I feel the wind now, Ready,“ observed William, „and we must be nearly through the wood; but it appears to me to be very dark.“

„I was just thinking the same, sir,“ replied Ready. „I should not wonder if there is a storm brewing up; and if so, the sooner we are back again the better, for your mother will be frightened.“

As they proceeded, the rustling and waving of the boughs of the trees, and ever and anon a gust of wind, followed by a moaning and creaking sound, proved that such was the fact; and as they emerged from the grove, they perceived that the sky, as it became visible to them, was of one dark leaden hue, and no longer of the brilliant blue which it usually had presented to their sight.

„There is indeed a gale coming on, Master William,“ said Ready, as they cleared the wood: „let us go on to the huts as fast as possible, for we must see that all is as secure as we can make it.“

The dogs now bounded forward; and at their appearance at the huts Mr. Seagrave and Juno came out, and seeing Ready and William advancing, made known the welcome tidings to Mrs. Seagrave, who, with the children, had remained within. In a moment more William was pressed in his mother's arms.

„I am glad that you are come back, Ready,“ said Mr. Seagrave, shaking him by the hand after he had embraced William, „for I fear that bad weather is coming on.“

„I am sure of it,“ replied Ready, „and we must expect a blustering night. It indeed looks threatening.

This will be one of the storms which are forerunners of the rainy season. However, sir, we have good news for you, and must only take this as a warning to hasten our departure as soon as possible. We shall have fine weather after this for a month or so, although we must expect a breeze now and then. However, we must work hard¹³⁶), and do our best; and now, if you please, sir, you and Juno, Master William and I, will take the first precaution necessary, which is, to go down and, between us, haul up our little boat as far from the beach as we possibly can, for the waves will be high and run a long way up, and our boat will be our main dependence soon.“

The four went down as soon as Ready had sawed the ends of the spars which had been cut off, into three rollers, to fix under the keel; with the help afforded by them, the boat was soon hauled up high into the brushwood, where it was considered by Ready to be perfectly safe.

„I meant to have worked upon her immediately,“ observed Ready; „but I must wait now till the gale is over; and I did hope to have got on board once more, and look after some things which I have since remembered would have been useful, and to see if that poor cow was alive yet; but I strongly suspect,“ continued he, looking at the weather, „that we shall never go on board of that poor vessel again. Hear the moaning of the coming storm, sir; look how the seabirds wheel about and scream, as if to proclaim her doom; but we must not wait here, sir, now — the tents must be made more secure, for they will have to hold up against no small force of wind, if I mistake not: it won't do for madam and the children to be blown into the woods.“ When they arrived at the tents they found Master Tommy, who had come out to speak to them.

„Well, Tommy, how are you?“ said William.

136) Hard ist Adject und Adverb, während hardly kaum, schwermlich, bedeutet.

„I am very well, and so is mamma; we did not want you to come back — I took care of them all.“

„I don't doubt but you were very useful, Master Tommy,“ replied Ready; „now you must come and help us get some cord and canvass out of the stores, that we may prevent the rain from coming into your mamma's tent; so take my hand, and come along, and leave William to tell mamma what we have been doing.“

Ready, assisted by Mr. Seagrave, got out some heavy canvass and lines, and commenced putting it as a double cover over the tents, to keep out the rain; they also secured the tents with guys and stays of rope, so as to prevent them being blown down, while Juno with a shovel deepened the trench which had been made round the tents, so that the water might run off more easily. They did not leave off work until all was completed, and then they sat down to a late meal. During the time they were at work, Ready had made Mr. Seagrave acquainted with what they had discovered and done during the exploring expedition, and the adventure with the pigs made them all laugh heartily.

As the sun went down, the weather threatened still more; the wind now blew strong, and the rocky beach was lashed by the waves and white with spray, while the surf roared as it poured in and broke upon the sand in the cove. The whole family had retired to bed except Ready, who said that he would watch the weather a little before he turned in. The old man walked towards the beach, and leaned against the gunnel of the little boat, which they had hauled up in the brushwood, and there he remained with his keen grey eye fixed upon the distance, which was now one opaque mass, except where the white foam of the waters gleamed through the darkness of the night! „Yes!“ thought he; „the winds and the waves are summoned to do His bidding, and evenly do they work together — as one rises, so does the other; when one howls, the other roars in concert — hand in hand they go in their fury and their force. Had they been called up but one week since, where would have been those who have now been, as it were, entrusted to my weak help? The father, the mother, the children, the infant at the breast, and I, the grey-headed old man, — all buried fathoms deep, awaiting our summons; but they were restrained by His will, and by His will we were saved. Will those timbers which bore us here so miraculously hold together till morning? I should think not. What are the iron bolts and fastenings of weak man, compared with the force of God's elements! they will snap as yarns; and by to-morrow's dawn, the fragments of the stout ship will be washing and tossing on the wild surf. Well, it will be a kindness to us, for the waters will perform the labour which we could not; they will break up the timbers for our use, and throw on shore from the hold those articles which we could not reach with our little strength. We shall have more cause to be thankful.“ A sharp flash of lightning struck upon the old man's eyes, and obstructed his vision for the moment. „The storm will soon be at its height,“ thought he; „I will watch the tents, and see how they stand up against its force.“ Ready turned away to walk to the tents; and, as he did so, the rain came pattering down, and the wind howled louder than before. In a minute or two the darkness became so intense that he could hardly¹³⁷⁾ find his way back to the tents. He turned round, but could not see, for he was blinded by the heavy rain. As nothing could be done, the old man went into the tent, and sheltered himself from the storm, although he would not lie down, lest his services might be required. Although the others had retired to bed, with the exception of Tommy and the children, they had not taken off their clothes; Mr. Seagrave had thrown himself down without undressing; and William, perceiving this, had done the same. Mrs. Seagrave, although she would not show her alarm, had also remained dressed, and Juno had followed her example.

137) S. die vorige Note.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The storm now raged furiously, the lightning was accompanied by loud peals of thunder, and the children awoke and cried with fright, till they were hushed to sleep again. The wind howled as it pressed with all its violence against the tents, while the rain poured off in torrents. One moment the canvass of the tents would ¹³⁸⁾ bulge in, and the cords which held it strain and crack; at another, an eddy of wind would force out the canvass which would flap and flap, while the rain found many an entrance. The night was intensely dark, and the fury of the elements was horrible. As we stated in the first part of our narrative, the tent in which Mrs. Seagrave and the children reposed, was on the outside of the others, and therefore the most exposed. It was about midnight that the wind burst on them with greater violence than before. A loud crash was heard by Ready and Mr. Seagrave, followed by the shrieks of Mrs. Seagrave and Juno: the pegs of the tents had given way, and the inmates were exposed to the fury of the elements. Ready rushed out followed by Mr. Seagrave and William. So strong was the wind and beating rain, and such was the darkness, that it was with some difficulty that by their united efforts the women and children could be extricated. Master Tommy was the first taken up by Ready: his courage had all gone, and he was bellowing most furiously. William took Albert in charge and carried him into the other tent, where Tommy sat in his wet shirt roaring most melodiously. Juno, Mrs. Seagrave, and the little girl were at last carried away and taken into the other tent: fortunately no one was hurt, although the frightened children could not be pacified, and joined a chorus with 138) would drückt hier die Wiederholung aus: the canvass bulged repeatedly in.

Tommy; but it was of little consequence¹³⁹⁾, for the wind was so loud that they could scarcely hear one another speak. Nothing more could be done except putting the children into the beds, and then the whole party sat up the remainder of the night listening to the noise of the wind, the roaring of the sea, and the loud patters of the rain against the canvass; and a dreadful and weary and melancholy night did they pass, anxiously waiting for the morning. At dawn of day, Ready went out of the tent, and found that the gale had spent its force, and had already much abated; but it was not one of those bright glorious mornings to which they had been accustomed since their arrival at the island: the sky was dark, and the clouds were chasing each other wildly; there was neither sun or blue sky to be seen; it still rained, but only at intervals, and the earth was soft and spongy; the little cove, but the day before so beautiful, was now a mass of foaming and tumultuous waves, and the surf was thrown many yards upon the beach: the horizon was confused — you could not distinguish the line between the water and the sky, and the whole shore of the island was lined with a white foam. Ready turned his eyes to where the ship had been fixed on the rocks: it was no longer¹⁴⁰⁾ there — the whole frame had disappeared: but the fragments of it, and the contents of the holds, were floating about in every direction, or tossing amongst the surf on the beach.

„I thought as much¹⁴¹⁾,“ said Ready, pointing, to where the ship had laid, as he turned round and found that Mr. Seagrave had followed him; „look, sir, this gale has broken her up entirely. This is a warning to us not to remain here any longer: we must make the most of the fine weather¹⁴²⁾ which we may have before the rainy season sets in — and we have no time to spare, sir, I can tell you.“

139) It was of little consequence, es hatte nicht viel zu bedeuten. 140) no longer, nicht mehr. 141) I thought as much, das habe ich mir gedacht. 142) S. Note 80.

„I agree with you, Ready,“ replied Mr. Seagrave, — „and there is another proof of it,“ pointing to the tent which had been blown down. „It was a good mercy that none of them were hurt.“

„Very true, sir; but the gale is breaking, and we shall have fine weather to-morrow. Let us now see what we can do with the tent, while Master William and Juno try if they can get any breakfast.“

They set to work. Ready and Mr. Seagrave made it fast with fresh cords and pegs, and very soon had it all ready; but the beds and bedding were wet through. They hauled over the wet canvass, and then left it to go to their breakfast, to which Juno had summoned them.

„We need do no more at present, sir,“ said Ready, „by night time it will not be so wet, and we can handle it easier. I see a break in the sky now, which promises fine weather soon — the gale was too fierce to last long. And now, sir,“ said Ready, „we had better work hard to-day, for we may save a great many things, which may be dashed to pieces on the rocks, if we do not haul them on the beach. We can do without Juno; and I don't think we want Master Tommy, who must stay here and take care of his mamma.“

Tommy was, however, rather sulky after the events of the night; and he gave no answer.

CHAPTER XIX.

They went down to the beach. Ready first procured from the stores a good stout rope; and as the waves threw up casks and timbers of the vessel, they stopped them from being washed back again, and either rolled or hauled them up with the rope until they were safe landed. This occupied them for the major part of the day; and yet they had not collected a quarter of the articles that were in their reach, independent of the quantity which floated about out at sea and at the entrance of the cove.

„Well, sir,“ said Ready, „I think we have done a good day's work; to-morrow we shall be able to do much more, for the sea you see is going down already, and the sun is showing himself¹⁴³⁾ from the corner of that cloud. Now we will go to supper, and then see if we can make ourselves more comfortable for the night.“

The tent which had not been blown down was given to Mrs. Seagrave and the children, and the other was fitted up as well as it could be. The bedding being all wet, they procured some sails from the stores, which, being stowed away farther in the grove, had not suffered much from the tempest; and spreading the canvass, they lay down, and the night passed without any disaster, for the wind was now lulled to a pleasant breeze.

The next morning the sun shone bright — the air was fresh and bracing; but a slight breeze rippled the waters, and there was little or no surf. The various fragments of the wreck were tossed by the little surf that still remained; many things were lying on the beach which had landed during the night, and many more required but a little trouble to secure them. There appeared to be a sort of indraught¹⁴⁴⁾ into the cove, as all the articles which had been floating out at sea were now gradually coming on shore in that direction. Ready and Mr. Seagrave worked till breakfast time, and had by that time saved a great many casks and packages.

After breakfast they went down again to the beach and resumed their labours. „Look, Ready; what is that?“ said William, who was with them, as he pointed to a white-looking mass floating in the cove.

„That, sir, is the poor cow; and if you look again, you will see the sharks are around, making a feast of her: don't you see them?“

143) The sun wird häufig als männlich betrachtet. 144) Indraught oder outdraught, je nachdem die Strömung dem Lande zu- oder abgewendet ist.

„Yes, I do — what a quantity!“

„Yes, there's no want of them, Master William; so be very careful how you get into the water, and never let master Tommy go near it, for they don't care how shallow it is when they see their food. But now, sir,“ said Ready, „I must leave you and Master William to do what you can in saving any more of the wreck, while I set to and put the boat in proper repair¹⁴⁵); we shall want her directly, and the sooner she is in order the better.“

Ready left them at their employment, and went away for his tools to repair the boat. During this time Mr. Seagrave and William had occupied themselves in collecting the different articles thrown on shore, and rolling up the casks as far as they could. As for the timbers and planks of the vessel, they left them to be landed whenever chance might direct; they had more than enough for any present use, or, indeed, for any use which it appeared they might have for a long while.

As it would take some days for Ready to put the boat into proper order, Mr. Seagrave determined that he would go to the other side of the island with William, that he might examine it himself; and as Mrs. Seagrave had no objection to be left with Ready and Juno, on the third day after the gale they set off. William led the way, guiding his footsteps through the grove by the blazing of the cocoa-nut trees; and in two hours they reached their destination.

„Is not this beautiful, father?“ said William.

„Yes, indeed it is, my dear boy,“ replied Mr. Seagrave. „I fancied that nothing could be more beautiful than the spot where we reside on the other side of the island, but this surpasses it, not only in variety, but in extent.“

„And now let us examine the spring, father,“ said William, leading the way to the ravine.

The spring was full and flowing, and the water

145) To put in order to give a repair, wieder ausbessern.

excellent. They then directed their steps towards the sandy beach, and, having walked some time, sat down upon a coral rock.

„Who would have ever imagined, William,“ said Mr. Seagrave, „that this island, and so many more which abound in the Pacific Ocean, could have been raised by the work of little insects¹⁴⁶⁾ not bigger than a pin's head.“

For a few minutes Mr. Seagrave and William were both silent. Mr. Seagrave then rose from where he was sitting: „Come, William, let us now find our way back again; we have three hours' daylight left, and shall be home in good time.“

„Yes, in time for supper, father,“ replied William, „and I feel that I shall do justice to it; so the sooner we are off the better.“

CHAPTER XX.

Every thing was now preparing for their removal to the leeward side of the island. Ready had nearly completed the boat; he had given it a thorough repair, and fitted a mast and sail. William and Mr. Seagrave continued to secure the various articles thrown on shore, particularly such as would be injured by their exposure to the weather: these they rolled or carried into the cocoa-nut grove, so as to be sheltered from the sun; but there were so many things thrown on shore day after day, that they hardly knew what they had: but they secured case and cask one after another, waiting for a better opportunity to examine their contents. At last they collected a great many articles together, and, with their shovels, covered them over with sand, it being impossible to get them from the beach without more time than they could spare.

146) In the South Sea the isles are mostly coral rocks covered with rocks. Corals seem to consist of carbonate of lime and animal matter, in equal proportion.

Neither was Mrs. Seagrave, who was now getting quite strong, or Juno, idle. They had made up every thing that they could in packages, ready for moving to the other side of the island. On the eighth day after the gale they were ready, and a consultation was held. It was arranged that Ready should put into the boat the bedding and canvass of one tent, and should take William with him on his expedition. Having transported this safe, he should return for a load of the most necessary articles, and then the family should walk through the grove to the other side of the island, and remain there with Mr. Seagrave while Ready and William returned for the other tent; and after that, the boat should make as many trips as the weather would permit, till they had brought all the things absolutely required. It was a lovely calm morning when Ready and William pushed off in the boat, which was well loaded; and as soon as they were clear of the cove they hoisted the sail, and went away before the wind along the coast. In two hours they had run to the eastern end of the island, and hauled up close in shore: the point which ran out, and at the end of which there was an inlet, was not a mile from them, and in a very short time they had lowered the sail, and were pulling in for the sandy beach.

„You see, Master William, it is fortunate for us that we shall always have a fair wind when we come down loaded, and only have to pull our empty boat back again.“

„Indeed it is. How many miles do you think it is from the cove to this part of the island?“

„About six or seven, not more; the island, you see, is long and narrow. Now let us get the things out and carry them up, and then we will be back to the cove long before dark. I shall be glad to be back, for your mamma was not very easy in her mind at your going to sea again, Master William — I saw that.“

The boat was soon unloaded, but they had some way to carry up the things. „We shall not mind such a gale as we had the other day when our tents are pitched here, William,“ said Ready, „for we shall be protected by the whole width of the cocoa-nut grove. We shall hardly feel the wind, although we shall the rain, for that will come down in torrents.“

„I must go and see how our spring gets on,“ said William, „and get a drink from it.“

„Do so; and then you can follow me down to the boat.“

„Willy¹⁴⁷⁾ reported the spring to be up to the brim with water, and that he had never drunk any water so excellent in his life. They then pushed off the boat, and, after rowing for about two hours or more, found themselves at the entrance of the cove, and Mrs. Seagrave, with Tommy by her side, waving her handkerchief to them.

They very soon pulled in to the beach, and, landing, received the congratulations of the whole party at their first successful voyage, and all expressed their delight at its having proved so much shorter than had been anticipated.

„Tommy will go next time,“ said Master Tommy.

„By and bye¹⁴⁸⁾, when Tommy grows a little taller,“ replied Ready.

„Massa Tommy, you come help me to milk the goats,“ said Juno.

„Yes, Tommy milk the goats,“ said the little urchin, running after Juno.

„You must be almost tired of eating nothing but salt meat and biscuit, ma'am,“ said Ready, as they sat down to their meal; „but when we are all safe on the other side of the island we hope to feed you better. At present it is hard work and hard fare."

147) William wird bald in Willy, oder Will bald in Bill abgekürzt. 148) S. die 82te Note.

"As long as the children are well, I care very little about it; but I must say that, after the last gale, I am as anxious as you to be on the other side of the island, especially after the account William has given me of it. It must be a paradise! When do we set off?"

"Not till the day after to-morrow, ma'am, I should think; for you see I must have another trip for the cooking utensils and the bundles which you have made up. If you will spare Juno to walk through the wood with Master William to-morrow, we will then have the tent ready for you and the children. Mr. Seagrave will remain with you, ma'am."

"Certainly, Ready: and had they not better lead over the sheep and goats? It will be doing something."

"I thank you for thinking of it, ma'am; it will be so much time saved."

CHAPTER XXI.

Old Ready had his boat loaded and had made sail for the other side of the island long before the family were up; indeed before they were dressed he had landed his whole cargo on the beach, and was sitting down quietly taking his breakfast. As soon as he had eaten the beef and biscuit which he had taken with him, he carried up the things which he had brought, and commenced arrangements for setting up the tent, intending to await the arrival of William and Juno, that they might assist him in getting up the spars and canvass over it.

About ten o'clock William made his appearance, leading one of the goats by a string, followed by the others. Juno came after with the sheep, also holding one with a cord; the rest had very quietly joined the procession. „Here we are at last!“ said William, laughing; „we have had terrible work in the woods, for Nanny would run on one side of a tree when I went on the other; and then I had to let go the string. We fell in¹⁴⁹⁾ with the pigs again, and Juno gave such a squall!“

„I tink 'em wild beast,“ said Juno. „Ah! what a nice place? Missis will like to live here.“

„Yes, it is a very nice place, Juno; and you'll be able to wash here, and never mind about saving the water.“

„I am thinking,“ said William, „how we are to get the fowls over here; they are not very wild, but still we cannot catch them.“

„I'll bring them with me to-morrow, Master William.“

„But how will you catch them?“

„Wait till they are gone to roost, and then you may catch them when you please.“

„And I suppose the pigeons and the pigs must run wild¹⁵⁰⁾?“

„The best thing we can do with them, sir; the pigs will always feed themselves among the cocoa-nut trees, and will breed very fast.“

„Then we shall have to shoot them, I suppose?“

„Well, Master William, so we shall; and the pigeons also, when they have become plentiful; if we remain here so long; so we shall have some game on the island. We shall soon be well stocked and live in plenty. Every year, if it please God, we shall be richer; but now you must help me to get the tent up and every thing in order, so that your mamma may find every thing comfortable on her arrival, for she will be very tired, I dare say, walking through the wood. It is a long way for her.“

„Mamma is much better than she was,“ replied

149) To fall in with, stoßen oder gerathen auf.
run oder turn wild, wild werden.

150) To

William. „I think she will soon be quite strong again, especially when she comes to live at this beautiful place.“

„We have a great deal of work to do, more than we can get through before the rainy season, which is a pity, but it can't be helped; by this time next year we shall be more comfortable.“

„Why, what have we to do besides putting up the tents and shifting over here?“

„In the first place we have to build a house, and that will take a long while; we must contrive how we can till it's finished. Then we ought to make a little garden, and sow the seeds which your father brought from England with him.“

„Oh! that will be a nice thing; where shall we make it, Ready?“

„I have looked out for that: we must put a fence across that point of land, and dig up all the brush-wood; the mould is very good.“

„Then what next?“

„Then we shall want a storehouse for all the things we have got, and all that are in the wood and on the beach: we must leave them there till we have time to examine them, and then consider what a many trips we shall have to make with the little boat to bring them all round.“

„Yes, that is very true, Ready. Have we any thing more to do?“

„Plenty; we have to build a turtle pond and a fish pond, and a bathing place for Juno to wash the children in.“

„Yes, and myself too,“ said Juno.

„Well, I dare say a little washing won't hurt you, Juno, although you are a clean girl. But first, Master William, we must make a proper well at the spring, so as to have plenty of fresh water: now there's enough for a year's hard work at least, and as we go on we shall find more wants, I have no doubt.“

„Well, let us once get mamma and the children here, and we will work hard.“

„I should wish very much to see it all done, Master William,” said Ready. „I hope my life will be spared till it is done, at all events. I should like to leave you all comfortable, and able to get on without me.“

„But why do you say that, Ready? you are an old man, but you are strong and healthy.“

„I am so now; but, Master William, what does the Book say? — „In the midst of life we are in death.“ You are young and healthy, and promise a long life; but who knows but that you may be summoned away to-morrow, and your father and mother weeping over your body? Can I, then, an old man, worn out with hardships, expect to live long? No — no, Master William; it is folly in the young, but in an old man it is madness and wickedness. Still I should like to remain here as long as I can be useful, and then I trust I may depart in peace. I never wish to leave this island, Master William; and I have a kind of feeling that my bones will remain on it. God’s will be done!“

For some time after Ready had finished, neither of them said a word, but continued their employment, stretching out the canvass of the tent, and fastening it down to the ground with pegs. At last William broke the silence.

„Ready, did you not say your Christian name was Robinson?“

„So it is, Master William.“

„It is a very odd Christian name! You were called after some other person?“

„Yes, I was, Master William; he was a very rich man.“

„Do you know, Ready, I should like very much if you will one day tell me your history — I mean your whole life, from the time you were a boy.“

„Well, perhaps I may, Master William; for there are many parts of my life which would prove a lesson to others: but that must be after we have got through our work — not yet awhile.“

„How old are you, Ready?“

„I am turned of sixty-four¹⁵¹), Master William; that is a very old age for a seaman. I could not have obtained employment on board of a vessel if it were not that I am well known to several captains.“

„But why do you say old for a seaman?“

„Because sailors live faster than other people, partly from the hardships which they undergo, and partly from their own fault in drinking so much spirits; and then they are too often reckless and care nothing for their healths, and so their constitutions are broken up and destroyed sooner than those of people on shore.“

„But you never drink spirits now?“

„No, never, Master William, but in my early days I was as foolish as others. Now, Juno, we are all ready for you, and you may bring in the bedding. We have two or three hours, yet, Master William; what shall we do next?“

„Had we not better make the fire-place all ready for cooking! Juno and I can bring the stones.“

„You are a thoughtful boy — it was what I was going to propose, if you had not. I shall be here tomorrow long before any of you, and I will take care that you have supper ready upon your arrival.“

„I brought a bottle of water in my knapsack,“ replied William, „not so much for the water, as because I want to milk the goats and take back the milk for baby.“

„Then you proved yourself not only thoughtful but kind, Master William: now while you and Juno fetch the stones, I will stow away under the trees all the things which I have brought down in the boat.“

„Shall we let the goats and sheep loose, Ready?“

„Oh, yes — there is no fear of their straying; the herbage here is better than on the other side, and there is plenty of it. They will remain here, you may depend upon it.“

151) I am turned of sixty-four, ich bin 64 Jahr gewesen.

„Well, I will let Nanny go as soon as Juno has milked her; but that will be the last thing to do before we go back. Now, Juno, let us see how many stones we can carry at once.“

In an hour the fire-place was made, Ready had done all that he could, the goats were milked and let loose, and then William and Juno set off through the wood on their journey back.

Ready went down to the beach. On his arrival there, he observed a small turtle: creeping up softly he got between it and the water, and succeeded in turning it over. „That will do for to-morrow,“ said he, as he stepped into the boat; and, laying hold of the oars, he pulled out of the bay to return to the cove.

CHAPTER XXII.

Ready arrived at the cove, and, having hauled up the boat, proceeded to the tents, where he found the whole party anxiously listening to William, who was detailing what had been done. The arrangements for the next day were made as soon as Ready joined them. They then separated for the night, but Ready and William remained until it was dark, to catch the fowls and tie their legs, ready for their being put in the boat the next morning. At daylight they all were summoned to dress themselves as soon as possible, as Ready wanted to take down the tent in which Mrs. Seagrave and the children had slept; for, with the exception of Tommy, who had been admitted into the women's tent, as they termed it, the others had slept upon some canvass, which they had spread out, under the cocoa-nut trees. All was bustle and confusion; and as soon as Mrs. Seagrave was dressed, the tent was taken down, and, with all the bedding, put into the boat. As soon as they had breakfasted, the plates, knives and forks, and some other necessaries, were also put in; Ready laid the fowls on the top of all, and set off by himself for their new location.

After he was gone, the rest of the party prepared for their journey through the cocoa-nut grove. William led the way, with the three dogs close to his heels, Mr. Seagrave with the baby in his arms, Juno with little Caroline, and Mrs. Seagrave with Master Tommy holding her hand, and, as he said, taking care of his mamma. They bade adieu with regret to the spot which had first received them after their dangers; looked round once more at the cove, and the fragments of the wreck and cargo, strewed about in every direction; and then turned into the wood. Ready arrived at the point, and was again on shore in less than two hours after he had set off. As soon as the boat was safe in, he did not wait to land his cargo, but going up to the turtle which he had turned the day before, he killed it, and cleaned it on the beach. He then went to where they had built up the fire-place with stones, made a fire, filled the iron saucepan full of water, and set it on to boil; he then cut up a portion of the turtle, and put it into the pot, with some slices of salt pork, covered it up, and left it to boil; and having hung up the rest of the turtle in the shade, he went back to the beach to unload the boat. He released the poor fowls, who were very stiff from being so long tied by the legs, but by degrees they recovered themselves, and were very busy seeking for food.

Ready took up all the plates, and knives and forks, and small articles, examined the saucepan, made up the fire again, and then returned for the bedding and canvass of the tents, with the spars which he had towed astern. It was two or three hours before he had carried every thing up, for it was a good distance, and some of the articles were heavy, and the old man was not sorry when he had finished his task, and could sit down to rest himself.

„It's almost time that they should have arrived,“ thought Ready; „they must have started nearly four hours ago; may be not so soon — it's no easy matter to get a convoy of women and children under weigh¹⁵²).“ Ready remained a quarter of an hour more, watching the fire, and occasionally skimming the top of the pot, when the three dogs came bounding towards him.

„Well, they are not far off now,“ observed old Ready.

This was true: in six or seven minutes afterwards the party made their appearance, very hot and very fatigued. It appeared that poor little Caroline had been tired out, and Juno had to carry her; then Mrs. Seagrave complained of fatigue, and they had to rest a quarter of an hour; then Master Tommy, who refused to remain with his mamma, and had been running backwards and forwards from one to the other, had declared that he was tired, and that some one must carry him, but there was no one to carry him, so he began to cry and roar until they stopped for another quarter of an hour till he was rested; but as soon as they went on again, he again complained of being tired, and William had very good-naturedly carried him picka-back¹⁵³) for some time, and in so doing he had missed the blaze cut on the trees, and it was a long while before he could find it again; then baby became hungry; and he cried, and little Caroline was frightened at being so long in the wood, and she cried; and Tommy, because William could carry him no longer, cried louder than all the rest; so they stopped again, and all had a drink out of the bottle of water which William had brought with them, after which they got on better, and arrived at last so very warm and exhausted, that Mrs. Seagrave went into the tent with the children to repose a little, before she could even look at the place which was to be their future residence.

„I think,“ said Mr. Seagrave, who had given the 152) To get under weigh, flott machen, ablaufen lassen.

153) Man sagt pickaback, pickapack, pickback, pickpack.

baby to Juno; „that this little journey of to-day has been a pretty good proof of how helpless we should have been without you, Ready.“

„I am glad that you are here, sir,“ replied Ready, „it is a weight off my mind; now you will get on better. I think that after a while you may live very comfortably here; but still we have much to do. As soon as Madam has rested, we will have our dinner and then fix up our own tent, which will be quite enough after such a hard day's work. To-morrow we will begin in good earnest.“

„Do you go back to the cove to-morrow, Ready?“

„Yes, sir, we want our stores here; I must bring some beef and pork, flour and peas, besides many other things which we cannot do without: it will take about three trips to empty our storehouses; and as to the other things, we can examine them and bring them down at our leisure — they will remain there a long time without taking any harm¹⁵⁴). As soon as I have made those three trips in the boat, we can then work here altogether.“

„But I can do something in the mean time.“

„Oh, yes, there is plenty for you to do.“

„Shall you take William with you?“

„No, sir; he will be more useful here, and I can do without him.“

Mr. Seagrave went into the tent and found his wife much refreshed; but the children had all fallen fast asleep on the beds. They waited another halfhour, and then woke Tommy and Caroline, that they might all sit down to dinner.

„Dear me,“ exclaimed William, as Ready took the cover off the saucepan, „what is it that you have so good there?“

„It's a treat I have prepared for you all,“ replied

154) To take harm, to spoil, to be corrupted, to decay, verderben.

Ready. „I know that you are tired of salt meat, so now you are going to feed like aldermen¹⁵⁵).“

„Why, what is it, Ready?“ said Mrs. Seagrave; „it smells very good.“

„It is turtle soup, ma'am; and I hope you will like it; for, if you do, you may often have it, now that you are on this side of the island.“

„Indeed, it really is excellent; but it wants a little salt. Have you any salt, Juno?“

„Got a little, ma'am. Very little left,“ replied Juno.

„What shall we do, when all our salt is gone?“ said Mrs. Seagrave.

„Juno must get some more,“ replied Ready.

„How I get salt? — hab none left,“ replied Juno, looking at Ready.

„There's plenty out there, Juno,“ said Mr. Seagrave, pointing to the sea.

„I don't know where,“ said Juno, looking in that direction.

„What do you mean, my dear?“ inquired Mrs. Seagrave.

„I only mean if we want salt we can have as much as we please by boiling down salt water in the kettle, or else making a salt pan in the rocks, and obtaining it by the sun drying up the water and leaving the salt; Ready knows that as well as I do. Salt is always procured in that way, either by evaporation, or boiling, which is the same thing, only done quicker.“

„I'll soon arrange that for you, ma'am,“ said Ready, „and show Juno how to get it when she wants it.“

„I am very glad to hear you say so; for I should feel the want of salt very much,“ replied Mrs. Seagrave, „I really never enjoyed a dinner so much as I have to-day.“

The soup was pronounced excellent by every body.

155) like aldermen, warum nicht lieber gleich like Lord-mayors? Letzterer hat seine Würde nur für ein Jahr, die ihm zunächst stehenden aldermen (in London 26) behalten ihre Stelle, so lange sie leben.

Tommy asked to be helped¹⁵⁶⁾ so often that his mother would not give him any more. As soon as they had finished, Mrs. Seagrave remained with the children; and Ready and Mr. Seagrave, assisted by Juno and William, got the second tent up, and every thing ready for the night. By the time they had finished it was nearly dark. They assembled, and returned thanks to God for their having gained their new abode; and, tired out with the fatigue of the day, were soon fast asleep.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Mr. Seagrave was the first up on the ensuing morning; and when Ready came out of the tent, he said to him, „Do you know, Ready, I feel myself much happier and my mind much more at ease since I find myself here, than I did before. On the other side of the island every thing reminded me that we had been shipwrecked; and I could not help thinking of home and my own country; but here we appear as if we had been long settled, and as if we had come here by choice¹⁵⁷⁾.“

„I trust that feeling will be stronger every day, sir; for it's no use¹⁵⁸⁾, and indeed sinful, to repine; we have much to be thankful for.“

„I acknowledge it, my good man, and with all humility. What is the first thing which you wish we should set about¹⁵⁹⁾?“

„I think, sir, the first object is to have a good supply of fresh water; and I therefore wish you and Master William — (here he is. Good morning, Master William) — I was saying that I thought it better that

156) to be helped, daß man ihm vorlege. Help yourself, langen Sie zu. 157) by choice, nach eigener Wahl. 158) no use, vergeblich. 159) To set about a thing, Hand an eine Sache legen.

Mr. Seagrave and you should clear out the spring while I am away in the boat. I brought another shovel with me yesterday, and you both can work; perhaps we had better go there, as Juno I see is getting the breakfast ready. You observe, Mr. Seagrave, we must follow up the spring till we get among the cocoa-nut trees, where it will be shaded from the sun; that is easily done by digging towards them, and watching how the water flows. Then, if you will dig out a hole large enough to sink down in the earth one of the water casks which lie on the beach, I will bring it down with me this afternoon; and then, when it is fixed in the earth in that way, we shall always have the cask full of water for use, and the spring filling it as fast as we can empty it."

"I understand you perfectly," replied Mr. Seagrave; "that shall be our task to-day while you are absent."

"Well, then, I have nothing more to do than to speak to Juno about dinner," replied Ready; "and then I'll just take a mouthful, and be off; — this fine weather must not be lost."

Ready directed Juno to fry some pork in the frying-pan, and then to cut off some slices from the turtle, and cook turtle steaks for dinner, as well as to warm up the soup which was left; and then, with a biscuit and a piece of beef in his hand, he went down to the boat and set off for the cove. Mr. Seagrave and William worked hard; and, by twelve o'clock, the hole was quite large and deep enough, according to the directions Ready had given. They then left their work, and went to the tent, where they found Mrs. Seagrave mending the children's clothes.

"You don't know how much happier I am now that I am here," said Mrs. Seagrave, taking her husband's hand, as he seated himself by her.

"I trust it is a presentiment of future happiness, my dear," said Mr. Seagrave. "I assure you that I feel the same, and was saying so to Ready this morning."

„I feel that I could live here for ever, it is so calm and beautiful; but do you know I miss one thing — there are no birds singing here as in our own country.“

„I have seen no birds except sea-birds, and of them there is plenty. Have you, William?“

„Only once, father. I saw a flight a long way off. Ready was not with me, and I could not tell what they were; but they were large birds, as big as pigeons I should think. There is Ready coming round the point,“ continued William. „How fast that little boat sails! It is a long pull though for the old man when he goes to the cove. Juno, is dinner ready?“

„Yes, Massa William, very soon now.“

„Let us go down and help Ready carry up some of the things before dinner,“ said Mr. Seagrave.

They did so; and William rolled up the empty water-cask which Ready had brought with him.

The turtle-steaks were as much approved of as the turtle-soup; indeed, after having been so long on salt meat, a return to fresh provisions was delightful.

„And now to finish our well,“ said William, as soon as dinner was over.

„How hard you do work, William,“ said his mother.

„So I ought, mother. I must learn to do every thing now.“

„And that you will very soon,“ said Ready.

They rolled the cask to the spring, and, to their astonishment, found the great hole which they had dug not two hours before quite full of water.

„O dear,“ said William, „we shall have to throw all the water out to get the cask down.“

„Think a little, William,“ said Mr. Seagrave, „for the spring runs so fast that it will not be an easy task. Cannot we do something else?“

„Why, father, the cask will float, you know,“ replied William.

„To be sure it will as it is; but is there no way of making it sink?“

„O yes. I know — we must bore some holes in the bottom, and then it will fill and sink down of itself.“

„Exactly, sir,“ replied Ready. „I expected that we should have to do that, and have the big gimblet with me.“

Ready bored three or four holes in the bottom of the cask, and as it floated the water ran into it, and by degrees it gradually sunk down. As soon as the top of the cask was level with the surface they filled in all round with the spade and shovel, and the well was completed.

„To-morrow, when the water is settled, it will be as pure and clear as crystal, and remain so, if not disturbed,“ observed Ready; „so we have done one good job to-day. Now, let us bring up all the other things out of the boat.“

CHAPTER XXIV.

The next morning, as soon as breakfast was over, Mr. Seagrave observed: —

„Now that we have so many things to do, I think, Ready, we ought to lay down a plan¹⁶⁰⁾ of operations; method is every thing when work is to be done: now tell me what you propose shall be our several occupations for the next week, for to-morrow is Sunday; and although we have not yet been able, since we have been cast on shore, to honour the day as we should, I think that now we must and ought to keep it holy.“

„Yes, sir,“ replied Ready; „and I would have proposed it if you had not. To-morrow we will rest from our labour, and ask God's blessing upon our endeavours during the six days of the week; and now, as to your proposition, Mr. Seagrave, — shall we begin first with the lady?“

160) to lay down a plan, einen Plan machen.

„You must not consider that you have ladies with you now, Ready,“ said Mrs. Seagrave, „at least, not fine ladies. My health and strength are recovering fast, and I mean to be very useful. I propose to assist Juno in all the domestic duties, such as the cookery and washing, to look after and teach the children, mend all the clothes, and make all that is required, to the best of my ability: if I can do more I will, and, at all events, you shall often have Juno's services during the best part, if not the whole of the day.“

„I think we may be satisfied with that, Mr. Seagrave,“ replied Ready. „Now, sir, the two most pressing points, with the exception of building the house, are to dig up a piece of ground, and plant our potatoes and seeds; and to make a turtle-pond, so as to catch the turtle and put them in before the season is over.“

„You are right,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „but which ought to be done first?“

„I should say the turtle-pond, as it will be only a few days' work for you, Juno, and Master William. I shall not want your assistance for this next week. I shall fix upon some spot, not far from here, where the trees are thickest in the grove, and cut them down so as to clear out a space in which we will, by and by, build our storerooms; and, as soon as the rainy season has gone by, we can remove all our stores from the other side of the island. It will occupy me the whole of the week, cutting down the trees and sawing them into proper lengths, ready for building the house, and then we must all join our strength and get it up without delay. We must make our windows and, perhaps, our fireplace afterwards; but, at all events, we will be under cover and have dry beds.“

„Can you really manage to get it up in time? How soon do you expect the rains will come on?“

„In three or four weeks: the season is not always exact, but certainly not much later. After next week, I shall probably have the assistance of two of you, if not of all. Now I think of it, I must return to the cove."

„What for?"

„Don't you recollect, sir, your two-wheeled carriage, packed up in matting, which was thrown on shore in the gale? You laughed when you saw it, and said it would be of little use now; but, Mr. Seagrave, the wheels and axle will be very useful, as we can make a wide path to the place when I cut down the trees, and wheel out the logs much more easily than we can drag or carry them."

„That is an excellent idea of yours, Ready. It will, indeed, save a great deal of labour."

„I expect that it will, sir. Master William and I will go away early on Monday morning, and be back before breakfast. To-day we will fix upon the spots where our garden is to be, our turtle-pond to be made, and the trees to be cut down. That shall be our business, Mr. Seagrave; and William and Juno may put things a little more to rights¹⁶¹⁾ here, until we can employ them."

Mr. Seagrave and Ready then walked down to the beach, and, after surveying the reefs for some time, Ready said, „You see, Mr. Seagrave, we do not want too much water for a turtle-pond, as if it is too deep there is a difficulty in catching them when we want them: what we want is a place of water surrounded by a low wall of stones, so that the animals cannot escape, for they cannot climb up, although they can walk on the shelving sand with their flippers. Now, sir, the reef here is high out of the water, and the rocks on the beach nearly fill up that side and prevent them crawling away by the shore. We have, therefore, little more to do than to fill up the two other sides, and then our pond will be complete."

„I see it will not be a very long job either, if we can find loose rocks enough," replied Mr. Seagrave.

161) To put to rights, in Ordnung bringen.

„Almost all those which are on the beach are loose,“ replied Ready, „and there are plenty close to us: some of them will be too heavy to carry; but they can be brought here with the aid of handspikes and crowbars — we have three or four with us. Now, sir, suppose we make a signal for Master William and Juno, and set them to work. They may do something before dinner.“

Mr. Seagrave called and waved his hat, and Juno and William came down to them. Juno was ordered to go back for two handspikes, while Ready explained to William what was to be done. Having staid with them and assisted them for some time after Juno had returned with the implements, Mr. Seagrave and Ready proceeded to the point, to fix upon a spot for a garden, leaving William and Juno to continue their labour.

CHAPTER XXV.

Mr. Seagrave and Ready then continued their way along the beach, until they arrived at the point which the latter had considered as a convenient place to make the garden. They found a sufficiency of mould, although not very deep; and as the point was narrow at its joining on to the main land, no great length of enclosure would be required.

„You see, sir,“ said Ready, „we can wait till after the rainy season is over before we put up the fence, and we can prepare it in the mean time, when the weather will permit us to work. The seeds and potatoes will not come up until after the rains are finished; so all we have to do is to dig up the ground, and put them in as fast as we can. We must clear away this brushwood, which will not be difficult where the soil is so light, and sow a portion of our seeds, for we cannot make a large garden this year; but our potatoes we must contrive to get in, if we cannot manage any thing else."

"If we have no fence to make," replied Mr. Seagrave, "I think we shall be able to clear away quite enough ground in a week to put in all that we require."

"The first job will be to pull up the small brushwood," said Ready, "and turn up the ground: the larger plants we must leave, if we have not time. Master Tommy might be of some use here in taking away the shrubs as you pull them up; but we had better now go on to the grove, and choose the spot for cutting down the trees. I have made my mark. There it is, about fifty yards on the side of the tent. We must walk on about 100 yards straight into the grove."

Ready and Mr. Seagrave proceeded in the direction which the former had pointed out, until they arrived at a spot on a rising ground, where the trees were so thick that it was not very easy to pass through them.

"There is the place, sir," said Ready. "I propose to cut all the timber we want for the houses out of this part of the grove, and to leave an open square place, in the centre of which we will build our store-rooms. You see, sir, if necessary, — although, certainly, there is no appearance of its being likely at present, — with a very little trouble we might turn it into a place of protection and defence, as a few palisades here and there between the trees would make it, what they call in the East Indies, a stockade."

"Very true, my good fellow; but I trust we shall not require it for such a purpose."

"I hope so too, sir; but there is nothing like being prepared¹⁶²): however, we have plenty to do before we can think of doing that. Now, sir, as dinner is ready, suppose we return, and after dinner we will both commence our tasks. I like a beginning, if it be ever so small."

162) There is nothing like being prepared, es geht nichts darüber, vorbereitet zu sein.

Juno and William returned to the dinner which Mrs. Seagrave had prepared. They were both very warm with their work, which was very hard, but very eager to finish their task. Master Tommy had been very troublesome during the whole of the morning: he had not learnt his lesson, and had put a cinder into Caroline's hand and burnt her. He was, therefore, as soon as his father was told of his bad behaviour, condemned to go without his dinner; and he sat down very sulky, looking very wistfully at the victuals as they disappeared; but he did not cry, or ask to be forgiven. After dinner was over, Mrs. Seagrave requested her husband, as he was about to go down to the point, with the spade and a small hatchet in his hand, to take Tommy with him, as she had a great deal to do, and could not watch him as well as the baby and Caroline. So Mr. Seagrave took Master Tommy by the hand, and led him to the point, and made him sit down close to him while he cleared away the brushwood.

Mr. Seagrave worked very hard, and when he had cut down and cleared a portion of the ground, he made Tommy carry away to a little distance, and pile in a heap, the bushes which he had cleared away. This Tommy did very unwillingly, as he was in a bad humour. When Mr. Seagrave had cleared away a large piece of ground with his hatchet, he then took his spade to dig at the roots and turn up the mould, leaving Tommy to amuse himself. What Tommy did for about an hour, during which Mr. Seagrave worked very diligently, his father did not observe; but all of a sudden he began to cry; and when his father asked him the reason, he did not answer, but only cried the more, until at last he put his hands to his stomach, and roared most lustily. As he appeared to be in very great pain, his father left off work, and led him up to the tent, when Mrs. Seagrave came out, alarmed at his cries. He would, however, do nothing but roar, refusing to answer any questions, and his father and mother could not imagine what was the matter with him ¹⁶³). Old Ready, who had heard Master Tommy screaming for so long a while, thought that there might be something serious, and left his work to ascertain the cause. When he heard what had passed he said, — „Depend upon it, sir, the child has eaten something which has made him ill. Tell me, Tommy, what did you eat when you were down there?“

„Berries,“ roared Tommy.

„I thought as much, ma'am,“ said Ready. „I must go and see what the berries were.“ And the old man hastened down to the place where Mr. Seagrave had been at work. In the mean time Mrs. Seagrave was very much alarmed lest the child should have poisoned himself, and Mr. Seagrave went to search among the medicines for some castor-oil.

Ready returned just as Mr. Seagrave came back to the tent with the bottle of castor-oil, and he told Ready that he was about to give Tommy a dose.

„Well, sir,“ replied Ready, who had a plant in his hand, „I don't think you should give him any, for it appears to me that he has taken too much already. See, sir, this is, if I recollect right, — and I'm almost sure that I am right, — the castor-oil plant, and here are some of the castor-oil beans which Master Tommy has been eating. Tell me, Tommy, did you eat them?“

„Yes,“ cried Tommy, putting both hands to his stomach.

„I thought so: give him a little warm drink, ma'am, and he'll soon be better: there's no great harm done; and it will teach him not to eat berries or beans again.“

What Ready said was true; nevertheless Master Tommy was very ill for the whole of the day, and was put into bed very early.

163) What was the matter with him, was mit ihm vorgegangen war.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The next day, when Mr. Seagrave, William, Juno, and Ready were all at work at their allotted tasks, Mrs. Seagrave was sitting down at the front of the tent, the little baby, Albert, crawling close to her, Caroline trying to work with her needle, and Master Tommy was making holes in the ground, and putting a small stone into each hole.

„What are you doing, Tommy?“ said Mrs. Seagrave.

„I'm playing — I'm making a garden,“ replied Tommy.

„But I'm very hungry, I want my dinner.“

„It is dinner-time, Tommy, that is certain, but you must wait until they all come home from their work.“

„There's Ready coming, with a bag on his shoulder,“ replied Tommy.

Ready soon came up to where Mrs. Seagrave was sitting, and laid down the bag. „I've brought you some young cocoa-nuts, and some old ones also, from the trees that I have been cutting down.“

„Oh! cocoa-nuts — I like cocoa-nuts!“ cried Tommy.

„I told you, Tommy, that we should have some by and by, and they have come sooner than we thought. You are very warm, Ready.“

„Yes, ma'am,“ replied Ready, wiping his face; „it is rather warm work, for there is no breeze in the grove to cool one. Is there any thing you want from the other side of the island, for I shall go there directly after dinner?“

„What for?“

„I must bring the wheels to get the timber out; for I must clear it away as I go, until the path is finished. I must have Master William to help me.“

„William will like the trip, I do not doubt: he must be tired of carrying and rolling heavy stones. I do not recollect any thing in particular that we want, Ready," replied Mrs. Seagrave. „There he comes with Juno, and I see Mr. Seagrave has laid down his spade; so Caroline, dear, take care of Albert, while I get the dinner for them.“

Ready assisted Mrs. Seagrave, and the dinner was spread out on the ground, for they had not brought the chairs and tables with them to their new residence, as they thought that they could do without them till the house was built. William reported that Juno and he would have the turtle-pond complete by the next day. Mr. Seagrave had cleared sufficient ground to plant the half sack of potatoes that they had saved from the wreck, so that in a day or two they would be able to put all their strength upon the cutting and drawing of the timber.

After dinner, William and Ready set off in the boat, and, before it was dark, returned with the wheels and axle of the carriage, and several other articles, to make up their load; they also had some thick timber in tow¹⁶⁴), which Ready said would be required for the door-posts of the house. Mr. Seagrave had left his work that afternoon, and gone to the assistance of Juno, and reported that the turtle-pond, although not quite finished, was so far made, that the turtle¹⁶⁵) could not get out if they were put in.

CHAPTER XXVII.

„Now, Master William," said Ready, „if you are not very sleepy, perhaps you would like to come with me to-night, and see if we cannot turn some of the turtle; for the season is going away fast, and they will leave the island very soon.“

164) To have in tow, am Schlepptau haben.
wie fish, sheep, swine etc. im Plural ohne s.

165) Turtle,

„Yes, I should like it very much.“

„Well, then, we must wait till it is dark: there will not be much moon to-night, and that is all the better.“

As soon as the sun had disappeared, William and Ready went down to the beach, and sat quietly on a rock. In a short time, Ready perceived a turtle crawling on the sand, and, desiring William to follow him without speaking, walked softly down by the water's edge, so as to get between the animal and the sea.

As soon as the turtle perceived them, it made for the water, but they met it; and Ready, seizing hold of¹⁶⁶⁾ one of its fore-flippers, turned it over on its back.

„You see, Master William, that is the way to turn a turtle: take care that he does not catch you with his mouth, for if he did, he would bite the piece out. Recollect that: now the animal cannot get away, for he can't turn over again, and we shall find him here to-morrow morning; so we will now walk along the beach, and see if we cannot find some more.“

Ready and William remained till past midnight, during which they turned sixteen turtle, large and small.

„I think that will do, Master William, for once: we have made a good night's work of it, for we have provided food for many days. We must, however, try again in three or four days if we cannot add to our stock. To-morrow we must put them all into the pond.“

„How shall we carry such large animals?“

„We need not carry them; we must put some old canvass under them, and haul them along by that means; we can easily do that on the smooth sand.“

„Why don't we catch some fish, Ready? We might put them into the turtle-pond.“

„They would not stay there long, Master William, nor could we easily get them out if they did. We must make a pond on purpose for fish by and by: we have had no time, for other things have pressed upon us of 166) to seize hold of, ergreifen, erfassen.

more consequence¹⁶⁷). I have often thought of getting some lines ready, and yet the time has never come, for I feel sleepy after our day's work; but as soon as the house is built, we will have them, and you shall be fisherman in chief¹⁶⁸), after I have once shown you how."

„But the fish will bite at night, will they not?"

„Oh yes, and better than they do in the daytime."

„Well, then, if you will get me a line and show me how, I will fish for an hour or so after the work is done; for Tommy is always asking for fried fish; and I know mamma is getting very tired of salt meat, and does not think it good for Caroline. She was very glad when you brought the cocoa-nuts the day before yesterday."

„Well, then, I will get a bit of candle to-morrow night, and fit up two fishing-lines. But I must go with you, Master William. We don't use much candle, at all events."

„No, we are too glad to go to bed: but there are two or three boxes of one sort or another up in the cove. What shall we do when they are all gone?"

„We shall have to use the cocoa-nut oil, and we shall never want for that. Good night, Master William."

The next morning before breakfast all hands were employed in getting the turtle into the pond. After breakfast, William and Juno finished the pond where the walls had not been raised high enough; and, when they returned to dinner, reported that their task was completed. Mr. Seagrave also said that he had, he thought, cleared quite ground enough for the present; and as Mrs. Seagrave wanted Juno to help her to wash the linen that afternoon, it was agreed that William, Ready, and Mr. Seagrave should all go down to the garden, and put in the potatoes.

Ready worked with the spade, while Mr. Seagrave

167) of consequence, von Wichtigkeit. 168) In chief wird, wie im Französischen en chef, sehr oft angehängt (hier Oberfischermeister).

and William cut the potatoes in pieces, so as to have an eye in each piece; and while they were thus occupied, William said to his father, in the course of their conversation —

„There were two cases of books thrown ashore, I think, father?“

„Yes, two or three; but, if I recollect right, I had fifteen or sixteen altogether. — Now that we have finished cutting the potatoes, let us go and assist Ready in planting them and the seeds which we have brought down with us.“

CHAPTER XXVIII.

That night Ready sat up for two or three hours working by candlelight (William keeping him company), very busily engaged fitting up the fishing-lines with leads and hooks. At last two were complete.

What bait must we use, Ready?“

„I should think that the best would be one of the fish out of the shells which are in the sand; but a piece of pork fat will, I dare say, do as well.“

„And whereabouts would you fish, Ready?“

„The best place, I should think, would be at the farthest end of the point, where I got the boat through the reef — the water is deep there close to the rocks.“

„I was thinking, Ready, if those gannets and men-of-war birds would be good eating.“

„Not very, Master William; they are very tough and very fishy: we must try for those when we can get nothing better. Now that we have got in the seeds and potatoes, we must all set to to-morrow morning to fell and carry the timber. I think Mr. Seagrave had better use the axe with me, and you and Juno can, when I have shown you how, hang the timber to the axle, and wheel it out to the place where we have decided upon building the house. And now we had better go to bed."

William, however, had made up his mind¹⁶⁹⁾ to do otherwise; he knew that his mother would be very glad to have some fish, and he determined, as the moon shone bright, to try if he could not catch some before he went to bed; so he waited very quietly till he thought Ready was asleep, as well as the others, and then went out with the lines, and went down to the beach, where he picked up three or four shells, and, breaking them between two pieces of rock, took out the fish and baited his hooks. He then walked to the point. It was a beautiful night; the water was very smooth, and the moonbeams pierced deep below the surface. William threw in his line, and as soon as the lead touched the bottom he pulled it up about a foot, as Ready had instructed him; and he had not held his line more than half a minute, when it was jerked so forcibly, that, not expecting it, he was nearly hauled into the water; as it was, the fish was so strong that the line slipped through his hand and scored his fingers; but after a time he was able to pull it in, and he landed on the beach a large silverscaled fish, weighing nine or ten pounds. As soon as he had dragged it so far away from the edge of the rocks as to prevent its flapping into the water again, William took out the hook and determined to try for another. His line was down as short a time as before, when it was again jerked with violence; but William was this time prepared, and he let out the line and played the fish till it was tired, and then pulled it up, and found that the second fish was even larger than the first. Satisfied with his success, he wound up his lines, and, running a piece of string through the gills of the fish, dragged them back to the tents, and hanged¹⁷⁰⁾ them to the pole, for fear of the dogs eating them; he then went in, and was soon fast asleep. The next morning William was the first up, and showed his prizes¹⁷¹⁾ with much glee; but Ready was very much displeased with him.

169) to make up one's mind, sich entschließen. 170) To hang wird regelmäßig conjugirt, nur wenn es activ ist.

„You did very wrong, Master William, to run the risk which you did. If you were resolved to catch fish, why did you not tell me, and I would have gone with you? You say, yourself, that the fish nearly hauled you into the water; suppose it had done so, or suppose a small shark instead of one of these gropers (as we call them) had taken the bait, you must have been jerked in; and the rocks are so steep there, that you would not have been able to get out again before a shark had hold of you. Think a moment, Master William, of what would have been the distress of your father and of me (for I love you dearly); think what would have been the agony and despair of your poor mother, when this news¹⁷²⁾ should have arrived, and you were not to be found, and never would have been seen again.“

„I was very wrong, Ready,“ replied William, „now that I think of it; but I wanted to surprise and please my mother.“

„That reason is almost sufficient to plead your pardon, my dear boy,“ replied Ready; „but don't do so again¹⁷³⁾. Recollect, I am always willing and anxious to go with you wherever you wish. And now let us say no more about it; nobody will know that you have been in danger, and there's no harm done; and you mustn't mind an old man¹⁷⁴⁾ scolding you a little.“

„No, indeed, Ready, I do not, for I was very thoughtless; but I had no idea that there was danger.“

„There's your mother coming out of her tent,“ replied Ready. — „Good morning, madam. Do you know what William has done for you last night? Look, 171) prize, Preis, Lohn, Brämie — price, Preis (für eine Waare &c.). 172) News ist nämlich im Singular und Plural gleich; man sagt this und these news. 173) Don't do so again, thut das nicht wieder. 174) you-little, ihr müßt euch nichts daraus machen, wenn euch ein alter Mann ein wenig ausschilt.

madam, here are two beautiful fish, and very excellent eating they are, I can tell you."

"I am quite delighted," replied Mrs. Seagrave. "Tommy, come her. Don't you want some fried fish?"

"Yes," replied Tommy.

"Then look up at the pole of the tent."

Tommy clapped his hands and danced about, crying, "Fried fish for dinner;" and Juno said, "Have very fine dinner to-day, Missy Caroline."

After breakfast they all set out for the grove, where Ready had been cutting down the trees, taking with them the wheels and axle, and a couple of stout ropes. Mr. Seagrave and Ready cut down the trees and slung them to the spot where the house was to be built.

They were not sorry when dinner was ready, for it was very hard work; and Tommy was so ravenous, although he had done nothing, that at last they were obliged to prevent his eating any more.

That night, tired as they were, Ready and William went out, and turned eight more turtle. They continued felling the cocoa-nut trees and dragging the timber for the remainder of the week, when they considered that they had nearly enough to commence building. Sunday was passed in devotion and quiet. On the Monday night they turned nine more turtle, and caught three large fish; and on the Tuesday morning they commenced building the house.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Ready had cut out and prepared the door-posts and window-frames from the timber which he had towed round from the cove. He now fixed four poles in the earth upright at each corner, and then, with the assistance of Mr. Seagrave, notched every log of cocoa-nut wood on both sides, where it was to meet with the one crossing it, so that, by laying log upon log alternately, they fitted pretty close, and had only to have the chinks between them filled in with cocoa-nut leaves twisted very tight, and forced between them: this latter was the work of William and Juno when no more logs were ready for carrying; and, by degrees¹⁷⁵), the house rose up from its foundation. The fire-place could not be made at once¹⁷⁶), as they had either to find clay, or to burn shells into lime and build it up with rocks and mortar; but a space was left for it. For three weeks they worked very hard: as soon as the sides were up, they got on the whole of the roof and rafters; and then, with the broad leaves of the cocoa-nut trees which had been cut down, Ready thatched it very strong and securely, keeping the thatch down with the weight of heavy poles slung over the top of the roof with stout ropes. At the end of the three weeks the house was secure from¹⁷⁷) the weather; and it was quite time, for the weather had begun to change, the clouds now gathered thick, and the rainy season was commencing. They had a very violent shower one day, and then the weather cleared again.

„We have no time to lose, sir,“ said Ready to Mr. Seagrave. „We have worked hard, but we must for a few days work harder still. We must fit up the inside of the house, so as to enable madam to get into it as soon as possible.“

The earth in the inside of the house was then beaten down hard, so as to make a floor; and a sort of bedstead, about two feet from the ground, running the whole length of the house, was raised on each side of the interior: these were fitted with canvass screens to let down by night. And then Ready and William took the last trip in the boat to fetch down the chairs 175) By degrees, nach und nach. 176) at once, auf einmal.

177) Secure from, sicher vor So auch safe from, shielded from.

and tables, which they did just before the coming on of the first storm of the season. The bedding and all the utensils were now taken into the house; and a little outhouse was built up to cook in, until the fireplace could be made.

It was late on the Saturday night that the family were shifted into the new house; and fortunate it was that they had no further occasion for delay, for on the Sunday morning the first storm burst upon them; the wind blew with great force: and, although they were shielded from it, still the cocoa-nut trees ground and sawed each other's stems as they bent their heads to its force. The lightning was vivid, and the thunder appalling, while the rain descended in such a continual torrent that it appeared as if another¹⁷⁸⁾ deluge was at hand. The animals left the pastures, and sheltered themselves in the grove; the dogs crouched under the bed-places; and, although noonday, it was so dark that they could not see to read.

„This, then, is the rainy season which you talked about, Ready,“ said Mrs. Seagrave. „Is it always like this? If so, what shall we do?“

„No, madam; the sun will shine sometimes, but not for a long while at a time¹⁷⁹⁾. We shall be able to get out and do something every now and then¹⁸⁰⁾ almost every day, but still we shall have rain, perhaps, for many days without intermission, and we must work indoors; I dare say we shall find plenty to do.“

„How thankful we ought to be that we have a house over our heads; why, we should have been drowned in the tents!“

„That I knew, madam, and therefore I was anxious to get a house over your head; let us thank God for it.“

„Indeed we ought,“ observed Mr. Seagrave; „and

178) another, eine zweite. 179) at a time, auf einmal.
180) Every now and then, dann und wann.

it is, indeed, time for us to read the service ¹⁸¹). Are you ready, my dear?"

„Quite ready; and I'm sure we shall offer up our prayers this day with grateful hearts, for He has been most bountiful to us.“

The morning service was then performed in the new house. Violent as the rain was, it did not penetrate through the thatch which had been put on. Ready and William went out to secure the boat, which they were afraid would be injured, and returned wet to the skin. They dined off cold meat, but they were very happy. The storm continued without intermission the whole of the night, but they slept dry and safe; and, when awakened by the noise of the thunder and the pelting of the rain, they thanked God that they had found a dwelling in the wilderness upon which they had been cast.

CHAPTER XXX.

At the end of the last chapter we left off where our party on the island had taken possession of their new house, at the commencement of the rainy season. It was on Saturday, and a storm had come on, which had continued during the whole night; for the storms are very violent in the tropical countries, when the rainy season (which is equivalent to our winter) first makes its appearance. When, however, they all rose up the next morning, the clouds had cleared off, and the sun was shining bright. Ready and Juno were the first out of the house — Ready with the telescope under his arm, which he always took with him when he went his rounds, as he termed it, in the morning.

„Well, Juno,“ said Ready, „this is a fine morning after the rain.“

181) to read the service, das Kirchengebet verrichten.

„Yes, Massa Ready, very fine morning; but how I get fire light, and make kittle¹⁸²⁾ boil for breakfast, I really don't know — stick and cocoa-nut trash all so wet.“

„Before I went to bed last night, Juno, I covered up the embers with ashes, put some stones over them, and then some cocoa-nut branches; so I think you will find some fire there yet. You see, Juno, we must do our best; we can't do every thing at once; but next year, if we live and do well, I dare say we shall have a stack of dry fuel, and well thatched, all ready for the rainy season. I was going my morning's round, but I will stay a little and help you.“

„Tank you, Massa Ready; plenty rain fall last night.“

„Yes, not a little, Juno; you must not expect to find the water at the well very clear this morning; indeed, I doubt if you will see the well at all. Here's some stuff which is not very wet.“

„I got plenty of fire, too,“ replied Juno, who had removed the branches and stones, and was now on her knees blowing up the embers.

„You'll do very well now, Juno,“ said Ready; „besides, Master William will be out directly — so I'll leave you.“

Ready whistled to the dogs, who came bounding out, and then set off on his round of inspection. He first directed his steps to the well in the ravine; but, instead of the gushing spring and the limpid, clear water, with which the cask sunk for a well¹⁸³⁾ had been filled, there was now a muddy torrent, rushing down the ravine, and the well was covered with it, and not to be distinguished.

„I thought as much,“ said Ready, musing over the impetuous stream; „well, better too much water than too little.“ Ready waded through, as he wished to examine the turtle-pond, which was on the other side of the stream. Finding all right, he again crossed the water, where it was now spread wide over the sandy beach, until he came to the other point, where he had moored his boat, both by the head and stern, with a rope, and a heavy stone made fast to it, as an anchor.

182) Kittle für Kettle, Kessel. 183) Sunk for a well, welches (Faß) eingesenkt worden war, um gleichsam einen Brunnen daraus zu bilden.

From this point, as usual, he surveyed the horizon with his telescope; not that he thought that there was a chance of a vessel arriving among these islands; but, still, as it was possible, he took the trouble; but never except when he went out in the morning alone, as he was aware, that the very circumstance of his so doing would make Mr. Seagrave melancholy and unsettled. As usual¹⁸⁴⁾, he dropped the telescope on his arm, after his survey, saying to himself, „Little use doing that¹⁸⁵⁾.“

The gale having blown off shore, the boat had dragged her moorings¹⁸⁶⁾, and was so far out, that Ready could not get at her.

„Here's a puzzle¹⁸⁷⁾,“ said the old man; „how foolish of me not to have made a line fast to the shore. I'll not trust myself to John Shark¹⁸⁸⁾ by swimming to the boat.“

„Let me see.“ Ready took the halyards¹⁸⁹⁾ and sheets belonging to the boat's sails, which he had left on the beach, and bent one on to the other until he had sufficient length of rope. He then made a piece of wood, about two feet long, fast by the middle to the end of the rope, and, after one or two attempts, contrived to throw it into the boat. The piece of wood caught under one of the thwarts, and this enabled him

184) As usual, für as usually. 185) Little use doing that, das will Alles nicht viel helfen. 186) had—moorings, der Anker hatte sich vom Ankergrunde losgezogen. 187) Here's a puzzle, das ist eine hübsche Verlegenheit. 188) John Shark, spottweise Personification des Haiſſches. 189) halyards, gewöhnlicher halliards, Ziehtaue, sogenannte Gallen.

to draw the boat to the shore. Having bailed out the water which had fallen into her during the storm, he then landed again and examined the garden.

„Now to find the sheep and goats,” said Ready, „and then my morning’s walk is over. Now, Romulus, now, Remus, boys, find them out,” continued he; and the dogs, who appeared to know what he was in search of, went away in pursuit, and soon found the sheep and two of the goats, but the third goat was not with them.

„Why, where can Black Nanny be?” muttered old Ready, stopping a little while; at last he heard a bleat, in a small copse of brushwood, to which he directed his steps, followed by the dogs. „I thought as much” said the old man, as he perceived Nanny lying down in the copse with two new-born kids at her side. „Come, my little fellows, we must find some shelter for you,” said he, taking one up under each arm. „Come, Nanny. Down, Romulus, down, sir,” said he to the dog, who had jumped up at the kids. „How dare you, sir? Down, I say. Aye! there you are down, sure enough.” And so he was, for Nanny, not liking the dog’s approach to her young ones, had rushed upon him and butted him till he tumbled over and over. Ready walked back to the house, and brought in the kids, followed by Nanny. He found Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave and the children all dressed. Caroline and Tommy gave a scream of delight when they saw the little kids, and even little Albert clapped his hands. As soon as Ready put them down on the ground, Tommy and Caroline had each of them their arms round one.

— „I’ve brought an addition to our family, Mrs. Seagrave,” said Ready: „I must request you to allow them to remain in the house until I can knock up a little shelter for them. This is only a beginning; I expect we shall soon have more.”

As soon as the children could be persuaded to part with the kids, Nanny was tied up in a corner, and was very content with fondling and nursing her progeny. Juno and William brought in the breakfast, and as soon as it was over, Mr. Seagrave said, „Now, Ready, I think we must hold a council, and make arrangements as to our allotted duties and employments during the rainy season. We have a great deal to do, and must not be idle.“

„What do you think we ought to do first, Ready?“

„Well, sir, our first job will be to haul up the boat and secure her from harm; we will half-dock¹⁹⁰⁾, her in the sand, and cover her over: for I do not think it will be safe to go in her now to the other side of the island, where the sea will always be rough; indeed the weather will be too uncertain to calculate upon even two or three hours of smooth water.“

„There I perfectly agree with you. Now what is the next?“

„Why, sir, we must not leave the tents where they are, but take them down, and as soon as they are dry, stow them away, for we may want them by-and-by; then, sir, we must build a large outhouse for our stores and provisions, with a thatched roof, and a floor raised about four feet from the ground; and then, under the floor, the sheep and goats will have a protection from the weather. We can easily run that up¹⁹¹⁾; we must cover in¹⁹²⁾ three sides, and that we can do with cocoa-nut boughs in a very short time. Then, sir, there is the fish-pond to make, and also a salt-pan to cut out of the rock; but those we must do when we have no other work. Then we have two more long jobs. One is, to go through the woods and examine the stores we have left on the other side of the island, sort and arrange them all ready for bringing here after the rains are over; and we must also explore the island

190) To dock ist hier eigentlich so viel als: to draw or place a ship into a dock; to half-dock also: halb und halb wie in einen Dock in Sicherheit bringen. 191) To run up, hier: to thrust up (as any thing long and slender.) 192) To cover in, wie im Deutschen: eindecken (ein Dach).

a little, sir, and find out what it produces; for you see, sir, at present we know nothing of it; we may find a great many things useful to us, a great many trees and fruits, and I hope and trust we may be able to find some more grass for our live stock; for you see, sir, if it is to increase so as to be useful to us, we shall not have food for them here; especially if we want more land for our seeds, which we probably shall."

"I agree with you in all you say, Ready," replied Mr. Seagrave; "now how shall we divide our strength?"

"We will not divide at present, sir, if you please. Juno has plenty to do indoors¹⁹³⁾ with Mrs. Seagrave; Master William, and you, and I, will first secure the boat and stow away the tents and gear; after that, we will set about the outbuilding, and work at it when we can. If Juno has any time to spare, she had better collect the cocoa-nut leaves, and pile them up for fuel; and Master Tommy will, I dare say, go with her, and show her how to draw them along."

"Yes, I'll show her," said Tommy, getting on his feet.

"Not just now, Master Tommy, said Ready, "but as soon as your Mamma can spare her to go with you. Come, sir, a few hours of weather like this is not to be lost," continued Ready; "we shall have more rain before the day is over, I expect. If you please, sir, I will first go to the tent for the shovels, and take them down with me; then I will haul the boat round to the beach and meet you there. You and Master William can take some cord, tie up a large bundle of cocoa-nut boughs, sling it to the wheels, and draw it down to the beach and meet me."

"That will do, Ready," said Mr. Seagrave. "Come, William."

193) Indoors, im Hause, im Gegensatz von out-door.

CHAPTER XXXI.

As so many cocoa-nut trees had been cut down to build the house, there were plenty of boughs lying in every direction, and William and Mr. Seagrave had soon procured sufficient. They found, on their arrival at the beach, that Ready had brought round the boat, and had laid the rollers all ready for hauling it up. In a very short time the boat was drawn up about ten yards from the water's edge, which Ready said was quite sufficient; they then dug from under with their shovels until the boat was sunk¹⁹⁴) about half down in the sand.

Having filled in the sand all round her up to her gunnel, the boat was then carefully covered over with the boughs, which were weighed down with sand that they might not be blown away.

„I don't see why you should cover the boat up in this way, Ready; the rain won't hurt her,“ observed William.

„No, sir, the rain won't do her any harm, but the sun will, when it bursts out occasionally; for it's very powerful when it does shine, and it would split her all to pieces.“

„I forgot that,“ replied William. „What shall we do now, Ready?“

„Suppose, as we have two hours to dinner-time, you run for the lines, Master William, and we'll try for some fish.“

„We cannot all three of us fish with only two lines,“ said Mr. Seagrave.

„No, sir; and as Master William knows how to catch them, suppose you remain with him, and I will go up and collect wood and chips for Juno's fire. She was hard pressed for it this morning, it was so wet;

194) Was sunk, versunken war, had sunk, gesunken war.

but, if once piled up, it will soon be dry. Be careful, Mr. Seagrave, if you please, and do not hold the lines tight in your hands, or you may be jerked into the water. I've cautioned Master William, but it may be as well for you to caution him again, for he is young and very eager."

Ready met William returning with the lines, and thought it right to remind him of the danger he ran when he was fishing the last time, and then went on to his work, dragging after him the wheels and the axe, as they were no longer required at the beach.

Mr. Seagrave and William were very fortunate; before the two hours were expired¹⁹⁵⁾ they had caught eight large fish¹⁹⁶⁾, which they brought up to the house slung on the boat-hook, which Ready had advised them to take with them to haul the fish out of the water, that they might not break their lines. Tommy hallooed loudly for fish for dinner, and as they had caught so many, it was agreed that the dinner should be put off until some should be got ready, and they were not sorry to eat them instead of the salt pork which was to have been¹⁹⁷⁾ their only fare on that day.

They had hardly sat down to table, when the rain came pattering down on the roof, and in a quarter of an hour the storm was as violent, and the thunder and lightning as terrific as on the day before. All the out-door¹⁹⁸⁾ labour was again suspended. Mrs. Seagrave, Juno, and Caroline, took their work, for there was plenty to do with the needle and thread, and Ready soon found employment for the rest. William and Mr. Seagrave unlaaid some thick rope, that Ready might make smaller and more useful rope with the yarns. Ready took up his sailing needles, and worked eyelet holes in the canvass screens (which they had put up in a hurry), so that they might be drawn to and fro as required; and Tommy was given a tangled hank of twine to clear out, which, as he was tired of doing nothing, he worked at very patiently. As soon as Ready had hung up the curtains, he looked under the bedsteads for a large bundle, and said, as he opened it, „I shall now decorate Madam Seagrave's sleeping place. It ought to be handsomer than the other.“ The bundle was composed of the ship's ensign, which was red, and a large, square, yellow flag,¹⁹⁹⁾ with the name of the ship Pacific in large black letters upon it. These two flags Ready festooned and tied up round the bed-place, so as to give it a very gay appearance, and also to hide the rough walls of the cottage.

195) Hier würden viele Andere had expired gesagt haben. (S. d. vorige Note.) 196) Gewöhnlich fishes, wenn gezählt. Dagegen richtig weiter unten: Tommy hallooed loudly for fish. 197) Which was to have been, welches vorher bestimmt war, zu sein u. 198) S. d. 193te Note.

„Indeed, Ready, I am much obliged to you,“ said Mrs. Seagrave, when he had finished; „it is really quite grand for this place.“

„It's the best use we can put them to now, madam,“ said Ready.

„I am afraid so,“ replied Mr. Seagrave, thoughtfully.

„Ready,“ said William, after the candles were lighted, „you once half-promised me that you would tell me your history; I wish you would tell us some of it now, as it will pass away the evening.“

„Well, Master William, I did say so, and I shall keep my word. When you have heard my story, you will say that I have been very foolish in my time; and so I have; but if it proves a warning to you, it will, at all events, be of some use.“

„We shall like to hear it very much,“ said Mrs. Seagrave.

199) A flag (ensign or banner) by which the ships of one nation are distinguished from those of another. In the British navy, an admiral's flag is displayed at the main-top-gallant masthead, a vice admiral's at the fore-top-gallant masthead, a rear admiral's at the mizzen-top-gallant masthead. (S. d. 33fte Note.)

„Well, madam, then you shall hear it;“ and Ready then commenced his history as follows:

History of Old Ready.

„Of course, you wish to know who my father and mother were: that is soon told. My father was the captain of a merchant vessel, which traded from South Shields²⁰⁰) to Hamburgh, and my poor mother, God bless her, was the daughter of a half-pay²⁰¹) militia captain, who died about two months after their marriage. The property which the old gentleman had bequeathed to my mother was added to that which my father had already vested in the brig, and he then owned one-third of the vessel; the other two-thirds were the property of a very rich ship-builder and owner, of the name of Masterman. What with²⁰²) the profits of the share he held of the vessel and his pay as captain, my father was well to do²⁰³). Mr. Masterman, who had a very high opinion of my father, and gained much money by his exertions and good management, was present at the marriage, and when I was born, about a year afterwards, he stood for me as godfather. Every one considered that this was a most advantageous circumstance for me, and congratulated my father and mother, for Mr. Masterman was a bachelor, of nearly sixty years, without any near relations. It is true, that he was very fond of money; but that they said was all the better²⁰⁴), as he could not take it away with him²⁰⁵) when he died. An end, however, was soon put to all their worldly ideas, for a year after I was born, my father was drowned at sea, his vessel and the whole of her crew being lost on the Texel sands²⁰⁶); and my mother found herself a widow, with a child scarcely weaned, when she was but twenty-two years of age.

200) An beiden Seiten der Mündung des Flusses Tyne in England liegt North and South Shields. 201) a half-pay militia captain, ein Capitain von den Landtruppen auf halbem Sold. 202) What with — and, theils — theils. 203) My father was well to do, mein Vater hatte sein gutes Auskommen. 204) That was all the better, das war nur um so besser. 205) With him, statt with himself, mit Präpositionen sehr gewöhnlich.

„It was supposed that my mother would still have sufficient to live upon, as the ship had been insured at two-thirds of her value; but, to the astonishment of every body, Mr. Masterman contrived to make it appear that it was his two-thirds of the vessel which had been insured.“

„How far the assertion of Mr. Masterman was correct or not, it was impossible at the time to say; but I do know that every body cried out shame²⁰⁷), and that if he did deprive the widow, he had much to answer for; for the Bible says, pure religion is to visit the fatherless and the widows, in their affliction and to keep yourself unspotted in the world. The consequence was, that my mother had little or nothing to live upon; but she found friends who assisted her, and she worked embroidery, and contrived to get on somehow until I was eight or nine years of age.“

„But did not your godfather, Mr. Masterman, come forward²⁰⁸) to the assistance of your mother?“ inquired Mr. Seagrave.

„No, sir, strange to say²⁰⁹), he did not; and that made people talk the more. I believe it was the abuse of him, which he did not fail to hear²¹⁰), and which he ascribed to my mother, which turned him away from us; perhaps it was his own conscience, for we always dislike those we have injured, becoming vexed with them instead of being vexed with ourselves.“

„Unfortunately, there is great truth in that remark of your's, Ready,“ observed Mr. Seagrave; „still, it is strange that he did not do something.“

206) The Texel sands, bei Amsterdam. 207) To cry out for shame, seine Entrüstung an den Tag legen. 208) To come forward, hier: sich bereit zeigen, sich melden, sich erbieten. 209) Strange to say, etwa: sonderbar muß es genannt werden. 210) He did not fail to hear, er mußte unfehlbar hören.

„It was very strange, sir — at least, so it appeared at the time; but he was very fond of money, and irritated at the reports and observations which were made about him. But, to go on²¹¹⁾, sir, I was a strong active, hardy boy, and, whenever I could escape from my mother or school, was always found by the water side or on board of the vessels; for I took naturally to every thing connected with the sea. In the summer time I was half the day in water, and was a very good swimmer. My mother perceived my fondness for the profession, and tried all she could to divert my thoughts some other way. She told me of the dangers and hardships which sailors went through, and always ended with my father's death and a flood of tears.“

„We certainly are of a perverse nature, as I have often heard the clergyman say, for it appears to me that we always wish to do that which we are told not to do. If my mother had not been always persuading me against going to sea, I really believe I might have staid²¹²⁾ at home. Mine was a proud nature²¹³⁾ when I was a child. I suppose I got it from my father, for my mother, poor thing, was humble enough. I could not bear that any boy should do what I could not; and I often ventured so rashly, that I might do more than other boys dared to do, that it was a wonder, as every one then said, that I had not lost my life a hundred times; and my poor mother was continually hearing of some danger that I was in, and she would first scold and then entreat me not be so venturesome, and then she would go into her room and weep and pray, for I was her only hope and comfort, and all that bound her to the world. I've often thought since, how selfish and unfeeling I must have been. I was too young to know what pain I was giving her, and how anxiety was preying upon her, all on my account. Children cannot feel it; if they did, they would do otherwise, for our hearts are seldom hard until we grow older."

211) To go on, um in meiner Rede fortzufahren. 212) Staid von to stay, wie paid von pay, laid von lay, said von say. 213) Mine was a proud nature, ich war von stelzer Gemüthsart.

"I agree with you, Ready," said Mr. Seagrave. "If children really knew how much their parents suffer when they behave ill, how alarmed they are at any proofs of wickedness in them, they would be much better."

"We never find that out, sir, till it is too late," continued Ready. "Well, sir, I was little more than nine years old, when, on a very windy day, and the water rough, a hawser, by which a vessel was fast to the wharf, was carried away with a violent jerk, and the broken part, as it flew out, struck a person who was at the edge of the wharf, and knocked him into the sea. I heard the crying out, and the men from the wharf and from the ships were throwing ropes to him, but he could not catch hold of them; indeed, he could not swim well, and the water was rough. I caught a rope that had been hauled in again, and leapt off the wharf."

"Young as I was, I swam like a duck, and put the rope into his hands just as he was going down. He clung to it as drowning men only can cling, and was hauled to the piles, and soon afterwards a boat, which had been lowered from the stern of one of the vessels, picked us both up. We were taken to a public-house²¹⁴) and put into bed till dry clothes could be sent for us; and then I found that the person I had saved was my godfather, Mr. Masterman. Every one was loud in my praise; and, although perhaps I ought not to say it (and, indeed, I do not say it out of vanity), it was a bold act for so young a boy as I was. The sailors took me home to my mother in a sort of triumphant procession; and she, poor thing, when she heard what I had done, embraced me over and over again, one moment rejoicing at my preservation, and the next weeping bitterly at the thoughts of the danger I had encountered, and the probability that my bold spirit would lead me into still greater."

214) Public-house, a house open for general entertainment, also an inn, a tavern, a hotel.

"But she did not blame you for what you had done?"

"O no, Master William; she felt that I had done my duty towards my neighbour, and perhaps she felt in her own heart that I had returned good for evil; but she did not say so. The next day, Mr. Masterman called upon us; he certainly looked very foolish and confused when he asked for his godson, whom he had so long neglected. My mother, who felt how useful he might be to me, received him very kindly; but I had been often told of his neglect of me and my mother, and of his supposed unfair conduct towards my father, and had taken a violent dislike to him; his advances towards me were therefore very coolly received. I felt glad²¹⁵⁾ that I had saved him; but although I could not exactly understand my own feelings at the time, I am ashamed to say that my pleasure was not derived from having done a good action, so much as indulging a feeling of revenge in having put one under an obligation who had treated me ill: this arose from my proud spirit, which my mother could not check. So you see, Master William, there was very little merit in what I had done, as, after I had done it, I indulged those feelings which I ought to have checked."

"I think I could not have helped²¹⁶⁾ feeling the same, Ready, under such circumstances," replied William.

"If I had felt it in a true Christian spirit, Master William, it would have been different. Returning good for evil is the great duty of a Christian, and had I saved Mr. Masterman, knowing that I was saving him 215) To feel glad, auch to feel one's self glad. So früher: she felt herself much refreshed. 216) I could not help feeling, ich konnte mich des Gefühls nicht entwehren.

with that feeling in my heart, it had been praiseworthy; but I did not know that it was he when I saved him; and the question is, had I known who it was that was struggling in the water, should I have risked my life for him? or, if I had done so, would it not have been with the same feeling which I indulged in²¹⁷⁾ after having saved him — a feeling that I had revenged myself²¹⁸⁾ on him for his conduct, for there is no revenge greater than in putting an enemy under an obligation?“

„You analyse yourself very minutely, Ready,“ said Mr. Seagrave, „and I think hardly do justice to yourself.“

„The heart is deceitful and desperately wicked, sir,“ replied Ready. „The impulse which induced me to act was good; the feeling which I indulged in afterwards took away the whole merit of the deed. I am stating what I believe to be the truth, sir; and an old man like me can look upon the past without bias, but not without regret: well, sir, to go on with my story. Mr. Masterman made but a short visit; he told my mother that he would now take care of me, and bring me up to the business of a ship-builder as soon as I was old enough to leave school, and that in the meantime he would pay all my expenses. My poor mother was very grateful, and shed tears of joy; and when Mr. Masterman went away, she embraced me, and said, that now she was happy, as I should have a profession on shore and not go to sea. I must do justice to Mr. Masterman; he kept his word, and sent money to my mother, so that she became quite cheerful and comfortable²¹⁹⁾, and every one congratulated her, and she used to fondle me, and say, it was all through me that she was relieved from her distress.“

217) To indulge, transitiv, 3. B. to indulge children in passions, daher eigentlich which I indulged myself in. Man läßt aber das reflexive Pronomen sehr gern weg. (S. d. 215te Note) 218) Hier könnte myself eben so wenig wegbleiben, als bei to betray. 219) to comfort, to correct. (S. Feller's Grammatik in Beispielen, Leipzig 1842, S. 62.)

„How happy that must have made you, Ready,“ said William.

„Yes, sir, it did, but it made me also very proud; strange to say, I could not conquer my dislike to Mr. Masterman; I had nourished the feeling too long. I could not bear that my mother should be under obligations to him, or that he should pay for my schooling; it hurt my foolish pride, young as I then was; and although my mother was happy, I was not. Besides, as I was put to a better school, and was obliged to remain with the other boys, I could no longer run about the wharfs, or go on board the vessels, as before; and thus I was deprived of all my former enjoyments. I did not see then, as I do now, that it was all for my good; but I became discontented and unhappy, merely because I was obliged to pay attention to my learning, and could no longer have my own way. The master complained of me; and Mr. Masterman called²²⁰⁾ and scolded me well. I became more disobedient, and then, by Mr. Masterman's desire, I was punished. This irritated me against him, and I made up my mind that I would run away and go to sea. You see, Master William, I was all in the wrong²²¹⁾; and so will all boys who are proud, and think they know better than those who have charge of them; and now only see, Master William, what I probably lost by my foolish conduct. I say probably, for no one can calculate or foresee what is to take place; but, as far as appearances went, I had every prospect of receiving a good education — of succeeding Mr. Masterman in his business, and, very probably, of inheriting his large fortune; so that I might have been at this time a rich and well-educated man, surrounded with all the comforts and luxuries of life; perhaps, with an amiable wife and large family round me, to make me still happier, instead of being what I now am, a poor, worn-out old 220) called, hier: besuchte uns. 221) I am in the wrong, in the right, ich habe Unrecht, Recht.

seaman upon a desert isle. I point this out to you, Master William, to shew²²²⁾ how one false and foolish step in the young may affect their whole prospects in life; and, instead of enabling them to sail down with the stream of prosperity, may leave them to struggle against the current of adversity, as has been the case with me."

"It is, indeed, a good lesson, Ready," said Mr. Seagrave.

"It is; not that I repine at my lot, even while I regret the errors that led to it. I am not discontented with my position, for that were sinful. An allwise²²³⁾ and gracious God disposes of us as he thinks best; and I can now say with perfect sincerity, Thy will, not mine, be done."

"Your misfortunes have, however, proved an incalculable benefit to us, Ready," observed Mrs. Seagrave; "for had you not gone to sea, and been on board of the ship when the crew deserted us, what would have become of us?"

"Well, madam, it is some comfort to think that a worn-out old seaman like myself has been of some use; perhaps, madam, as it is our usual time to go to bed, I had better leave off now, and tell some more of my history to-morrow evening."

"If you please, Ready," said Mr. Seagrave. "William my dear, bring the Bible."

As soon as the evening prayers were finished, the screens were put up, and they were soon all in bed and fast asleep.

222) Tho shew, better to show; ebenso to strow, to sow.

223) Man sagt allwise, almighty, all-judging, all-knowing, aber auch omniscient, omnipotent, omnipresent.

CHAPTER XXXII.

The bleating of the kids woke them the next morning earlier than usual. The weather was again fine, and the sun shining brightly, and Ready turned out Nanny and her progeny. They had an excellent breakfast of fried fish, and then Mr. Seagrave, Ready, and William, went out to their work: the two first took down the tents, and spread the canvass on the ground, that it might be well dried, while William went in pursuit of the fowls, which had not been seen for a day or two. After half an hour's search in the cocoa-nut grove, he heard the cock crow, and soon afterwards found them all. He threw them some split peas, which he had brought with him, for the barley and wheat they had resolved to save, that they might sow them as soon as they had more ground cleared; and then, if flour should run short²²⁴), they had several casks of it on the other side of the island, which they had saved when the ship had been broken up, and were therefore in no immediate want. The fowls, which were hungry enough, followed William home to the house, where he left them and went to join Ready and his father.

„Then, Master William, I think, now that we have spread out the tents, we will, if Mr. Seagrave approves of it, all set to at once and knock up²²⁵) a fowl-house: it won't be more than a day's job, and then the creatures will have a home. There are four very thick cocoa nut trees close to the house; we will build it under them; it will be a good job over.“ Mr. Seagrave assented, and they set immediately to work. There were many thin poles left, the tops of the cocoa-nut trees which had been cut down to build the house;

224) To run short, knapp oder selten werden. 225) to knock up, zusammenschlagen d. h. leicht aufbauen.

these they nailed to the trunks of the four trees, so as to make a square, and then they ran up rafters for a pitched roof.

„Now, sir, this is only rough work; we will first put up a perch or two for them, and then close in the side, and thatch the roof with cocoa-nut branches; but there's Juno taking in the dinner, so we'll finish it afterwards.“

After their meal the work was renewed; Mr. Seagrave collected the branches while William and Ready worked upon the sides and roof, and before the evening closed in, the fowl-house was complete. William enticed the fowls down to it with some more split peas, and then walked away.

„Now, sir, the creatures will soon find their way in; and by-and-by, when I have time, I'll make a door to the entrance. I think Miss Caroline might be put into authority here, and take care of the fowls and chickens when they come.“

„Yes, that shall be her charge,“ said William; „she'll be delighted when she hears that she's to be mistress of the hen roosts. And now I think we had better roll up the canvass of the tents; we have had a splendid day, and may not be so fortunate to-morrow.“

„Very true, sir; we will get them housed, and stow them away under the bed places; there is plenty of room.“ By the time that they had folded up the canvass, and William had brought in Nanny and the kids, the sun had set, and they went into the house. Ready was requested to go on with his history, which he did as follows: —

„I said last night that I determined to run away from school, and go to sea; but I did not tell you how I managed it. I had no chance of getting out of the school unperceived, except after the boys were all put to bed. The room that I slept in was at the top of the house—the doors I knew were all locked; but there was a trap-door which led out on the roof, fastened by a bolt inside, and a ladder leading up to it; and

I determined that I would make my escape by that way. As soon as all the other boys were fast asleep, I arose and dressed myself very quietly, and then left the room.

„The moon shone bright, which was lucky for me, and I gained the trap-door without any noise. I had some difficulty in forcing it up, as it was heavy for a boy of my age; but I contrived to do so at last, and gained the roof of the house. I looked round as I stood in the gutter—there were the ships in the port²²⁶), and the sea in the distance, and I felt as if I was already free: I forgot that I had²²⁷) to get down to the ground. At last I began looking about me, to see how it was to be done, and after walking to and fro several times, I decided that I could slip down by a large water-pipe which went right down to the ground; it was so far detached from the bricks, that I could get my small fingers round it; and I was then as light as a feather, and active as a cat. I climbed over the parapet, and, clinging to the pipe firmly with my hands and knees, I slid down, and arrived at the bottom in safety.“

„It's a wonder you did not break your neck, Ready,“ observed Mrs. Seagrave.

„It was, indeed, ma'am; I often think of it now—but I thought of nothing then except my own wilful way. As soon as I was landed in the flower-bed, which was below, I hastened to the iron gates at the entrance, and soon climbed up and got to the other side into the road. I had no hat, for all our hats were hung on pegs in the school-room below; but I didn't care for that. I started as fast as I could towards the port, and when I arrived at the wharf, I perceived that a vessel had her topsails loose, and meant to take advantage of the ebb-tide which had just made; the men were singing Yo heave yo, getting the anchor up; and as I stood watching, almost making up my mind that I would swim off to her, I perceived that a man pushed off in her jolly-boat, and was sculling to a post a little higher up, where a hawser had been made fast; I ran round, and arrived there before he had cast off the rope, without saying a word, I jumped into the boat.

226) A port ist eigentlich ebensoviel als harbour und haven, doch versteht man meist mehr an artificial als a natural harbour darunter. 227) I had to get down, mir war noch die Aufgabe zu lösen übrig, hinunter zu gelangen.

„What do you want, youngster?“ said the seaman.

„I want to go to sea,“ said I, breathless; take me on board — pray do.

„Well,“ said he, I heard the captain say he wanted an apprentice, and so you may come.

„He sculled the boat back again to the vessel, and I climbed up her side.

„Who are you?“ said the captain.

„I told him the same story, that I wanted to go to sea.

„You are too little and too young.“

„No, I am not,“ replied I.

„Why, do you think that you dare go aloft?

„I'll shew you,“ replied I, and I ran up the rigging like a cat, and went out at the top-gallant yard-arm.

„When I came down the captain said, Well, I think you'll make a sharp seaman by-and-by; so I'll take you, and, as soon as I get to London, I'll bind you apprentice. Where's your hat?“

„I left it behind me,“ replied I.

„Never mind; a red nightcap is a better thing,“ said the captain, and he went down to the cabin, and brought me one up.

„The ship, which was a collier, was soon out of port, and before the day had dawned I found myself on the wide ocean, which was hereafter to be my home.

„As soon as the hurry and confusion were over, I was examined by the captain, who appeared to me to be a very rough, harsh man; indeed, before the day was over I almost repented of the step which I had taken, and when I sat down cold and wet upon some old sails at night, the thoughts of my mother, and what distress I should occasion her, for the first time rushed into my mind, and I wept bitterly; but it was too late then. I have often thought, Mr. Seagrave, that the life of hardship which I have since gone through has been a judgment on me for my cruelty to my mother, in leaving her the way I did. I was her only child, poor woman; she had nothing else to love but me and it broke her heart; a poor return, Master William, for all her care and kindness! God forgive me!”

Old Ready left off for some little time, and the remainder of the party kept silence. William, who sat next to his mother, turned round to her, and kissed her.

„I like to see you do that Master William,” said Ready; „it tells me that my story is not thrown away upon you, and I look upon that kiss as a seal that you’ll never desert your parent.” The tear trickled down Mrs. Seagrave’s cheek, as she returned her boy’s embrace.

„I’ll leave off now, if you please,” said Ready: „I don’t feel inclined to go on; my heart is full when I recall that foolish and wicked deed of mine. Mr. Seagrave,” continued Ready, „as it is bed-time, if you please, I’ll hand you the Bible. Oblige me by reading that part, Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Oh! sir, what comfort there is in that book!”

Mr. Seagrave read the chapter that Ready requested, and finished with a short prayer, after which they all retired to their beds.

CHAPTER XXXII.

The next morning was fine, and as soon as breakfast was over, they took the wheels down to the turtle-pond, and Ready having speared one of the largest by means of a pike with a barb to it, which he had made on purpose, they hauled it on shore, slung it under the wheels, and took it up to the house. Having killed the turtle, and cut it up²²⁸), Juno, under the directions of Ready, chose such portions as were required for the soup; and when the pot was on the fire, Ready, Mr. Seagrave, and William, set off with the cross-cut²²⁹) saw and hatchets, to commence felling the cocoa-nut trees for the building of the out-house, which was to hold their stores, as soon as they could be brought round from the other side of the island.

„I mean this to be our place of refuge in case of danger, sir,“ observed Ready; and therefore I have selected this thick part of the wood, as it is not very far from the house, and by cutting the path to it in a zigzag, it will be quite hidden from sight; and we must make the path just wide enough to allow the wheels to pass, and stump up the roots of the trees which we are obliged to cut down, otherwise the stumps would attract attention. Not that I think we shall ever want it; but still it is a precaution which we may as well take, as it will not give us a great deal of extra labour.“

„I agree with you, Ready,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „there is no saying²³⁰), what may happen.“

„You see, sir, between ourselves²³¹), it is often the custom for the natives, in this part of the world, to come in their canoes from one island to another merely 228) To cut up, aufschneiden, öffnen; weiter unten to tear up, aufreißen. 229) Cross cut saw, die Kertsäge. 230) There is no saying, man kann nicht wissen. 231) Between ourselves, unter uns (gesagt).

to get cocoa-nuts. I can't say that the other islands near us are inhabited, but still it is probable, and we cannot tell what the character of the people may be. I tell you this, but you had better not say a word to Mrs. Seagrave, as it may distress her; Master William, you will not, I am sure."

"Oh no; I would not say any thing to alarm my mother, depend upon it, Ready."

"We are now near the spot, sir. You see, when we have got over this hill, where the trees are so very thick, the fall in the ground²³²) will assist in the concealment of the building. I should say we are very near right where we now stand, sir, for we are two-thirds of the way down the hollow, and we have more than sufficient slope to drain off the water."

"How far are we from the house, Ready? We must not be too distant."

"I reckon we are not 150 yards in a straight line, although the road will, by its turning, make it double the distance."

"Then I think this spot will do very well; so the sooner we begin the better."

"I'll just mark out the trees which are to stand, Mr. Seagrave, and those which are to be cut down, so as to leave about four feet of stump standing. Master William, will you please to take the other end of the line?"

As soon as they had planned the building, the axes and saw were in full use, and tree after tree fell one upon the other. They worked hard till dinner-time, and were not sorry at the prospect of sitting down to a rich mess of turtle-soup.

"My dear William, and you too, Mr. Seagrave, how very warm you are," said Mrs. Seagrave; "you must not work so hard."

"Cutting down trees is very warm work, mother," replied William, „and hard work will never hurt any one, especially when he dines off turtle soup; we are very hungry, and shall do justice to Juno's cooking. Why, Tommy, what's the matter with you²³³⁾?”

232) The fall in the ground, die Abshüffigkeit des Bodens (the declivity).

„Tommy and I are at variance²³⁴⁾,” replied Mrs. Seagrave. „I had my thimble this morning, and had commenced my sewing²³⁵⁾, when I was called out by Juno, and Caroline went with me, and Tommy was left in the house. When I came back I found him outside, and on going back to my work, there was no thimble to be found; I asked him if he had touched it, and his answer was that he would look for it. He did look, and said he could not find it; I have asked him several times if he took it away, and his only answer is, that he will find it by-and-by. I am certain he has taken it, but he will not say if he has or has not. The consequence is, that I have done no work the whole morning.“

„Tommy, did you take the thimble?” said Mr. Seagrave, gravely.

„I'll find it by-and-by, papa.“

„That's not an answer, sir. Did you take the thimble?”

„I'll find it by-and-by, papa,” said Tommy, whimpering.

„That's all the answer he will give me,” said Mrs. Seagrave.

„Well, then, he shall have no dinner till the thimble makes its appearance,” replied Mr. Seagrave.

Master Tommy began to cry at this intelligence. Juno appeared with the turtle-soup, the smell of which was very savoury; and Tommy cried louder when they had said grace²³⁶⁾ and commenced their dinner. They were all very hungry, and William sent his plate for 233) What's the matter with you, was geht mit dir vor, was hast du denn? 234) To be at variance, im Streite liegen.

235) To sew, nähen, to sow, säen, beide so gesprochen. 236) To say grace, das Tischgebet verrichten.

another portion, which he had not commenced long before he put his finger in his mouth and pulled out something.

„Why, mother, here's the thimble in my soup,“ cried William; „I had very nearly swallowed it.“

„No wonder he said he would find it by-and-by,“ said Ready, smiling; he meant to have fished it up, I suppose, from what was left of the soup after dinner. Well, Mrs. Seagrave, I don't mean to say that Tommy is a good boy, but still, although he would not tell where the thimble was, he has not told a falsehood about it.“

„No, he has not,“ replied William. „I think now that the thimble is found, if he begs pardon, papa will forgive him.“

„Tommy, come here,“ said Mr. Seagrave. „Tell me why you put that thimble into the soup.“

„I wanted to taste the soup. I wanted to fill the thimble; the soup burnt my fingers, and I let the thimble drop in.“

„Well, a thimbleful wasn't much, at all events²³⁷⁾,“ observed Ready. „And why didn't you tell your mamma where the thimble was?“

„I was afraid mamma throw all the soup away, and then I get none for dinner.“

„Oh! that was it, was it²³⁸⁾? Well, sir, I said you should have no dinner till the thimble was found, so, as it is found, you may have your dinner; but if you ever refuse to answer a question again, I shall punish you more severely.“

Tommy was glad the lecture was over, and more glad to get his turtle-soup; he finished one plate, and, as he asked for another, he said, „Tommy won't put thimble in again; put tin pot in next time.“

„Massa Tommy, you put nothing in at all,“ said

237) At all events, auf alle Fälle. 238) Was it, nicht wahr (s. weiter unten die 273ste Note).

Juno, who was eating her dinner beside him; „some day you scald yourself all over — little greedy boy.“

After dinner they went to their work again, and did not come in again till sunset.

„The clouds are gathering fast, sir,“ observed Ready; „we shall have rain to-night.“

„I fear we shall; but we must expect it now, Ready.“

„Yes, sir; and by-and-by we shall have it for days together.“

„Ready,“ said Mrs. Seagrave, „if you are not too much tired, perhaps you will go on with your history.“

„Certainly, ma'am, if you wish it,“ replied Ready. „When I left off, I was on board of the collier, bound to London. We had a very fair wind, and a quick passage. I was very sick until we arrived in the Nore²³⁹⁾, and then I recovered, and, as you may suppose, was astonished at the busy scene, and the quantity of vessels which were going up and down the river. But I did not like my captain; he was very severe and brutal to the men; and the apprentice who was on board told me to run away, and get into another vessel, and not to bind myself apprentice to²⁴⁰⁾ this captain, or I should be beat all day long, and be treated as bad²⁴¹⁾ as he was. I knew this was the case, as the captain kicked and cuffed him twenty times a day. The men said that he did not do so to me, for fear I should refuse to be his apprentice; but that, as soon as my indentures²⁴²⁾ were signed, he would treat me in the same way.“

„Well, sir, I made up my mind²⁴³⁾ that I would not remain in the collier; and, as the captain had gone on shore, I had plenty of time to look about me. There was a large ship, which was ready to sail, lying in the stream; I spoke to two boys who were at the stairs in her boat, and they told me that they were very comfortable on board, and that the captain wanted two or three apprentices. I went on board with them, and offered myself. The captain asked me a great many questions, and I told him the truth, and why I did not like to remain in the collier. He agreed to take me; and I went on shore with him, signed my indentures, and received from him a sufficient supply of clothes; and, two days afterwards, we sailed for Bombay and China."

239) Ein Fluß. 240) To bind one's self apprentice to, bei Jemandem in die Lehre gehen, sich aufdingen lassen. 241) Man braucht bad und badly als Adverb. 242) Indentures; hier Lehrcontract. Eigentlich an indented document, ausgezackt, um das Zusammenpassen mit dem gleichlautenden Duplicate erweisen zu können. 243) To make up one's mind, sich entschließen.

"But you wrote to your mother, Ready, did you not?" said William.

"Yes, sir, I did; for the captain desired me to do so, and he put a few lines at the bottom to comfort her; but, unfortunately, sir, the letter, which was sent on shore by the cook, never arrived. Whether he dropped²⁴⁴), or forgot it till after the ship sailed, and then tore it up, I do not know; but, as I found out afterwards, it never did get to her hands."

"It was not your fault, that the letter did not arrive safe," said Mrs. Seagrave.

"No, madam, that was not my fault; the fault had been committed before."

"Don't dwell any more upon that portion of your history, Ready; but tell us what took place after you sailed for the East Indies."

"Be it so, if you please. I certainly was very smart and active for my age, and soon became a great favourite on board, especially with the lady passengers, because I was such a little fellow. We arrived safely at Bombay, where our passengers went on shore, and in three weeks afterwards we sailed down the straits for China. It was war-time, and we were very often chased by French privateers²⁴⁵); but as we had a good crew and plenty of guns, none of them ventured to attack us, and we got safe²⁴⁶) to Macao, where we unloaded our cargo and took in teas²⁴⁷). We had to wait some time for a convoy, and then sailed for England. When we were off the Isle of France²⁴⁸), the convoy was dispersed in a gale; and three days afterwards, a French frigate bore down²⁴⁹) upon us, and, after exchanging a few broadsides²⁵⁰) we were compelled to haul down our colours²⁵¹). A lieutenant was sent on board with forty men, to take charge of us, for we were a very rich prize to them. The captain and most of the crew were taken on board of the frigate, but ten Lascars²⁵²) and the boys were left in the Indiaman²⁵³), to assist in taking her into the Isle of France, which was at that time in the hands of the French. I thought it hard that I was to go to prison at twelve years old; but I did not care much about it, and very soon I was as gay and merry as ever. We had made the island²⁵⁴), and were on a wind beating up²⁵⁵) to the port, when a vessel was seen to windward, although I could not understand what the Frenchmen said, I perceived that they were in a great fluster and very busy with their spy-glasses, and Jack Romer, one of my brother-prentices who had been three years at sea, said to me, 245) Privateers, Kaperschiffe, werden in Kriegszeiten von Privatpersonen, mit Erlaubniß der Regierung, ausgerüstet, um gegen die feindlichen Schiffe auf Kaperei auszugehen. 246) Safe, nicht safely, denn es ist Adjectiv wie z. B. in to live happy and content. 247) Teas, Theesorten, so sagt man coffees, sugars &c. Dagegen silks, auch Seidenwaaren, ebenso cottons, aber wools, Wollsorten, woollens, wollene Waaren. 248) The Isle of France heißt Mauritius, seitdem sie an die Engländer übergegangen ist. 249) To bear down upon one, auf Jemanden losgehen. 250) To exchange broadsides, sich gegenseitig mit vollen Lagen beschießen. 251) To haul down the colours, die Flagge einziehen, zum Zeichen der Ergebung. 252) Lascars, in Ostindien, Seeleute überhaupt, auch Kanoniere. 253) Man bedeutet nämlich auch Schiff. So sagt man Indiaman, Indienfahrer, man-of-war, Kriegsschiff, merchantman, Rauffahrer, &c. 254) To make an island, bei einer Insel vorbeisegeln. 255) Beating up to, treibend nach &c.

244) To drop a thing, to lay aside, absichtlich bei Seite legen.

I don't think we'll go to prison after all, Ready, for that vessel is an English man-of-war, if I'm not mistaken. At last she came down within three miles of us, and hoisted English colours and fired a gun. The Frenchmen put the ship before the wind, but it was of no use; the man-of-war came up with us very fast, and then the Frenchmen began to pack up their clothes, together with all the other things which they had collected out of the property of our captain and crew; a shot was fired, which went clear over our heads, and then they left the helm, and Jack Romer went to it, and, with my help, hove the ship up in the wind; a boat came on board and took possession, and so there was one escape, at all events. When the captain of the English frigate heard how the Frenchmen had behaved, he ordered all their baggage to be examined as they came on board, taking away every thing which they had plundered."

„It would have served them right²⁵⁶) to have taken away their own things in return," said William.

„Yes, Master William, it would have served them right; but still it would have been wrong to have done so; by so doing, we should have been as dishonest as they were. The captain did not take away their property, but he put them all down in the fore-hold²⁵⁷), which, as prisoners, he was justified in doing. They sent a midshipman as prize-master on board of the vessel, and left all us, who had been taken prisoners by the French, in the vessel, to help to work her into port, as the captain did not wish to part with²⁵⁸) any more men of his own than was necessary. We soon made sail for England, quite delighted at having escaped a French prison, but, after all, we only exchanged it for a Dutch one."

256) It would have served them right; es wäre ihnen ganz Recht geschehen. 257) fore-hold, derjenige Theil des innern Schiffsraums, der vor dem Hauptmaste liegt; der demselben zunächst liegende heißt main-hold, der dem Steuer zunächst liegende after-hold. 258) To part with a thing, von einer Sache sich trennen.

„How do you mean?“

„I mean that, two days afterwards, as we were rounding the Cape, another French vessel bore down upon us, and captured us. This time we did not find any friend in need, and were taken into Table Bay; for at that time the Cape of Good Hope was in the possession of the Dutch, who, as well as the French, were at war with England.“

„How very unfortunate you were, Ready,“ said Mrs. Seagrave.

„Yes, madam, we were, and I can't say much in favour of a Dutch prison. However, I was very young at that time, and did not care much — I had a light heart: but bed-time is come, Miss Caroline is fast asleep, and Master Tommy has been yawning this last half-hour; so I think I had better leave off now, if you please.“

CHAPTER XXXIII.

A heavy storm came on soon after they had retired to rest; the lightning was so vivid that its flashes penetrated through the chinks of the door and windows, and the thunder burst upon them with a noise which prevented them obtaining any sleep. The children cried and trembled as they lay in the arms of Mrs. Seagrave and Juno, who were almost as much alarmed themselves.

„This is very awful,“ said Mr. Seagrave to Ready, for they had both risen from their beds.

„It is, indeed, Sir; I never knew a more terrible storm than this. I often fancy that the lightning and thunder are as the eye and voice of the Eternal in his wrath.“

„Yes, indeed, Ready; it is through the elements that God speaks to man, and that we feel his power. Merciful Heaven!“

As Mr. Seagrave spoke, they were both thrown back half-stunned; a crash of thunder burst over the house, which shook every thing in it; a sulphurous smell pervaded the building, and soon afterwards, when they recovered their feet, they perceived the house was full of smoke, and they heard the wailing of the women and shrieks of the children in the bed-places on the other side.

„God have mercy on us!“ exclaimed Ready, who was the first to recover himself, and who now attempted to ascertain the injury which had been done: „the lightning has struck us, and I fear that the house is on fire somewhere.“

„My wife — my children!“ exclaimed Mr. Seagrave; „are they all safe?“

„Yes, yes!“ cried Mrs. Seagrave, „all safe; Tommy has come to me, but where is Juno? Juno!“

Juno answered not; William darted to the other side of the thouse, and found Juno lying on her side, motionless.

„She is dead, father,“ cried William.

„Help me to carry her out of the house, Mr. Seagrave,“ said Ready, who had lifted up the poor girl; „she may be only stunned.“

They carried Juno out of the house, and laid her on the ground; the rain poured down in torrents.

Ready left them for a minute, to ascertain if the house was on fire; he found that it had been in flames at the further corner, but the rain had extinguished it. He then went back to Mr. Seagrave and William, who were with Juno.

„I will attend to the girl, sir,“ said Ready; „go you and Master William into the house; Mrs. Seagrave will be too much frightened if she is left alone at such an awful time. See, sir! Juno is not dead — her chest heaves — she will come to²⁵⁹) very soon; thank God for it — we could but ill spare the poor girl.“

259) She will come to (i. e. her senses), wieder zur Befinnung kommen.

William and Mr. Seagrave returned to the house; they found Mrs. Seagrave fainting with anxiety and fear. The information they brought, that Juno was not killed by the lightning, did much to restore her. William soothed little Albert, and Tommy in a few minutes was fast asleep again in his father's arms. The storm now abated, and as the day began to break, Ready appeared with Juno, who was sufficiently recovered to be able to walk in with his support; she was put into her bed, and then Ready and Mr. Seagrave went to examine if further mischief had been done. The lightning had come in at the further end of the house, at the part where the fire-place was intended to have been made; they found that it had melted down part of the iron kettle, and, what was a greater loss, that black Nanny, the goat, was killed — the kids were, however, unhurt.

„We have, indeed, been most mercifully preserved,“ said Mr. Seagrave.

„Yes, sir, thanks be to God for all his goodness,“ replied Ready. „I thought poor Juno was gone²⁶⁰⁾“

„I think we have a large roll of copper wire, Ready; have we not?“ said Mr. Seagrave.

„Yes, sir, I was just thinking of it myself; we will have a lightning conductor²⁶¹⁾ up the first thing.“

It was now broad daylight. Mrs. Seagrave dressed herself and the children, and as soon as she was ready, Mr. Seagrave read such portions of the Psalms as were appropriate, and they earnestly joined in a prayer of thankfulness and humility. William went out to prepare the breakfast, and Ready procured the coil of copper wire from those stores which were stowed under the bed-places. This he unrolled, and stretched it out straight, and then went for the ladder, which was at the out-house, which they had commenced building. As soon as breakfast was over, Ready and Mr. Seagrave 260) Gone, für dead.

ableiter.

261) Lightning conductor, Blitz-went out again to fix up the lightning conductor, leaving William to do the work of Juno, who still remained fast asleep in her bed.

„I think, sir,“ said Ready, that one of those two trees which are close together will suit the best; they are not too near the house, and yet quite near enough for the wire to attract the lightning.“

„Yes, I agree with you, Ready; but we must not leave them both standing.“

„No, sir, but we shall require them both to get up and fix the wire; after that we will cut down the other.“

Ready put his ladder against one of the trees, and taking with him the hammer and a bag of large spike nails²⁶²) drove one of the nails into the trunk of the tree till it was deep enough in to bear his weight; he then drove in another above it, and so he continued to do, standing upon one of them while he drove in another above, till he had reached the top of the tree, close to the boughs; he then descended, and, leaving the hammer behind him, took up a saw and small axe, and in about ten minutes he had cut off the head of the cocoa-nut tree, which remained a tall, bare pole.

„Take care, Ready, how you come down,“ said Mr. Seagrave, anxiously.

„Never fear, sir,“ replied Ready; „I'm not so young as I was, but I have been too often at the mast-head, much higher than this. Ready came down again, and then cut down a small pole, to fix, with a thick piece of pointed wire at the top of it, on the head of the cocoa-nut tree. He then went up, lashed the small pole to the head of the tree, made the end of the copper wire fast to the pointed wire, and then he descended. The other tree near to it was then cut down, and the lower end of the wire buried in the ground at the bottom of the tree on which the lightning conductor had been fixed.

262) spike-nails oder spikes, Spiker, Art Spizbolzen, im Gegensatz zu deck-nails, clasp-nails, brads, pins, tree-nails, etc.

„That's a good job done, sir,“ said Ready, wiping his face, for he was warm with the work.

„Yes,“ replied Mr. Seagrave, and we must put up another near the out-house, or we may lose our stores.“

„Very true, sir.“

„You understand this, William; don't you?“ said his father.

„O yes, papa; lightning is attracted by metal, and will now strike the point instead of the house, run down the wire, and only tear up the ground below. You explained it to me before.“

„Well, and you've not forgot it, Master William,“ said Ready. „It's coming on again, sir, as thick as ever,“ observed the old man; „we shall do no work to-day, I'm afraid. I'll just go and see where the stock are²⁶³); I hope we have lost no more of them. Perhaps you and William will bury the poor goat; you will be able to do that before the storm begins.“

Mr. Seagrave and William pulled Nanny out by the legs, and buried her under the lightning conductor. By the time they had finished, Ready returned; he had found the goats and sheep, and he had brought with him the other goat, which had kidded²⁶⁴) during the storm.

„The Lord gives, and the Lord takes away, sir,“ said Ready, as he came to them. „I was fearful that we should have nothing to give the poor kids which had lost their mother, but now this goat can rear them all four. It will be rather hard upon her, but she must do it; we will feed her well, at all events.“

Ready led in the other goat and put her in the same place where Black Nanny had been, and then they sat down to dinner. Juno was now up again, and said that she was quite well, with the exception of a head-ache. As Ready had predicted, the rain now came on again with great violence, and it was impossible to do any work out of doors. At the request of William, he continued his history.

263) Stock, als Collectivwort, mit dem Plural. 264) To kid, zickeln, Junge werfen. So hat man to calve, to litter, to farrow oder pig, to foal oder colt, von Fischen to spawn.

„Well, Master William, as soon as they had let go their anchor in Table Bay, we were all ordered on shore, and sent up to a prison close to the Government Gardens. We were not very carefully watched, as it appeared impossible for us to get away, and I must say we were well treated in every respect; but we were told that we should be sent to Holland in the first man-of-war which came into the bay, and we did not much like the idea.

„There were, as I told you, some other boys as well as myself, who belonged to the Indiaman, and we kept very much together, not only because we were more of an age²⁶⁵), but because we had been shipmates so long. Two of these boys, one of whom I have mentioned as Jack Romer, and the other Will Hastings, were my particular friends; and one day, as we were sitting under the wall, warming ourselves, for it was winter time, Romer said, How very easy it would be for us to get away, if we only knew where to go to. Yes, replied Hastings, but where are we to go to, if it is not to the Hottentots and wild savages? and when we get there, what can we do? — we can't get any farther. Well, said I, I would rather be living free among savages, than be shut up in a prison. That was our first talk on the subject, but we had many others afterwards; and as the one or two Dutch soldiers, who stood sentry, spoke English, and we could talk a little Dutch, we obtained a good deal of information from them; for they had very often been sent to the frontiers of the colony. We continued to ask questions, and to talk among ourselves for about two months, and at last we resolved that we would make our escape. Now, you see, Master William, this was a very foolish business, and shews how unfit boys are to judge for themselves: we were only running into hardship and danger, without the slightest chance of our escaping. We should have done much better if we had remained where we were; but there is no putting old heads upon young shoulders. We saved up²⁶⁶) our provisions, bought some long Dutch knives, tied our few clothes²⁶⁷) up in bundles, and one dark night we contrived to remain in the yard without being perceived, when the prisoners were locked up; and raising a long pole, which lay in the yard, to the top of the wall, with a good deal of scrambling we contrived to get over it, and made off as fast as we could for the Table Mountain."

265) Of an age, von einem und demselben Alter. So birds of a feather.

We ran at first until we were out of breath, and then we walked on as fast as we could — not going right up the mountain, but keeping a slanting direction to the south-west, so as to get away from the town, and more towards False Bay; you recollect I shewed you that bay, Master William, as we passed the Cape of Good Hope."

„Yes, I remember, Ready."

„We had walked about four hours, and began to feel very tired when the day dawned, and then we looked out for a place to conceal ourselves in. We soon found a cave with a narrow entrance, large enough inside to hold half a dozen of such lads as we were, and we crawled in. It was quite dry, and, as we were very tired, we lay down with our heads on our bundles, intending to take a nap; but we had hardly made ourselves comfortable and shut our eyes, when we heard such a screaming and barking, that we were frightened

266) Save up, aufsparen. So to treasure up, to heap up &c.

267) Clothes, Kleider, wird wie cloze gesprochen; nicht aber he clothes.

out of our lives almost. We could not think what it could be. At last Hastings peeped out, and began to laugh; so Romer and I looked out also, and there we saw about one hundred and fifty large baboons, leaping and tumbling about in such a way as I never saw; they were bigger than we were — indeed, when they stood on their hind legs they were much taller, and they had very large white tusks. Some of them were females, with young ones on their backs, and they were just as active as the males. At last they played such antics²⁶⁸), that we all burst out into a loud laugh, and we had not ceased when we found the grinning face of one of the largest of those brutes close to our own. He had dropped from the rock above us, like magic²⁶⁹). We all three backed into the cave, very much frightened, for the teeth of the animal were enormous, and he looked very savage. He gave a shrill cry, and we perceived all the rest of the herd coming to him as fast as they could. I said that the cave was large enough to hold six of us; but there was a sort of inner cave which we had not gone into, as the entrance was much smaller. Romer cried out, Let us go into the inside cave — we can get in one by one; and he backed in²⁷⁰); Hastings followed with his bundle, and I hurried in after him just in time; for the baboons, who had been chattering to each other for half a minute, came into the outer cave just as I crawled into the inner. Five or six of them came in, all males, and very large. The first thing they did was to lay hold of Romer's bundle, which they soon opened — at once they seized his provisons and rammed them into their pouches, and then they pulled out the other things, and tore them all to pieces. As soon as they had done with the bundle, two of them came towards the inner cave and saw us. One put his long paw in to seize us; but 268) Antics, narrenhafte Sprünge, — nicht zu verwechseln mit antique, ob schon desselben Ursprungs. — 269) like magic, wie durch Zauberei. — 270) To back in, hier rückwärts hineingehen.

Hastings gave him a slash with his knife, and the animal took his paw out again fast enough. It was laughable to see him hold out his hand to the others, and then taste the blood with the tip of his tongue, and such a chattering I never heard — they were evidently very angry, and more came into the cave and joined them; then another put in his hand, and received a cut just as before. At last, two or three at once tried to pull us out, but we beat them all off with our knives, wounding them all very severely. For about an hour they continued their attempts, and then they went away out of the cave, but remained at the mouth, shrieking and howling. We began to be very tired of this work, and Romer said that he wished he was back in prison again; and so did I, I can assure you; but there was no getting out, for had we gone out the animals would have torn us to pieces. We agreed that we had no chance, but the animals becoming tired and going away; and most anxious we were, for the excitement had made us very thirsty, and we wanted water. We remained for two hours in this way, imprisoned by baboons, when all of a sudden a shrill cry was given by one of the animals, and the whole herd went galloping off as fast as they could, screaming louder than ever. We waited for a short time to see if they would return, and then Hastings crawled out first, and looking out of the cave very cautiously, said that they were all gone, and that he could see nothing but a Hottentot sitting down watching some cattle which were browsing; we therefore all came out, very happy at our release. That was our first adventure, Master William; we had plenty afterwards; but I think it is now time we should go to bed. It is my opinion we shall have a fine day to-morrow, sir; but there's no saying.

„I do so want to hear what happened to you afterwards, Ready,“ said William.

„Well, so you shall, sir; but there's a time for every thing, and this is bed-time, unless you like to go with me, Master William; the weather has cleared up, and I want to catch a fish or two for to-morrow."

"Yes, I will, Ready, for I'm not at all tired."

"Well then, here are the lines: good night, madam; good night, Mr. Seagrave."

CHAPTER XXXIV.

As Ready had predicted, the weather set in fine for several days after the violent storm, of which we have made mention. Juno was weak, and suffering for some time. She had been struck down by the lightning, but she was able to cook the dinner and do light work. Poor Juno appeared to be very sensible of the wonderful preservation which she had had from the lightning. She had always been a good girl, and attentive whenever the Bible was read, but now she did not appear to think that the usual morning and evening services were sufficient to express her gratitude, and several times when Ready went out first in the morning, he had perceived Juno kneeling down under a coconut tree, secretly and devoutly returning thanks, for having been so mercifully spared. Ready, of course, did not appear to notice her, but he said more than once to himself, as he walked away, "There's more good under that dark skin than under many a white one, and her prayers are as acceptable to the Most High as those of kings and princes."

For a fortnight, with little intermission, the weather was fine, and during that time, Ready, Mr. Seagrave, and William, worked from daylight till dusk at the storehouse, which they were so anxious to complete, and were so tired when their work was over, that even William did not ask Ready to go on with his history. At last the storehouse was complete, thatched and wattled in on three sides; leaving one open for ventilation; the lower part, which had been arranged for the folding of the stock at night and during the rainy season, was also wattled in with cocoa-nut boughs on three sides, and made a very comfortable retreat for the animals. The winding path to the storehouse was also cut through the cocoa-nut grove, but the stumps were not removed, as they could not spare the time. All the stores that they had brought round were put into the storehouse, and they were now ready to take up some other job. It was, however, agreed that, on the day after the building was finished, they should all have a day's holiday, which they certainly did require. William caught some fish, a turtle was speared and wheeled up to the house; and they not only had a holiday, but a feast. Mr. Seagrave and William had been walking on the beach with Mrs. Seagrave and the children, while Ready was assisting Juno in cutting up the turtle; they had shewn Mrs. Seagrave the storehouse, and the goats with the four kids had been led there, as there was no longer any occasion for them to remain in the house. The weather was beautiful, and they agreed to go and examine the garden. They found that the seeds had not yet commenced sprouting, notwithstanding the heavy rains.

„I should have thought that so much rain would have made them come up,“ said Mrs. Seagrave.

„No, my dear,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „they require more of the sun than they will have till the rainy season is nearly over; a few days like this, and they will soon be above ground.“

„Let us sit down on this knoll, it is quite dry,“ said Mrs. Seagrave. „I little thought,“ continued she, taking Mr. Seagrave's hand after she was seated, „that I could have been so happy in a desert island. How fast the time flies. I thought I should feel the loss of books very severely, but I really do not think that I could have found time to read.“

„Employment is a source of happiness, especially when you are usefully employed. An industrious person is always a happy person, provided he is not obliged to work too hard; and even where you have cause for unhappiness, nothing makes you forget it so soon as occupation. I really believe that an idle person is never truly happy, and that too much work is preferable to having nothing whatever to do.

„But, mamma, we shall not always have so much to do as we have now,“ said William.

„Of course not,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „and then we shall find our books a great source of enjoyment. I am anxious to go to the other side of the island, and see what books have been spared to us, and whether they have been much damaged; but that cannot be until after the rains are over, and we can use the boat again.“

„Well, Ready,“ said Mr. Seagrave, „after breakfast, which is to be our next job?“

„Why, sir, I think we had better all set to, to collect the branches and ends of the cocoa-nut trees cut down, and stack them for fuel; Master Tommy and Juno have already made a good large pile, and I think, by to-night²⁷¹), we shall have made the stack, and so arranged it, that the rain will not get into it much. After that, as the weather will not permit us to leave the house for any time, we will cut our saltpan and make our fish-pond; they will take a week at least, and then we shall have little more to do near home. I think the strength of the rains²⁷²) is over already, and perhaps in a fortnight we may venture to walk through the wood, and examine what we have saved from the wreck; we shall have plenty to do in sorting and preparing the different articles before the fine weather returns, and we can then bring them round in the boat and fill our storehouse.“

„And we are to explore the island; are we not²⁷³), Ready?“ said William. „I long to do that.“

271) By to-night, bis heute Abends. 272) Rains, Regenwetter. Ebenso dews, snows, colds. 273) Are we not, nicht wahr (s. oben die 238ste Note).

„Yes, Master William, but that must be almost the last job; for we shall be away for two or three nights, perhaps, and we must look out for fine weather. We will, however, do that before we bring the stores round in the boat.

„But how are we to make the salt-pan, Ready? We must cut it out of the solid rock.“

„Yes, Master William; but I have three or four of what they call cold chisels²⁷⁴⁾ — those short, thick pieces of iron, with one end sharpened, which are in the storehouse — and with one of them and a hammer, we shall get on faster than you think; for the coral rock, although hard at the surface, is very soft a little below it.“

„The whole of that day was employed in piling up the cocoa-nut branches and wood. Ready made a square stack, like a haystack, with a gable top, over which he tied the long branches, so that the rain would pour off it.

„There,“ said Ready, as he came down the ladder, „that will be our provision for next year; we have quite enough left to go on with till the rainy season is over, and we shall have no difficulty in collecting it afterwards when the weather is dry; this must be kept for the next rainy season.“

Mr. Seagrave sighed and looked grave; Ready observed it, and said, „Mr. Seagrave, it is not that we may want it; but still we must prepare for the next rainy season, in case we do want it. That Captain Osborne, if he lives, will send to look for us, I have no doubt; nay, I believe that Mackintosh will do the same; but still you must not forget that they all may have perished, although we have been so mercifully preserved. A small boat has a poor chance when it has to run many hundred miles in the open sea; and if they should have perished, we may remain here for years before we are discovered. We must put our trust in God, sir."

274) Cold chisel, Steinmeißel, da chisel (sonst besser chissel geschrieben) ein Holzinstrument ist.

"We must, Ready; and if it is his will, we must not murmur. I have schooled myself as much as possible²⁷⁵); but thoughts will come, in spite of my endeavours to restrain them."

"Of course they will, sir; that's natural: however, sir, you must hope for the best; fretting is no good, and it is sinful."

"I feel it is, Ready; and when I see how patiently²⁷⁶) and ever happy my wife is under such privations, I am angry with myself."²⁷⁷)

"A woman, sir, bears adversity better than a man. A woman is all love, and if she has but her husband and children with her²⁷⁸), and in good health, she will make herself happy almost anywhere: but men are different; they cannot bear being shut out of the world as you are now; although perhaps they would be happier for not being mixed up with it, if they could only think so."

After supper, Ready, being requested by William, continued his narrative: —

"I left off, if I recollect right, Master William, just as the Hottentot, with the cattle under his care, had frightened away the baboons who were tormenting us. Well, sir, we came out of the cave and sat down under the rock, so that the Hottentot could not see us, and we had a sort of council of war. Romer was for going back and giving ourselves up again; for he said it was ridiculous to be wandering about, without any arms to defend ourselves against wild beasts, and that we might fall in with something worse than the baboons very soon; and he was right. It would have been the wisest thing which we could have done; but 275) I have — possible, ich bin durch Erfahrung so viel als möglich geschult. 276) Patiently, fehlerhaft für patient. 277) to be angry with myself, böse auf sich sein. 278) With her, statt herself, wie dies oft mit Präpositionen vorkommt.

Hastings said, that if we went back we should be laughed at, and the idea of being laughed at made us all agree that we would not. You see, Master William, the fear of being laughed at²⁷⁹⁾ is the occasion of not only boys, but even men, doing very foolish things. We had done wrong, and we would not do right because we were afraid of ridicule; in fact, we were determined to risk our lives and run into any danger and hardship, because we could not bear to be laughed at for our folly, as we deserved to be. Bear this in mind, Master William, and never let the fear of ridicule induce you to do what is wrong; or if you have done wrong, prevent you from returning to what is your duty.“

„Many thanks for your advice, Ready; I hope William will not forget it,“ said Mr. Seagrave; „more people are laughed into error than persuaded into it.“

„Well, sir, such was our reason for not giving up our mad scheme; and having so decided, the next point of consultation between us was, how we were to procure arms²⁸⁰⁾ and ammunition, which we could not do without. As we were talking this over, I peeped from behind the rock, to see where the Hottentot might be; I perceived that he had laid himself down, and wrapped himself up in his kross, a mantle of sheep-skins which they always wear. Now we had observed that he carried his musket in his hand, when we first saw him, as the Hottentots always go out armed, and I pointed out to Hastings and Romer, that if he was asleep, we might get possession of his musket without his perceiving it. This was a good idea, and Hastings said he would crawl to him on his hands and knees, while we remained behind the rock. He did so very cautiously, and found the man's head covered up in his kross and fast asleep; so there was no fear, for the

279) Bekanntlich können im Englischen auch intransitive Zeitwörter passivisch gebraucht werden. 280) How we were to procure (ourselves) arms, wie wir uns Waffen verschaffen sollten.

Hottentots are very hard to wake at any time; that we knew well. Hastings first took the musket and carried it away out of the reach of the Hottentot, and then he returned to him, cut the leather thong which slung his powder-horn and ammunition, and retreated with all of them without disturbing the man from his sleep. We were quite overjoyed at this piece of good luck, and determined to walk very cautiously some distance from where the Hottentot lay, that in case he awoke, he should not see us. Keeping our eyes about in every direction, lest we should meet with anybody else, we proceeded nearly a mile towards Table Bay, when we fell in with a stream of water. This was another happy discovery, for we were very thirsty; so we concealed ourselves near to the stream after we had quenched our thirst, and made a dinner off the provisions we had brought with us.“

„But, Ready, did you not do wrong to steal the Hottentot's musket?“

„No, Master William; in that instance it could not be considered as a theft. We were in an enemy's country, trying to escape; we were therefore just as much at war with the country as we were when they took us prisoners, and we no more stole the musket than they could be said to have stolen our ship. Am I not right, Mr. Seagrave?“

„I think so: when two nations are at war, the property of either, when taken, is confiscated. In your position, you were justified in appropriating any property you might get hold of, which would further your attempts to escape; although I should not think you would have been morally justified if you had murdered and robbed, or even robbed wantonly.“

„Exactly so; but, in attempting our escape, had it been necessary to have either surrendered ourselves²⁸¹⁾ as prisoners again, or have taken the life of those who would have made us captives, we should have been justified in killing the parties."

281) Bei to surrender könnte das reflexive Pronomen auch wegbleiben.

„I believe you are justified in what may seem extreme acts, for the recovery of your liberty, after you have been made prisoners. It has always been so considered."

„Well, sir, to go on: we waited till dusk, and then we continued our march towards False Bay as fast as we could. We knew that there were farmers down in the valley, or rather the sides of the hills, and we hoped to obtain, by some means or other, two more muskets. It was near twelve o'clock at night, with a bright moon, when we had a sight of the water in False Bay, and soon afterwards we heard the baying of a large dog, and not far from us we distinguished two or three farmhouses, with their cattle-folds and orchards. We then looked for a hidingplace, where we might remain till the morning; we found one between some large pieces of rock. We agreed that one should watch while the other two slept; this Hastings undertook to do, as he was not inclined to sleep. At daylight he woke Romer and me, and we made our breakfast. From the place we were concealed in, we had a bird's eye view²⁸¹⁾ of the farmhouse, and of what was going on.

„The farmhouse and buildings just below us were much smaller than the other two, which were more distant. We watched the people as they went about. In about an hour the Hottentots came out, and we perceived that they were yoking the oxen to the waggon; they yoked twelve pair, and then the Hottentot driver got in and drove off towards Cape Town, accompanied by a Hottentot lad and the big dog. Soon after that, another Hottentot drove the cows up the valley to feed; and then a Dutchwoman came out of the house with two children, and fed the poultry.

281) A bird's eye view, eine Vogelperspektive (von oben ins Innere und Weite).

„We watched for another hour, and then the farmer himself made his appearance, with a pipe in his mouth, and sat down on a bench. When his pipe was out, he called to the house, and a Hottentot woman came to him with more tobacco and a light. During the whole of the day, we did not see any other people about the house, so we concluded that there were no more than the farmer, his wife, the Hottentot woman, and two children. About two hours after noon the farmer went to the stable and led out his horse, mounted, and rode away; we saw him speak to the Hottentot woman when he rode off, and she soon after went down the valley with a basket on her head, and a long knife in her hand. Then Hastings said it was time that we moved, for there was but one woman in the house, and we could easily overpower her and get what we wanted; still there was a great risk, as she might give the alarm, and we should have to escape in the day-time, and might be seen and taken prisoners again. However, as it was our only chance, we resolved to go down to the farmhouse very cautiously, and be all ready to seize any opportunity. We crept down the hill, and gained the fence, which was at the back of the farmhouse, without being discovered; we remained there for about a quarter of an hour, when, to our great joy, we observed the farmer's wife go out of the house, leading a child in each hand; apparently she was going to visit one of her neighbours, for she went in the direction of one of the other farms. As soon as she was a hundred yards off, Hastings crept softly through the fence, and entered²⁸²⁾ the farmhouse by the back door; he came out again, and made a sign for us to come in. We found him already in possession of a rifle and a musket, which had been hanging over the fire-place, and we soon handed down the powder-horns and amunition pouches, which were hung up at a different part of the room, away from the fire-place.

282) Man sagt ebenfowohl to enter a house als to enter into a house.

„Having gained these, Hastings set me to watch at the front door, lest anybody should return, while Romer and he looked out for something else in the way of²⁸³⁾ provisions. We got possession of three hams, and a large loaf of bread as big as a small washing-tub. With these articles we made our way safe²⁸⁴⁾ back to our retreat. We then looked round, and could see nobody in any direction, so we presumed that we were not discovered. As there was a sort of ravine full of rocks dividing the hill, which we were obliged to pass before we could get into the valley, unless we went down close to the farmhouse, we agreed that it would be better at once²⁸⁵⁾ to cross it during the day-time, so that we should get that difficulty over, and, at the same time, be further from the farmhouse. We did so; and found a very secure hiding-place, where we lay down, waiting for the sun to set before we started on our journey into the interior. We had not been there an hour, before we heard the shrill cry of our friends, the baboons, on the hill which we had left; and, after that, we perceived them going down towards the farmhouse, and very busy taking the fruit out of the orchard, throwing it from one to the other as fast as they could; for, you see, these cunning animals had found out that the coast was clear, and did not lose so good an opportunity. They were still busy with their work, when the Hottentot came in sight with the cows; and when he approached the farmhouse, they all gave a loud scream, and scampered off as fast as they could. Then, the Dutch woman was seen coming back, and when she had gone into the house, and spoken to the Hottentot, 283) In the way of provisions, was etwa als Mundvorräthe mitgehen konnte. 284) Safe ist hier Adjectiv, s. d. 246ste Note.

285) At once, ein für alle Mal, ausgemacht.

we heard her crying, as she came out again by the back door. About an hour before dusk, the Dutch farmer came home on horseback, and in a few minutes, we knew, by the shrieking and screams, that he was beating his wife: for you see, sir (that is, we suppose it was so), by her leaving the house, the baboons had ventured to rob the orchard; and I have no doubt it was taken for granted that they had carried off the different articles missing in the house; for they will take any thing; so, if it was unfortunate for the poor woman, it was very lucky for us, as it removed the suspicion of our being there, and occasioned no search after us; so, we quite forgave the baboons all the annoyance they had given us in the morning, in consequence of the good turn they had done us in the evening. I think I had better leave off now, Master William, as it is getting late."

CHAPTER XXXV.

The fish-pond was commenced the next morning. Ready, Mr. Seagrave, and William, went down together to the beach, and, after much examination, chose a spot about one hundred yards from the turtle-pond, as most eligible for the purpose; the water being shallow, so that at the part farthest from the shore there would not be more than three feet.

„Now, sir," said Ready, „this is a very simple job; all we have to do is, to collect small rocks and stones, pile them up wall-fashion inside²⁸⁶), and with a slope outside, so as to break the force of the waves when the water is a little rough: of course, the water, will find its way through the stones, and will be constantly changed. It's very true, that we can at most times catch fish when we want them, but it is not always that we can spare the time, so it's just as well to have always a certain quantity at hand, to take out at a moment's warning²⁸⁷); and we can, of course, catch them and put them in here when we have nothing else to do. Juno will be able to come down and take them out with a spear, when we are away and she wants something for dinner. There's nothing like having a ready supply of provisions at all times."

286) Wall-fashion inside, die glatte oder gerade Fläche nach innen, so daß eine gerade Mauer entstand.

„But there are few stones about here, Ready; we shall have to fetch them a long way," said William.

„Well, then, Master William, let us get the wheels down here, and then we can carry a quantity at a time."

„But how shall we carry them, Ready?"

„We will sling a tub on the axle; I will go up and get that ready and bring it down; in the meantime, you and Mr. Seagrave can collect all the stones which are near at hand."

Ready soon returned with the wheels, and the tub slung with rope on the axle, and by that means they found that they could collect the stones very fast; Mr. Seagrave and William bringing them, and Ready in the water, building up the wall.

„We have quite forgot another job which we must put in hand, sir," observed Ready; „but the fish-pond reminds me of it."

„What is that, Ready?"

„A bathing place for the children, and indeed for us all; we shall want it when the hot weather comes on, but we will put off²⁸⁸) till then. I can tell you, sir, that although I don't mind building this wall in the shallow water, I shall be very careful when the water is up to my knees, for you don't know how bold the sharks are in these latitudes. When I was at 287) At a moment's warning, im plötzlichen Nothfalle. 288) To put off, verschieben.

St. Helena, not very long ago, we had a melancholy proof of it.

„Tell us the story, Ready.“

„Why, sir, I could not have believed it possible. I did know an instance, something of the kind, when I was in the East Indies; but that was not a shark, but an alligator. A Dutchman, at Trincomalee²⁸⁹), was standing on the beach, fishing in the harbour; an alligator swam right up to him, till his snout was within two feet of him; but the Dutchman being on shore, did not care for him, when, all of a sudden, the alligator turned short round in the water, and in so doing, with his tail, he tripped up the Dutchman and threw him into the water, and then laid hold of him and dived down.“

„Well, but a shark could not do that; could he?“

„Yes, sir. Two soldiers were standing on the rocks at St. Helena; the rocks were out of the water, but the swell just broke over them. Two sharks swam up to them in the same way as the alligator did, and one of them, with a blow of his tail, turning round the same way, tripped one of them off into the water, which was very deep. His comrade was very much frightened and ran to the barracks to tell the story. About a week afterwards, a schooner was in Sandy Bay on the other side of the island, and the people seeing a very large shark under the stern, put out a hook with a piece of pork, and caught him; they opened him, and found inside of him, to their horror, the whole of the soldier, except the legs below the knees: the monster had swallowed him whole, with the exception of his legs, which had been nipped off when it closed its jaws. I saw the maw and the back-bone of the animal at the barracks, and it certainly was the largest brute of the kind that I ever witnessed in my life.“

289) Trincomalee, auf der Insel Ceylon.

„I really had no idea that they were so bold, Ready.“

„It is a fact, I assure you, sir; and therefore we cannot be too careful how we go into the water: you saw how soon the poor pig was dispatched.“

„I wonder how the pigs get on, Ready,“ said William.

„I dare say they have littered²⁹⁰⁾ by this time, sir; they have no want of food.“

„But can they eat the cocoa-nuts?“

„Not the old ones, but they can the young ones, which are constantly dropping from the trees, and then there's plenty of roots for them. If we stay long here we shall soon have good sport hunting them; but we must be very careful, Master William; for although they were tame pigs when we brought them on shore, they will be wild and very savage in a very short time. A wild boar is a formidable animal.“

„So I believe,“ said Mr. Seagrave: „how must we hunt them?“

„Why, sir, with the dogs, and then shoot them. I am glad that Vixen is to pup²⁹¹⁾ soon; we shall want more dogs.“

„I am afraid that we shall have more mouths than we can find food for.“

„Never fear that²⁹²⁾, sir, as long as we have the sea to fish in. Dogs live very well upon²⁹³⁾ fish, even if it is raw; in the northern climes they get little else.“

„We shall have some lambs soon, Ready; shall we not?“

„Yes, sir, I expect very soon. I wish we had more food for the animals: they are put rather hard to it just now²⁹⁴⁾; but next year, if we find more food

290) und 291) to litter und to pup gehören zu den in der 264sten Note erwähnten Zeitwörtern. 292) Never fear, seien Sie nicht ängstlich. 293) To live upon a thing, von einer Sache (als Nahrung) leben. 294) They are put rather hard to it, hier: das Futter ist ihnen kärglich zugemessen, sie sind jetzt übel daran.

on the island, we must keep the grass near home, to make hay and stack it for the winter time — or the rainy season rather, for there is no winter in these latitudes. I'm pretty sure we shall find some clear land on the south of the island, for the cocoa-nut grove does not extend so close to the water on that side as it does on the north."

"I do so long²⁹⁵) to go on our exploring party," said William.

"We must wait a little, sir," replied Ready; "but I don't know whether you will go; we must not all three go at once, and leave Mrs. Seagrave alone."

"No," replied Mr. Seagrave, "that would not be fair; either you or I must remain, William."

William made no reply, but it was evident that he was annoyed at the idea of not being of the party. They worked very hard that day, and the walls rose fast out of the water. At sunset they broke off and returned to the house.

After supper, Ready continued his narrative. "We remained concealed until it was dark, and then Hastings and Romer, each with a musket on his shoulders and a ham at his back; and I, being the smallest, with the rifle and the great loaf of bread, which was slung to me by a string passing through a hole bored through the middle, set off on our journey. Our intention was to travel north²⁹⁶), as we knew that was the road leading from the colony; but Hastings had decided that we should first go to the eastward, so as to make what we sailors call a circumbendibus, which would keep us out of the general track. We passed through the deep sands of False Bay, and after that gradually ascended, getting among brushwood and young trees; but we saw no signs of cultivation, nor did we pass one house after we had left False Bay astern of us.

295) I do so long, ich sehne mich so sehr. 296) north für northwards. Statt south, east, west wird lieber southward u. gebraucht.

About twelve o'clock we were very much fatigued, and longed for a drink of water, but we did not find any, although the moon shone as bright as day. We distinctly heard, however, what we did not much like, the howling and cries of the wild beasts, which increased as we went on; still we did not see any, and that was our comfort. At last we were so tired that we all sat down on the ledge of a rock. We dared not go²⁹⁷) to sleep, so we remained there till daylight, listening to the howling of the animals. We none of us spoke, and I presume that Hastings' and Romer's thoughts were the same as my own, which were, that I would have given a great deal to find myself safe and sound again within the prison walls. However, daylight came at last; the wild beasts did not prowl any more; we walked on till we found a stream of water, where we sat down and took our breakfast, after which our courage revived, and we talked and laughed as we walked on, just as we had done before. We now began to ascend the mountains, which Hastings said must be the Swartz or Black Mountains that the soldiers had talked to us about — they might be for all I knew²⁹⁸), but they were very desolate; and when night came on we collected brushwood, and cut down branches with our large knives, that we might make a fire, not only to warm ourselves, but to scare away the wild beasts, whose howling had already commenced. We saw two or three during the day-time sunning themselves on the flat rocks — one was a panther; we had loaded our guns: as we passed, it shewed its white teeth, but did not move; the others were too far off for us to distinguish what they were. We lighted our fire and ate our supper; the loaf was half gone²⁹⁹), and the hams had been well cut into — we knew, therefore, that very soon we should have to trust to our guns for 297) Nach to dare und to need fällt to weg. You need not go. 298) They might be for all I knew, sie mochten meinethalben sein, was sie wollten. 299) Half gone, halb aufgezehrt.

procuring food. As soon as we had finished our meal, we lay down by the fire, with our muskets loaded close to us, and our ammunition placed out of danger. We were so tired, that we were soon fast asleep. It had been agreed that Romer should keep the first watch, and Hastings the middle, and I the morning; but Romer fell asleep, and the consequence was, that the fire was not kept up. It was about midnight that I was awakened by something breathing hard in my face, and just as I could recall my senses and open my eyes, I found myself lifted up by my waistband, and the teeth of some animal pinching my flesh. I tried to catch at my musket, but I put out my wrong hand, and laid hold of a still lighted brand out of the fire, which I darted into the animal's face; it let me drop directly, and ran away."

„What a providential escape!“ said Mrs. Seagrave.

„Yes, it was, ma'am; the animal was a hyena. Fortunately they are a very cowardly³⁰⁰⁾ sort of beast; still, had it not been for the lighted stick³⁰¹⁾, it would have carried me off, for I was very small then, and it lifted me up as if I was a feather in its mouth. The shout I gave woke Hastings, who seized his musket and fired. I was very much frightened, as you may suppose. As for Romer, he never woke till we pushed him hard, he was so completely knocked up³⁰²⁾. This affair, of course, made us more cautious, and afterwards we lighted two fires, and slept between them, one always remaining on the watch. For a week we travelled on, and as soon as we were over the mountains, we turned our heads to the northward. We now were away from rocks and brushwood, and entered a large plain. Our provisions were all gone, and we were one day without any; but we killed an antelope called a spring-bock, which gave us provisions for three or four days: there was no want of game after we had descended into the plain. I forgot to mention, however, a narrow escape we had³⁰³), just before we had left an extensive forest on the side of the mountain. We had walked till past noon, and were very much tired; we decided upon taking our dinner under a large tree, and we threw ourselves down in the shade. Hastings was lying on his back, with his eyes looking upwards, when he perceived, on a lower branch of the tree, a panther, which lay along it, his green eyes fixed upon us, and ready to spring: he seized his musket, and fired it without taking aim, for there was no time; but the ball entered the stomach of the animal, and, as it appeared, divided its back-bone. Down came the beast, within three or four feet of where we lay, with a loud roar, and immediately crouched to spring upon Romer; but it could not, for the back-bone being broken, it had not any power in its hinder quarters, so it raised up its fore quarters, and then dropped down again. I never saw such rage and fury in an animal in my life. At first we were too much frightened to fire; but perceiving that the beast could not spring, Hastings snatched the musket from Romer, and shot it through the head."

300) Cowardly ist Adj. u. Adv. 301) Had it not been for, wenn nicht gewesen wäre &c. 302) To be knocked up, soviel als exhausted, fatigued.

„That was, indeed, another wonderful escape," observed Mrs. Seagrave.

„It was, ma'am; but, do you know, we cared less for danger every time we ran into it. We were now obliged to hunt for our livelihood, and we became bolder than ever. Our clothes were all in rags; but we had plenty of powder and ammunition; there were hundreds and hundreds of antelopes and gnus³⁰⁴) in the plain — indeed, sometimes it was impossible to count them. We didn't want for provisions³⁰⁵), I assure you; but this 303) A narrow escape we had, wir kamen noch mit einem blauen Auge davon. 304) A gnu is a kind of antelope, whose form partakes of that of the horse, the ox and the deer. 305) We didn't want for, wir hatten nicht Mangel an u.

plentiful supply of game was the cause of our being in greater danger, for now, for the first time, we heard the roar of the lions every night. Of all the noises I ever heard, it is certainly the one which, to my mind³⁰⁶), is the most terrible. We made large fires to keep them off, but I assure you they often made us tremble when they came near to us."

"Did you ever meet with one in the daytime?" said William.

"Yes, sir; we often saw them, but they never attacked us, and we were too much afraid to fire at them. Once, we met one face to face. We had killed an antelope called a hartebeest³⁰⁷) and, with our muskets on our shoulders, were running to secure it, having marked where it fell in the high grass. Just as we came up to the spot of grass, we heard a roar, and found ourselves not ten yards from a lion, who was lying on the top of the beast we had killed, his eyes flashing fire at us, and half raising himself as if ready for a spring. We all took to our heels as fast as we could. I never looked back till I was out of breath; but the lion was content with our running away, and did not take the trouble to follow us. We went to sleep that night without our supper. Well, sir, we had been travelling, we really hardly knew where, but certainly in northerly direction, for three weeks, and were quite worn out: we now all agreed that we had done a very foolish thing, and would gladly have gone back again. We walked along the whole day without speaking to one another, except when it was necessary to hunt for provisions; for my part, I declare that I was willing to lie down and die, if I could have so done, and I became quite indifferent to the roaring of the lions, and felt as if I should be glad if one would have made a meal of me; when, one morning, we fell in with a party of natives. We could not speak to 306) to my mind, nach meiner Meinung. 307) Hartebeest, der holländische Name für quanga (or cervine antelope).

them, but they appeared very peaceable and well-disposed. They were of the Karroo tribe, as they told us by pointing to themselves, and saying, Karroos, and then they pointed to us, and said, Dutch. We shot game, and gave it to them, which pleased them very much, and they remained with us for five or six days. We tried by signs to inquire of them, if there were any Dutch settlement about there; and they understood us, said that there was, in a direction which they pointed out to us, to the north-east. We offered them a present if they would shew us the way; for we had made up our minds that we would give ourselves up to the Dutch, and go back to prison. Two of the men agreed to go with us; the rest of the tribe, with the women and children, went southward. The next day we arrived at a Dutch settlement of three or four farmhouses, called Graef Reynets; but I must leave off now, for it is past bed-time."

CHAPTER XXXVI.

The construction of the fish-pond proceeded rapidly, and on the third day it was nearly complete. As soon as all the walls were finished, Ready threw out sand and shingle³⁰⁸) so as to make the part next to the beach nearly as deep as the other; so that there might be sufficient water to prevent the gulls and man-of-war birds from darting down, and striking the fish. While Ready was thus employed, Mr. Seagrave and William collected more rocks, so as to divide the pond into four parts, at the same time allowing a communication between each part. These inside walls, as well as the outside, were made of sufficient width to walk upon; by which means they would have all the fish within 308) Unter shingle versteht man das kleine Gestein im Ufersand.

reach of the spear, in case they wished to take them out. The day after the pond was completed the weather changed, but the storms were not so violent as at the commencement of the rainy season. The rain poured down with great force, but it was not accompanied with such terrific thunder and lightning, nor were the storms of so long continuance, generally clearing up after a few hours. In the intervals of fine weather they caught a great many fish, which they put into the pond, so that it was well stocked. But a circumstance occurred, which was the occasion of great alarm to them all; which was, that one evening William was taken with a shivering, and complained very much of a pain in his head. Ready had promised to continue his narrative on that evening, but William was too ill to sit up. He was put into bed, and the next morning he was in a violent fever. Mr. Seagrave was much alarmed, as the symptoms were worse every hour; and Ready, who had sat up with him during the night, called Mr. Seagrave out of the house, and said, „This is a bad case, sir; Master William was working yesterday with his hat off, and I fear that he has been struck by the sun. It's a pity³⁰⁹⁾ but we had some one who could take some blood from him.“

„I have a lancet,“ said Mr. Seagrave; „but I really have never bled³¹⁰⁾ anybody in my life.“

„Nor have I, sir; but if you have a lancet, I think it is our duty to try. If you think that you cannot, I will do my best, it is a very simple operation.“

„Well, Ready, one of us must do it, I believe.“

„Perhaps my hand will be most steady in this instance, sir,“ observed Ready; „I'm fearful of the fever going to his brain.“

„I would prefer your attempting it, Ready, I must say,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „my hand would not be steady, I tremble so for my dear child.“

309) It's a pity, es ist Schade. 310) To bleed, zur Ader lassen, auch neutral: bluten.

They went into the house again. Mr. Seagrave found his lancet, and Ready bound up William's arm. As soon as the vein was swelled, he held it firm under the ball of his thumb, and was successful in the first attempt. By the advice of Ready, a great deal of blood was taken from the sufferer, who appeared to be much relieved by the operation. His arm was then bandaged, and, having drank³¹¹⁾ a little water, which he asked for, he again was laid upon his pillow. The next day the fever was as violent as ever. William was bled again, and his mother watched over him with anxiety and in tears. The poor boy was for many days in great danger; and the cheerful house was now one of gloom and silence. How fervent were now the morning and evening prayers; how often during the day did his parents offer up a petition to heaven for their dear boy's recovery. The weather became finer every day, and it was almost impossible to keep Tommy quiet: Juno went out with him and Albert every morning, and kept them with her while she cooked; and, fortunately, Vixen had pupped, and when Juno could no longer amuse them, she brought them two of the puppies to play with. As for³¹²⁾ the quiet, meek little Caroline, she would remain during the whole day holding her mother's hand, and watching her brother, or working with her needle by the side of his bed.

Ready, who could not be idle, had taken the hammer and cold chisel to make the salt-pan, at which he worked during those portions of the day in which his services were not required in-doors; and as he sat chipping away the rock, his thoughts were ever upon William, for he dearly loved the boy for his amiable disposition and his cleverness; and many a time during the day would³¹³⁾ he stop his work, and the tears would run down his cheeks as he offered up his petition to the Almighty, that the boy might be spared 311) drunk als Particip gewöhnlicher. 312) As for, was betraf. 313) Would he stop, pflegte er innen zu halten mit ic.

to his afflicted parents. And those prayers were heard, for, on the ninth day, William was pronounced by Ready and Mr. Seagrave to have much less fever, and shortly afterwards it left him altogether; but he was so weak that he could not raise himself in his bed for two or three days; and it was not till more than a fortnight after the fever had left him that he could go out of the house. The joy that was expressed by them all when the change took place may be imagined; nor were the thanksgivings less fervent than had been the prayers. During his convalescence, as there was nothing else to do, Mr. Seagrave and Ready, who now went gladly to their work, determined, as the salt-pan was finished, that they would make a bathing place. Juno came to their assistance, and was very useful in assisting to drag the wheels which brought the rocks and stones; and Tommy was also brought down, that he might be out of the way while Mrs. Seagrave and Caroline watched the invalid. By the time that William was able to go out of the house, the bathing place was finished, and there was no longer any fear of the sharks. William came down to the beach with his mother, and looked at³¹⁴ the work which had been done; he was much pleased with it, and said, „Now, Ready, we have finished every thing at home for the present; all we have to do is to explore the island, and to go to the cove and examine our collection from the wreck.“

„Very true, Master William; and the weather has been so fine, that I think we may venture upon one or the other in a few days more; but not till you are stronger, for you must not be left alone with your mamma until you are quite well.“

„Be left, Ready! why, I was to go with you.“

„No, Master William, that cannot be now. Sup-

314) Man sage to look at, nach Etwas sehen, — ebenso to aim, und ähnliche.

pose we were to have a storm, and you were to get wet, and have to sleep in your wet clothes, you might be taken with the fever again, and that when you were a long way from home: we must be prudent for a time³¹⁵). Sit down on the rock and enjoy that nice breeze; it will do you good; but you must not stay too long.“

„I shall soon be strong again, Ready; thank God for his goodness.“

„I have no doubt of it, Master William; and we have good reason to thank God, for we could ill spare you. I am going to take a turtle out of the pond, for we must feed you well, and make you strong.“

„It's a long while since you have gone on with your story, Ready,“ said William, after they had taken their supper; I wish you would do so now, as I am sure I shall not be tired.“

„With pleasure, Master William,“ replied Ready; „but can you remember where I left off, for my memory is none of the best?“

„O yes; if you recollect, you had just arrived at a Dutch farmer's house, in company with the savages, at a place called Graef Reynets, I think.“

„Very true, sir. Well then, the Dutch farmer came out when he saw us coming, and asked us who we were. We told him that we were English prisoners, and that we wished to give ourselves up to the authorities. He took away our arms and ammunition, and said that he was the authority in that part, which was true enough; and then he said, You'll not run away without arms and ammunition, that's certain. As for sending you to the Cape, that I may not be able to do for months³¹⁶); so if you wish to be fed well, you must work well while you're here. We replied, that we should be very glad to make ourselves useful, and then he sent us some dinner by a Hottentot girl, and 315) for a time, für einige Zeit. 316) for months, monatelang.

shewed us a small room for us to sleep in. But we soon found out that we had to deal with an ill-tempered, brutal fellow; and that he gave us plenty of hard work, but by no means plenty of food. He would not trust us with guns, so the Hottentots went out with the cattle, but he gave us plenty of work to do about the house; and at last he treated us very cruelly. When he was short of provisions for the Hottentots and other slaves, of which he had a good many, he would go out with the other farmers who lived near him, and shoot quaggas for them to eat. Nobody but a Hottentot could live upon such flesh.

„What is a quagga?“

„A wild ass, partly covered with stripes, but not so much as the zebra; a pretty animal to look at, but the flesh is very bad. Well, sir, he at last would give us nothing to eat but quaggas, the same as the Hottentots, while he and his family — for he had a wife and five children — lived upon mutton and the flesh of the antelope, which is very excellent eating. We asked him to allow us a gun to procure better food, and he kicked Romer so unmercifully, that he could not work for two days afterwards. As for the poor Hottentots and slaves, they were flogged every day, with a whip made of the hide of a rhinoceros, a terrible thing, which cut into the flesh at every blow. Our lives became quite a burden to us; we were employed all day on the farm one way or another, and every day he was more brutal towards us. At last we agreed that we would stand it no longer³¹⁷), and one evening, Hastings told him so. This put him into a great rage, and he called two of the slaves, and ordered them to tie him to the waggon wheel, swearing that he would cut every bit of skin off his body, and he went into his house to get his whip. The slaves had hold of Hastings, and were tying him up, for they dared not disobey their 317) Vor Comparativen auch no statt not. — To stand, hier: aushalten.

master, when he said to us, If I am flogged this way, it will be all over with us. Now's your time; run back behind the house, and when he comes out with the whip, do you go in and seize the muskets, which are always ready loaded. Hold him at bay³¹⁸⁾ till I get clear, and then we will get away somehow or another. You must do it, for I am sure he will flog me till I am dead, and he will shoot you, as runaway prisoners, as he did his two Hottentots the other day. As Romer and I thought this very probable, we did as Hastings told us; and when the Dutchman had gone towards him where he was tied, about fifty yards from the house, we went in. The farmer's wife was in bed, having just given birth to another child, and the children we cared not for. We seized two muskets and a large knife, and came out just as the Dutchman had struck the first blow with the rhinoceros whip, which was so severe, that it took away poor Hastings' breath. We went up; he turned round and saw us: we levelled our muskets at him, and he stopped. Another blow, and we'll shoot you, cried Romer. Yes, cried I; we are only boys, but you've Englishmen to deal with. When we came up, Romer kept his piece levelled³¹⁹⁾ at the Dutchman, while I passed him, and with the knife cut the thongs which bound Hastings. The Dutchman turned pale and did not speak, he was so frightened, and the slaves ran away. As soon as Hastings was free, he seized a large wooden mallet, used for driving in stakes, and struck the Dutchman down to the earth, crying out, That, for flogging an Englishman, you rascal. While the man lay senseless, or dead — I didn't know which at the time — we tied him to the waggon wheels, and returning to the house, seized some ammunition and other articles which might be useful. We then went to the stables, and took the three best horses which the Dutchman had, put some corn in a sack for each of them, took some cord for halters, mounted, and rode away as fast as we could. As we knew that we should be pursued, we first galloped away as if we were going eastward, to the Cape; and then, as soon as we were on ground which would not shew the tracks of our horses' hoofs, we turned round to the northward, in the direction of the Bushman country. It was dark soon after we had altered our course; but we travelled all night, and although we heard the roaring of the lions at a distance, we met with no accident. At daylight we rested our horses, and gave them some corn, and then sat down to eat some of the provisions we had brought with us."

318) To hold oder keep at bay, eigentlich ein Jäger-Ausdruck, etwa: durch Drohung zum Stehen bringen und festhalten. 319) Die Verdoppelung des l in level, travel, shovel ist unnöthig, und mit Recht angefochten (s. z. B. Webster's Einleitung z. f. Wörterbuch).

"How long were you with the farmer at Graef Reynets?"

"Nearly eight months, sir; and during that time we could not only speak Dutch³²⁰), but we could make ourselves understood by the Hottentots and other natives; besides which, we had a good knowledge of the country, and knew what to do when we travelled. While we were eating, we held a consultation how we should proceed. We were aware that the Dutchmen would shoot us if they came up with us, and that they would come out in strong force against us; and we were afraid that we had killed the man, and if so, they would hang us as soon as we got to the Cape; so we were at a great loss to know how to act. At last we decided that we would cross the country of the Bushmen, and get to the sea-side, to the northward of the Cape. Having done talking, we took the saddles off our horses, and tethered them where there was good grass; for you see, sir, if we had not made them fast they would have galloped back to the farm. We determined that it would be better to travel at night, as there would be less fear of the wild beasts, or of being seen; so we went fast asleep for many hours. Towards the evening, we found water for the horses, and then we fed them again, and proceeded on our journey. I won't tell what passed every day for a fortnight, by which time we had pretty well killed our horses, and we were compelled to stop among a tribe of Gorraguas, I think they called them, a very mild, inoffensive people, who supplied us with milk, and treated us very kindly. We had some adventures, nevertheless. One day, as we were passing by a tuft of small trees, a rhinoceros charged upon³²¹⁾ my horse, which very narrowly escaped by wheeling short round and getting behind him; the beast then made off without meddling with us any more. Every day we used to shoot some animal or other, for provision: sometimes it was a gnu, a very curious creature, something between an antelope and a bull; at other times it was one of the antelope kind — there were plenty of them.

320) To speak Dutch, holländisch sprechen. Unter High Dutch und Low Dutch verstehen jedoch die meisten Engländer oft irrthümlich Hoch- und Niederdeutsch.

„Well, we staid for three weeks with these people, and gave our horses time to refresh themselves; and then we set off again, keeping more towards the coast as we went southward, for the Gorraguas told us that there was a fierce native tribe, called Kaffers, to the northward, who would certainly kill us if we went there. The fact is, we did not know what to do. We had left the Cape without any exact idea where we should go to, like foolish boys as we were, and we became more entangled with difficulties every day. At last, we decided that it would be better to find our way back to the Cape, and deliver ourselves up as prisoners, for we were tired out with fatigue and constant danger. All that we were afraid of was, that we had killed the Dutch farmer at Graef Reynets, who had treated us so brutally; but Hastings said he did not care; that was his business, and he would take his chance: so when we bade adieu to the Gorraguas, who were quite satisfied with our presenting them with all the buttons we could spare, we turned our horses' heads to the south-east, so to make the sea and go to southward at the same time.

321) To charge upon one, Einen angreifen, daher z. B. charger, ein Streitroß.

„I have now to mention a most melancholy event which occurred. Two days after we had recommenced our travels³²²), in passing through some high grass, we stumbled on a lion, which was devouring a gnu. Romer, who happened to be some ten yards foremost of the three, was so alarmed that he fired at the animal, which we had agreed never to do, as it was folly to enrage so powerful a beast, when our party was so small. The lion was slightly wounded; he gave a roar that might have been heard for a mile, sprang upon Romer, and with one blow of his paw knocked him off the saddle into the bushes. Our horses, which were frightened, wheeled round and fled, for the animal was evidently about to attack us. As it was, he did make one bound in our direction; we could not pull up until we had gone half a mile; and when we did, we saw the lion had torn down the horse which Romer had ridden, and was dragging away the carcase to the right at a sort of a canter, without any apparent effort on his part. We waited till he was well off, and then rode back to the spot where Romer had fallen: we soon found him, but he was quite dead; the blow with the lion's paw had fractured his skull.

„We had no means of burying him, poor fellow! so we covered him up with bushes, and left him. We were both very melancholy; indeed, as I rode on, I cried for nearly an hour; and Hastings never spoke a word until it was time for us to rest the horses. I ought to have said³²³) that the Gorraguas told us not to travel by night, but by day; and we had done so in consequence of their advice. I believe it was very good advice, notwithstanding this unfortunate accident, for we found that when we had travelled all night the lions had more than once followed us the whole time; and indeed I have often thought since that we were altogether indebted to His mercy who ordereth³²⁴⁾ all things, both in heaven and earth, that we escaped so well as we did. Three days after poor Romer's death we first saw the wide ocean again; and it appeared to us as if we had fallen in³²⁵⁾ with an old friend. We kept³²⁶⁾ near the coast, but we soon found out that we could not obtain the supply of game, or fuel for our fires at night, so well as we could in the interior, and we agreed to get away from the coast again. We had a dreary plain to pass over, and we were quite faint for want of food — for we had been without any for nearly two days, — when we came upon an ostrich. Hastings put his horse to his speed, but it was of no use — the ostrich ran much faster than the horse could. I remained behind, and, to my great joy, discovered his nest, with thirteen large eggs in it. Hastings soon came back, with his horse panting and out of wind. We sat down, lighted a fire, and roasted two of the eggs; we made a good dinner of them, and having put four more on our saddle bows, we continued our journey. For three weeks more we had nothing but difficulty and suffering. One forenoon, at last, we saw the Table Mountain, and were as glad to see it as if we had seen the white cliffs³²⁷⁾ of Old England. We pushed on our horses with the hopes³²⁸⁾ of being once more comfortably in prison before night; when, as we neared the bay, we observed that English colours were flying on board of the vessels in the road.

322) A travel ist ein Mittelding zwischen journey und voyage. Oft bedeutet es Reisen ohne eigentliches Ziel. 323) I ought to have said, ich hätte eigentlich sagen sollen.

324) Ordereth, die altsächsische Orthographie für orders, — noch in der Bibel gebräuchlich. 325) To fall in with one, mit Jemandem zufällig zusammentreffen. 326) We kept, statt we kept ourselves. 327) Die Südküste Englands (bei Dover) besteht nämlich größtentheils aus Kreidefelsen. 328) Hopes häufig statt hope.

This surprised us very much; but soon after that we met an English soldier, who told us that the Cape had been taken by our forces more than six months ago. This was a joyful surprise, as you may suppose. We rode into the town, and reported ourselves to the main-guard, the governor sent for us, heard our story, and sent us to the admiral, who took us on board of his own ship. Now, Master William, as this is a good place to leave off at, and you must be rather tired, I think we had better all go to bed."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

The next morning, as there was no particular work on hand, Ready and Mr. Seagrave took the lines to add to the stock of the fish-pond. As the weather was fine and cool, William accompanied them, that he might have the benefit of the fresh air. As they passed the garden, they observed that the seeds sown had already sprung up an inch or two above the ground, and that, apparently, none of them had missed. While Ready and Mr. Seagrave were fishing, and William sitting near them, William said to his father —

„Many of the islands near us are inhabited; are they not, papa?"

„Yes; but not those very near us, I believe. At all events, I never heard any voyagers mention having seen inhabitants on the isles near which we suppose the one we are on to be."

„What sort of people are the islanders in these seas?"

„They are various. The New Zealanders are the most advanced in civilization, but still they are said to be cannibals. The natives of Van Diemen's Land and Australia are some portions of them of a very degraded class — indeed, little better than the beasts of the field:

I believe them to be the lowest in the scale of all the human race.“

But it is time for us to leave off fishing, and for Master William to go into the house.“

They returned home, and after supper Ready went on with his narrative.

„I left off at the time that I was sent on board of the man-of-war, and I was put down on the books³²⁹⁾ as a supernumerary boy. I was on board of her for nearly four years, and we were sent about from port to port and from clime to clime, until I grew a strong, tall lad, and was put into the mizen-top. I found it very comfortable. I did my duty, and the consequence was, I never was punished; for a man may serve on board of a man-of-war without fear of being punished, if he only does his duty, and the duty is not very hard either; not like on board of the merchant vessels, where there are so few hands — there it is hard work. Of course, there are some captains who command men-of-war who are harsh and severe — what they call martinets³³⁰⁾ in the service; but it was my good fortune to be with a very mild and steady captain, who was very sorry when he was obliged to punish the men, although he would not overlook any improper conduct. The only thing which was a source of constant unhappiness to me was, that I could not get to England again, and see my mother. I had written two or three letters, but never had an answer; and at last I became so impatient, that I determined to run away the very first opportunity which might offer. We were then stationed in the West Indies, and I had very often consultations with Hastings on the subject, for he was quite as anxious to get away as I was; and we had agreed that we would start off together the very first opportunity. At last we anchored in Port Royal, Ja-

329) I was put down on the books, ich wurde eingeschrieben.

330) A martinet ist ein, die Mannszucht auf den Schiffen fast zu streng beobachtender Capitain.

maica, and there was a large convoy of West India ships, laden with sugar, about to sail immediately. We knew that if we could get on board of one, they would secrete us until the time of sailing, for they were short-handed³³¹⁾ enough, the men-of-war having pressed every man³³²⁾ they could lay their hands upon. There was but one chance, and that was by swimming on board of one of the vessels during the night-time, and that was easy enough, as they were anchored not a hundred yards from our own ship. What we were afraid of were the sharks, which were so plentiful in the harbour. However, the night before the convoy was to sail we made up our minds that we would run the risk, for we were so impatient to escape that we did not care for any thing. It was in the middle watch³³³⁾ — I recollect it, and shall recollect it all my life, as if it were last night — that we lowered ourselves down very softly from the bows of the ship, and as soon as we were in the water we struck out for one of the West Indiamen close to us. The sentry at the gangway saw the light in the water made by our swimming through it, and he hailed, of course: we gave no answer, but swam as fast as we could; for, after he had hailed we heard a bustle, and we knew that the officer of the watch was manning a boat to send after us. I had just caught hold of the cable of the West Indiaman, and was about to climb up by it, for I was a few yards before Hastings, when I heard a loud shriek, and, turning round, perceived a shark plunging down with Hastings in his jaws. I was so frightened, that for a short time I could not move: at last I recovered myself, and began to climb up by the cable as fast as I could. I was just in time, for another shark made a rush at me; and although I was clear out of the water more than two feet, he sprung up and just caught my shoe by the heel, which he took down with him. Fear gave me strength, and in a second or two afterwards I was up at the hawseholes, and the men on board, who had been looking over the bows, and had witnessed poor Hastings death, helped me on board, and hurried me down below, for the boat from our ship was now nearly alongside. When the officer of the boat came on board, they told him they had perceived us both in the water close to their vessel, and that the sharks had taken us down. As the shriek of Hastings was heard by the people in the boat, the officer believed that it was the case, and returned to the ship. I heard the drum beat to quarters³³⁴) on board of the man-of-war, that they might ascertain who were the two men who had attempted to swim away, and a few minutes afterwards they beat the retreat, having put down D. D. against my name on the books, as well as against that of poor Hastings.“

331) Short-handed, mit zu wenig Mannschaft versehen. 332) To press, wie im Deutschen: (Matrosen)pressen, d. h. mit Gewalt auf-treiben. 333) The watches werden eingetheilt in: the morning watch von 4—6 Uhr, the noon watch, von 8—12, the afternoon watch, von 12—4, the first dog-watch, von 4—6, the second dog-watch, von 6—8, the first-watch, von 8—12, the second oder middle-watch, von 12—4 Uhr früh.

„What does D. D. mean?“

„D. stands for discharged from the service; D. D. stands for dead,“ replied Ready; „and it was only through the mercy of Providence that I was not so.“

„It was a miraculous escape indeed,“ observed Mr. Seagrave.

„Yes, indeed, sir; I can hardly describe my sensations for some hours afterwards. I tried to sleep, but could not — I was in agony. The moment I slumbered, I thought the shark had hold of me, and I would start up and shriek; and then I said my prayers and tried to go to sleep again, but it was of no use. The captain of the West Indiaman was afraid that my shrieks would be heard, and he send me down a tumbler of rum to drink off; this composed me, and at last I fell into a sound sleep. When I awoke, I found that the ship was under weigh³³⁵⁾ and with all canvas set³³⁶⁾, surrounded by more than one hundred other vessels; the men-of-war who took charge of the convoy firing guns and making signals incessantly. It was a glorious sight, and we were bound for Old England. I felt so happy, that I thought I would risk the jaws of another shark to have regained my liberty, and the chance of being once more on shore in my own country, and able to go to Newcastle and see my poor mother.“

334) The drum beats to quarters, die Trommel ruft zu de Posten.

„I am afraid that your miraculous escape did you very little good, Ready,“ observed Mrs. Seagrave, „if you got over it so soon.“

„Indeed, madam, it was not so; that was only the feeling which the first sight of the vessels under weigh for England produced upon me. I can honestly say, that I was a better and more serious person; not but I was from that day better than I was before. The very next night, when I was in my hammock, I prayed very fervently; and there happened to be a very good old Scotchman³³⁷⁾ on board, the second mate, who talked very seriously to me, and pointed out how wonderful had been my preservation, and I felt it. It was he who first read the Bible with me, and made me understand it, and, I may say, became fond of it. I did my duty on our passage home as a seaman before the mast, and the captain was pleased with me. I had told the history of my life to the second mate, and he pointed out to me how foolish and wrong I had been to leave my mother and refuse the assistance of Mr. Masterman. I felt that he was right, and I felt more impatient than ever to throw myself into my mother's arms and ask her forgiveness. The ship I was in was bound to³³⁸⁾ Glasgow, and we parted company with³³⁹⁾

335) To be under weigh, die Anker gelichtet haben. 336) With all canvas set, mit allen oder vollen Segeln. 337) So sagt man Englishman, Dutchman, Irishman, im Plural: Scotchmen, Englishmen etc., dagegen aber Germans, Normans, Romans etc. 338) A ship is bound to, ist bestimmt nach u. 339) To part company with the convoy at North Foreland, and arrived safe in port. The captain took me to the owners, who paid me fifteen guineas for my services during the voyage home; and as soon as I received the money, I set off for Newcastle as fast as I could. I had taken a place on the out side³⁴⁰⁾ of the coach, and I entered into conversation with a gentleman who sat next to me. I soon found out that he belonged to Newcastle, and I first inquired if Mr. Masterman, the ship-builder, was still alive. He told me that he had been dead about three months³⁴¹⁾. And to whom did he leave his money? I asked, for he was very rich, and had no kin. He had no relations, replied the gentleman, and he left the yard and all the stores to him, I believe, because he did not know whom to leave it to. There was a lad whom I knew for certain he intended to have adopted and to have made his heir — a lad of the name of Ready; but he ran away to sea, and has never been heard of since. It is supposed that he was lost in a prize, for he was traced so far. Foolish boy that he was, he might now have been a man of fortune.

„Very foolish indeed,“ replied I.

„Yes; but he has harmed more than himself. His poor mother, who doted upon him, as soon as she heard that he was lost, pined away by degrees, and —

„You don't mean to say that she is dead? interrupted I; seizing the gentleman by the arm.

„Yes, replied he, looking at me with surprise; she died last year of a broken heart.“³⁴²⁾

„I fell back on the luggage behind me, and should have fallen off the coach if the gentleman had not held me. He called to the coachman to pull up the horses, a convoy, den Convoy, d. h. ein in Kriegszeiten der Sicherheit wegen, gegen Bezahlung, mitgenommenes Kriegsschiff, verabschieden. 340) Männer reisen in England meist out-side, d. h. oben auf der Postkutsche. 341) he told me — months, er sagte mir, daß er seit drei Monaten todt sei. 342) To die of a broken heart, vor Gram sterben.

and they took me down, and put me inside: fortunately there was no one there; and as the coach rolled on, I cried as if my heart would break."

Ready appeared so very much affected, that Mr. Seagrave proposed that he should leave off his history for the present, and that they should retire to rest.

"Thank you, sir, it will be better; for I feel my old eyes dim with tears, even now. It's a dreadful thing in after-life to reflect upon, that your foolish conduct has hastened the death of a most kind mother; but so it was, Master William, and I give you the truth for your advantage. I told you that portions of my life would serve as a warning; let them not be thrown away upon you. God bless you, sir! God bless you, madam! Good night."

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

A few mornings afterwards, Juno came in before breakfast with six eggs in her apron, which she had found in the hen-house.

"Look, Missy Seagrave — fowls lay eggs — soon have plenty — plenty for Master William — make him well again — and plenty for chickens by-and-by."

"You haven't taken them all out of the nests, Juno; have you?"

"No, Missy; — leave one in each nest for hen to see."

"Well, then, we will keep them for William, and I hope, as you say, it will make him strong again."

"I am getting quite strong now, mother," replied William; "I think it would be better to leave the eggs for the hens to sit upon."

"No, no, William; your health is of more consequence than having early chickens."

"Tommy likes eggs very much," said Tommy.

„Yes; but Tommy cannot have any at present: Tommy is not ill.“

„Tommy have a stomach-ache,“ replied Tommy.

„I am afraid that you are a little story-teller³⁴³), Tommy; and if you have a stomach-ache, eggs would be bad for you.“

„Tommy got a head-ache,“ replied the boy.

„Eggs are not good for head-aches, Tommy,“ replied his father.

„Tommy ill all over,“ replied Tommy again.

„Then Tommy must be put to bed, and have a dose of castor oil.“

„Tommy don't want castor oil; Tommy wants eggs.“

„Yes, but Tommy won't get eggs,“ replied his father, „so he may as well leave off telling fibs; when there are plenty of eggs, Tommy will have one, if he is a good boy, and not otherwise.“

„I have promised Caroline that she is to take care of the chickens,“ said Mrs. Seagrave, „and I think she must have the egg department also; she promises to be a very useful little girl.“

For a few days Mr. Seagrave and Ready were employed at the garden clearing away the weeds, which had begun to sprout up along with the seeds, which had been sown; during which time William recovered very fast. The two first days, Juno brought in three or four eggs regularly; but on the third day there were none to be found. On the fourth day the hens appeared also not to have laid, much to the surprise of Mrs. Seagrave, as when hens commence laying eggs they usually continue. On the fifth morning, when they sat down to breakfast, Master Tommy did not make his appearance, and Mrs. Seagrave asked where he was.

„I suspect, madam,“ said old Ready, laughing, „that Master Tommy will not come either to his breakfast or his dinner to-day.“

343) A story-teller, ein Flüßmacher.

„What can you mean, Ready?“ said Mrs. Seagrave.

„Why, madam, I will tell you. I thought it very odd that there were no eggs, and I thought it probable that the hens might have laid astray³⁴⁴); so I went about yesterday evening to search. I could not find any eggs, but I found the eggshells, hid under some cocoa-nut leaves; and I argued, that if an animal, supposing there was any on the island, had taken the eggs, it would not have been so careful to hide the eggshells. So, this morning, I fastened up the door of the hen-house, and only left open the little sliding-door, by which the fowls go in to roost; and then, after you were up, I watched behind the trees, and saw Master Tommy come out, and go to the hen-house. He tried the door, and finding it fast, he then crept into the hen-house by the little sliding door. As soon as he was in, I let down the slide, and fastened it with a nail; so, there he is, caught in his own trap.“

„And there shall he remain all day, the little glutton!“ said Mr. Seagrave, who was much amused.

„Yes, it will serve him right,“ replied Mrs. Seagrave; „and be a lesson to him. We will take no notice of him whatever, if he halloos and screams for an hour.“

„Oh, Massa Tommy, me very glad you cotch³⁴⁵) at last; teach you not to suck eggs,“ said Juno; „now you got nothing to eat; you not like that.“

Mr. Seagrave, Ready, and William, as usual, went down to their work; Mrs. Seagrave and Juno, with little Caroline, were busy in-doors; Tommy remained very quiet for an hour, when he commenced roaring; but it was of no use, no one paid any attention to him. At dinner-time he began to roar again, but with as little success; it was not till the evening³⁴⁶) that the door of the hen-house was opened, and Master Tommy permitted to come out. He looked very foolish; and sat down in a corner without speaking.

344) To lay astray, die Eier vertragen, d. h. nicht ins Nest legen. 345) Cotch für are caught (v. to catch). 346) Not till, nicht eher als.

„Well, Master Tommy, how many eggs did you suck to-day?“ said Ready.

„Tommy won't suck eggs any more,“ said the urchin.

„No, you had better not,“ replied Mr. Seagrave, „or you will find, in the end, that you will have less to eat, instead of more, as you have this day.“

„I want my dinner,“ said Tommy.

„You'll have no dinner this day, you may be sure,“ said Mrs. Seagrave; we can't allow you dinner and eggs both; and if you cry, I will lock you up in the hen-house all night: you must now wait patiently till supper-time.“

Tommy found that he could not help himself, so he waited very quietly and very sulkily till supper was ready, when he made up³⁴⁷⁾ for lost time. After which Ready continued his narrative.

„I told you, Master William, that I was informed by the gentleman on the coach that my mother had died of a broken heart, in consequence of my supposed death. I was in an agony until I arrived at Newcastle, where I could ascertain all the facts connected with her decease. When the coach stopped, the gentleman, who had remained outside, came to the coach door, and said to me, If I mistake not, you are Robinson Ready who ran away to sea; are you not? Yes, sir, replied I, very sorrowfully, I am. Well, my man, said he, cheer up; when you went away you were young and thoughtless, and certainly had no idea that you would have distressed your mother as you did. It was not your going to sea, but the report of your death, which preyed so much upon her mind³⁴⁸⁾; and that was not your fault. You must come with me, as I have something to say to you. I can not do any thing until I talk to the neighbours and visit my poor mother; and that the I did not intend to distress my mother; ³⁴⁹ But I report not of my death was no fault of mine. Great mis- less, she would be still alive and happy. chief world, is brought about by very slight causes in this thing, Master William; and if, before we did any might, we were to reflect upon what the consequences better. be, we should all be much wiser and much promised to call upon him the next morning. I then went to the house my mother used to live in. I knew that she was not there; yet I was disappointed and annoyed when I heard merry laughter within. I looked in, for the door was open; in the corner where my mother used to sit, there was a mangle, and two women busily at work; others were ironing at a large table; and when they cried out to me, What do you want ³⁵⁰; and laughed at me, I turned away in disgust, and went to a neighbouring cottage, the inmates of which had been very intimate with my mother. I found the wife at home, but she did not know me; and I told her who I was. She had attended my mother during her illness, till the day of her death; and she told me all I wished to know. It was some little relief to my mind to hear that my poor mother could not have lived, as she had an incurable cancer; but at the same time the woman told me that I was ever in her thoughts, and that Mr. Masterman had been very kind to also said that Mr. Masterman had wanted nothing. I then my mother, and that she had wanted nothing. I then asked her to shew me where my mother had been 349) That is no fault of mine, das ist nicht meine Schuld.

347) To make up for, sich schadlos halten für ic. 348) To prey upon one's mind, am Herzen nagen.

 350) What do you want? was wollen Sie hier.

buried. She put on her bonnet, and led me to the grave, and then, at my request, she left me. I seated myself down³⁵¹⁾ by the mound of turf which covered her, and long and bitterly did I weep her loss and pray for forgiveness.

„It was quite dark when I left the spot and went back to the cottage of the kind woman who had attended my mother. I conversed with her and her husband till late, and then, as they offered me a bed, I remained with them that night. Next morning I went to keep my appointment with the gentleman whom I had met in the coach: I found by the brass plate on the door that he was a lawyer. He desired me to sit down, and then he closed the door carefully, and, having asked me many questions to ascertain if I was really Robinson Ready, he said he was the person employed at Mr. Masterman's death, and that he had found a paper which was of great consequence, as it proved that the insurance of the vessel, which had belonged to my father and Mr. Masterman, and which had been lost, had not been made on Mr. Masterman's share only, but upon my father's as well, and that Mr. Masterman had defrauded my mother³⁵²⁾. He said he had found the paper in a secret drawer some time after Mr. Masterman's death, and that my mother being dead, and I being supposed to be dead, he did not see any use in making known so disagreeable a circumstance; but that now I had re-appeared it was his duty so to do, and that he would arrange the matter for me, if I pleased, with the corporation of the town, to whom, all Mr. Masterman's property had been left in trust to build an hospital and alms-houses. He said that the insurance on the vessel was three thousand pounds, and that one-third of the vessel belonged to my father, so that a thousand pounds were due to him, which the interest for so many years would increase to above two thousand pounds. This was good news³⁵³) for me, and you may suppose I readily agreed to all he proposed. He set to work at once, and having called together the mayor and corporation of the town, and proved the document, they immediately agreed that I was entitled to the money, and that it should be paid to me without any contest. Thus you see, Master William, was a new temptation thrown in my way."

351) Man sagt: to seat one's self down, ebensowohl als to sit down. 352) To defraud one, Cinem bevorthellen.

As soon as the money was in my own hands, I began to squander it away in all manner of folly. Fortunately, I had not received it more than ten days, when the Scotch second mate came like a guardian angel to save me. As soon as I had made known to him what had taken place; he reasoned with me, pointed out to me that I had an opportunity³⁵⁴) of establishing myself for life, and proposed that I should purchase a part of a vessel, on condition that I was captain of her. I liked this idea very much, and being convinced that I had been making a fool of myself, I resolved to take his advice; but one thing only restrained me; I was still very young, not more than twenty years old; and although I could navigate at one time³⁵⁵), I had latterly paid no attention. I told Sanders this, and he replied, that if I would take him as my first mate, that difficulty would be got over, as he could navigate well, and that I could learn to do so in the first voyage; so all was arranged."

„Fortunately, I had not spent above one hundred pounds of the money — quite enough too³⁵⁶) in so short a time. I set off for Glasgow, in company with Sanders, and he busied himself very hard in looking about for a vessel that would suit. At last, he found that there was one ready for launching, which, in consequence of the failure of the house for which it was built, was to be sold. He made inquiries, and having found who was likely to purchase her³⁵⁷⁾ — that it was a very safe and respectable firm — he made a proposal for me that I should take one-fourth share of her, and command her. As Sanders was very respectable, and well known to be a steady man, his recommendation was attended to so far, that the parties wished to see and speak to me. They were satisfied with me, young as I was, and the bargain was made. I paid down my two thousand pounds for my share, and as soon as the vessel was launched, was very busy with Sanders, whom I had chosen a first mate, in fitting her out. The house which had purchased her with me was a West India firm, and the ship was of course intended for the West India trade. I had two or three hundred pounds left, after I had paid my share of the vessel, and this I employed in purchasing a venture on my own account, and providing nautical instruments, etc. I also fitted myself out, for you see, Master William, although Sanders had persuaded me to be rational, I was still puffed up with pride at the idea of being captain of my own ship; it was too great a rise for one who had just before been a lad in the mizen-top of a man-of-war. I dressed myself very smart — wore white shirts, and rings on my fingers; I even put on gloves, and tried to make my hands white. Indeed, as captain and part-owner³⁵⁸⁾ of a fine vessel, I was considered as somebody, and was often invited to the table of other owners of the vessel. I was well off³⁵⁹⁾, for my pay was ten pounds a month, independent of what my own venture might produce, and my quarter-share of the profits of the vessel. This may be considered as the most prosperous portion of 357) He was likely to purchase the ship, es hatte den Anschein, als ob er das Schiff kaufen wollte. 358) Part-owner, Mit-Eigner, Mittheider. 359) I was well off, ich stand mich sehr gut dabei.

353) Man sagt this was und there were good news, doch letzteres seltener. 354) Opportunity, Gelegenheit, occasion, Veranlassung. — Ersteres durch Zufall, letzteres durch Gestaltung nahe liegender Umstände. 355) At one time, früher einmal. 356) Quite enough too, übrigens völlig genug.

my life; and so, if you please, we will leave off here for to-night, for I may as well tell you at once that it did not last very long."

CHAPTER XXXIX.

For several days after, they were employed in clearing away the stumps of the cocoa-nut trees in the winding path to the storehouse; and as soon as that work was finished, Ready put up a lightning conductor at the side of the storehouse, like the one which he had put up near to the cottage. They had now got through all the work that they had arranged to do during the rainy season. The ewes had dropped their lambs, but both the sheep and the goats began to suffer for want of pasture. For a week they had no rain, and the sun burst out very powerfully; and Ready stated, that it was his opinion that the rainy season was now over. William had become quite strong again; and he was very impatient that they should commence the survey of the island, and very anxious to be of the party. After a great deal of consultation, it was at last settled that Ready and William should make the first survey to the southward, and then return and report what they had discovered. This was decided upon on the Saturday evening, and on the Monday morning they were to start. The knapsacks were got ready, and well filled with boiled salt pork, and flat cakes of bread, made by Juno. They were each to have a musket and ammunition, and a blanket was folded up to carry on the shoulders, that they might sleep on it at night. Ready did not forget his compass, nor the small axes, for them to blaze the trees as they went through the wood. The whole of Saturday was occupied in making their preparations. After supper, Ready said, „Now, Master William, before we start on our travels, I think

I may as well wind up³⁶⁰) my history. I haven't a great deal more to tell, as my good fortune did not last long; and after my remaining so long in a French prison, my life was one continued chapter of from bad to worse. I left off where I had purchased a share of a merchant vessel, and was, in my opinion, on the full trip to fortune: so now to proceed. Our ship was soon ready, and we sailed with convoy for Barbadoes. Sanders proved a good navigator, and from him, before we arrived at Barbadoes, I gained all the knowledge which I required to enable me to command and navigate my vessel. Sanders attempted to renew our serious conversation, but my property had made me vain; and now that I felt I could do without his assistance, I not only kept him at a distance, but assumed the superior. This was a very ungrateful return for his kindness to me, Master William; but it is too often the case in this world. Sanders was very much annoyed, and on our arrival at Barbadoes, he told me that it was his intention to quit the vessel. I replied very haughtily, that he might do as he pleased; the fact is, I was anxious to get rid of him³⁶¹), merely because I was under obligations to him³⁶²): I tell this to my shame, Master William. Well, sir, Sanders left me, and I felt quite happy at his departure. My ship was soon with a full cargo of sugar on board of her, and we waited for convoy to England. When at Barbadoes, I had an opportunity to buy four brass guns, which I mounted on deck, and had a good supply of ammunition on board. I was very proud of my vessel, as she had proved in the voyage out to be a very fast sailor; indeed, she sailed better than some of the men-of-war which convoyed us; and now that I had guns on board, I considered myself quite safe from any of the enemies' privateers. While we were waiting for convoy, which 360) To wind up one's history, seine Geschichte auferzählen.

361) To get rid of one, Jemanden los werden. 362) To be under obligations to one, Jemandem Dank schuldig sein.

was not expected for a fortnight, it blew a very heavy gale, and my ship, as well as others, dragged their anchors³⁶³), and were driven out of Carlisle Bay. We were obliged to make sail to beat into the bay again, it still blowing very fresh. What with being tired waiting so long for convoy, and the knowledge that arriving before the other West Indiamen would be very advantageous, I made up my mind that, instead of beating up into the bay again, I would run for England without protection, trusting to the fast sailing of my vessel and the guns which I had on board. I forgot at the time that the insurance on the vessel was made in England as sailing without would render the insurance void³⁶⁴), if any misfortune occurred. Well, sir, I made sail for England, and for three weeks every thing went on well. We saw very few vessels, and those which did chase us could not come up with us; but as we were running with a fair wind up channel, and I had made sure of being in port before night, a French privateer hove³⁶⁵) in sight and gave chase. We were obliged to haul our wind³⁶⁶), and it blowing very fast, we carried away our main-top-mast³⁶⁷). This accident was fatal; the privateer came alongside of us and laid us by the board³⁶⁸), and that night I was in a French prison, and, I may say, a pauper³⁶⁹); for the insurance of the vessel was void, from my having sailed without convoy. I felt that I had no one to thank but myself for the unfortunate position I was in; at all 363) A ship drags her anchors, läßt die Anker schleppen. Man sagt auch the anchor is come home, oder the anchor drives.

 364) To render void, ungültig machen. 365) To heave in sight, sichtbar werden, — eigentlich nur vom Anker gebräuchlich, der beim Aufziehen, indem er das Wasser verläßt, dem Aufziehenden sichtbar wird.
 366) To haul one's wind, dicht beim Winde segeln, d. h. durch angemessene Stellung der Segel fast gegen den Wind schiffen.
 367) S. d. 33ste Note. We carried away; eigentlich we had our &c. carried away. 368) Laid us by the board, enterte Bord an Bord. 369) A pauper, ein Armer, der von öffentlicher Unterstützung lebte, zum Unterschied von poor, der nicht gerade Almosen-Empfänger sein muß.

events, I was severely punished, for I remained a prisoner for nearly six years. I contrived to escape with three or four others; we suffered dreadfully, and at last arrived in England, in a Swedish vessel, without money, or even clothes that would keep out the weather. Of course, I had nothing to do but to look out for a berth³⁷⁰) on board of a ship, and I tried for that of second mate, but without success; I was too ragged, and looked too miserable; so I determined, as I was starving, to go before the mast³⁷¹). There was a fine vessel in the port; I went on board to offer myself; the mate went down to the captain, who came on deck, and who should he be but Sanders! I hoped that he would not remember me, but he did immediately, and held out his hand. I never did feel so ashamed in my life as I did then. Sanders perceived it, and asked me down into the cabin. I then told him all that had happened, and he appeared to forget that I had behaved so ill to him; he offered me a berth on board, and money in advance to fit me out. But if he would not remember my conduct, I could not forget it, and I told him so, and begged his forgiveness. Well, sir, that good man, as long as he lived, was my friend. I became his second mate before he died, and we were again very intimate. My misfortunes had humbled me, and I once more read the Bible with him; and I have, I trust, done so ever since. When he died, I continued second mate for some time, and then was displaced. Since that, I have always been as a common seaman on board of different vessels; but I have been well treated and respected, and I may add, I have not been unhappy, for I felt that property would have only led me into follies, and have made me forget, that in this world we are to live so as to prepare ourselves for another. Now, Master William, you have the history 370) Berth, Lagerstätte auf Schiffen, oft auch birth geschrieben.

 371) To go before the mast, d. h. gemeiner Matrose zu werden.

of Robinson Ready; and I hope that there are portions of it which may prove useful to you. I am now an old man, and weaned from the things of this world; all I hope is to die in peace, and be useful until it pleases God to call me away."

"Useful you have been, indeed, lately," said Mrs. Seagrave; "and I hope you will live a long while yet, Ready, and have a happy old age."

"It will be as God pleases, madam," replied Ready; "but sailors are not long-lived. I feel as if I could pass the remainder of my days on this little island with perfect content. I know you all feel otherwise, but that is natural. I am an old man already, and have nothing to look forward to; I have no relations, no children; and all I require is, employment to amuse me, and my Bible to teach me how to die. For your sakes, and not for my own, I sincerely hope we shall be searched for, and found, and that you may return to the busy world. As for myself, I would willingly remain upon the island for the remainder of my days, and have the boughs of the cocoa-nut trees waving over my grave. I don't know, but I really have a kind of feeling that such will be the case, and I dwell upon the idea with pleasure."

"No, no, Ready, you must not think of that; you must go back with us one of these days," replied Mr. Seagrave, "and live with us altogether. We never part again. You must give up your seafaring life, and sit in the chimney corner, or bask in the sun out of doors, just as you please. You require repose, and I trust your old age will be cheerful. At all events, it shall not be my fault if it is not."

"Nor mine, Ready, I assure you," added Mrs. Seagrave; "I thank you kindly for your good intentions towards me; but there is One above who will decide for us, and whatever He decrees is right."

"Master William, we must be off betimes to-morrow, and as we are all to breakfast early together, why I think the sooner we go to bed the better."

„Very true,“ replied Mr. Seagrave. „William dear, bring me the Bible.“

CHAPTER XL.

They were all up early the next morning, and breakfasted at an early hour. The fried fish was excellent, and Master Tommy was nearly choked by a bone, which stuck in his throat, in consequence of his being so greedy, and eating so fast. However, after a good deal of thumping, and some alarm on the part of Mrs. Seagrave, Juno forced her fore-finger down his throat, and the bone disappeared. The knapsacks and guns, and the other requisites for the journey, were all prepared; William and Ready rose from the table, and taking an affectionate leave of Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave, they started on their journey. The sun was shining brilliantly, and the weather had become warm; the ocean in the distance gleamed brightly, as its waters danced, and the cocoa-nut trees moved their branches gracefully to the breeze. They set off in high spirits³⁷²), and having called the two shepherd dogs, and driven back Vixen, who would have joined the party, they passed the storehouse, and ascending the hill on the other side, they got their hatchets ready to blaze the trees; and Ready having set his course by his pocket compass, they were fairly on their way. For some time they continued to cut the bark of the trees with their hatchets, without speaking, and then Ready stopped again to look at his compass.

„I think the wood is thicker here than ever, Ready,“ observed William.

„Yes, sir, it is; but I suspect we are now in the 372) In high spirits, in guter Laune, munter und guter Dinge.

thickest part of it, right in the middle of the island; however, we shall soon see. We must keep a little more away to the southward. We had better get on as fast as we can. We shall have less work by-and-by, and then we can talk better."

For half an hour they continued their way through the wood, and, as Ready had observed, the trees became more distant from each other; still, however, they could not see any thing before them but the stems of the cocoa-nuts. It was hard work, chopping the trees every second, and their foreheads were moist with the exertion.

"I think we had better pull up²⁷³⁾ for a few minutes, Master William; you will be tired; you are not so strong as you were before your fever."

"I have not been so used to exercise, Ready, and therefore I feel it more," replied William, wiping his face with his handkerchief, as he laid his gun against the trunk of a tree. "I should like to stop a few minutes. How long do you think it will be³⁷⁴⁾ before we are out of the wood?"

"Not half an hour more, sir, I should think; even before that, perhaps. I do not know how far the wood may extend this way."

"What do you expect to find, Ready?"

"That's a difficult question to answer. I can tell you what I hope to find, which is, a good space of clear ground between the beach and the wood, where we may pasture our sheep and goats; and perhaps we may find some other trees besides cocoa-nuts: at present, you know, we have seen only them and the castor oil beans, that Master Tommy took such a dose of. You see, Master William, there is no saying what new seeds may have been brought here by birds, or by the winds and waves."

373) To pull up, eigentlich beim Fahren gebräuchlich, die Zügel anziehen, um anzuhalten. 374) It will be before we are &c., es dauern wird, ehe wir sind &c.

„Well, then the sooner we get through the wood the better, Master William; so let us put our best foot foremost, as the saying is³⁷⁵).

They continued their way, and had not walked for more than a quarter of an hour, when William cried out, „I see the blue sky, Ready; we shall soon be out; and glad shall I be, for my arm aches with chopping.“

„I dare say it does³⁷⁶), sir. I am just as glad as you are, for I'm tired of marking the trees; however, we must continue to mark, or we shall not find our way back when we want it.“

In ten minutes more they were clear of the coconut grove, and found themselves among brushwood higher than their heads; so that they could not see how far they were from the shore.

„Well,“ said William, throwing down his hatchet, „I'm glad that's over; now let us sit down a little before we go any farther.“

„I'm of your opinion, sir,“ replied Ready, sitting down by the side of William; „I feel more tired to-day than I did when we first went through the wood, after we set off from the cove. I suppose it's the weather³⁷⁷). Come back, dogs; lie down.“

„The weather is very fine, Ready.“

„Yes, now, sir; but I meant to have said that the rainy season is very trying to the health, and I suppose I have not recovered from it yet. You have had a regular fever, and, of course, do not feel strong; but a man may have no fever, and yet his health suffer a great deal from it. I am an old man, Master William, and feel these things now.“

„I think that before we go on, Ready, we had better have our dinner; that will do us good.“

„Well, Master William, we will take an early din-

375) As the saying is, wie man gewöhnlich zu sagen pflegt.

376) I dare say it does, daß will ich wohl glauben. 377) It's the weather, das Wetter ist Schuld daran.

ner, and we shall get rid of one bottle of water, at all events; indeed, I think that, as we must go back by the same way we came, we may as well leave our knapsacks and every thing but our guns under these trees; I dare say we shall sleep here too, for I told Mr. Seagrave positively not to expect us back to-night. I did not like to say so before your mother, she is so anxious about you." They opened their knapsacks, and made their meal, the two dogs coming in for their full share³⁷⁸); after which they again started on their discoveries. For about ten minutes they continued to force their way through the thick and high bushes, till at last they broke out clear of them, and then looked around them for a short time without speaking. The sea was about half a mile distant, and the intervening land was clear, with fresh blades of grass just bursting out of the earth, composing a fine piece of pasture of at least fifty acres, here and there broken with small patches of trees and brushwood; there was no sandy beach, but the rocks rose from the sea about twenty to thirty feet high, and were in one or two places covered with something which looked as white as snow.

"Well, Ready," said William, "there will be no want of pasture for our flock, even if it increases to ten times its number."

"No, sir," replied Ready, "we are very fortunate, and have great reason to be thankful; this is exactly what we required; and now let us go on a little, and examine these patches of wood, and see what they are. I see a bright, green leaf out there, which, if my eyes do not fail me, I have seen many a time before." When they arrived at the clump of trees which Ready had pointed out, he said, "Yes, Master William, I was right. Look there, this is the banana, it is just bursting out now, and will soon be ten feet high, and bearing fruit which is excellent eating; besides which, the stem is capital fodder for the beasts. God is gracious."

378) For their full share, um ihre reichliche Portion zu holen.

„Here is a plant I never saw before; this little one,“ said William, pulling up a piece of it, and shewing it to Ready.

„But I have, Master William. It is what they call the bird's-eye pepper; they make Cayenne pepper out of it. Look, the pods are just formed; it will be useful to us in cooking, as we have no pepper left. Juno will be quite pleased. You see, Master William, we must have some birds on the island; at least, it is most probable, for all the seeds of these plants and trees must have been brought here by them. The banana and the pepper are the food of many birds. One seed has dropped and grown up, and then the seeds of the first have sowed themselves, and grown up every year, and that is the reason they are all in patches here and there. What a quantity of bananas are springing up in this spot; there will be a little forest of them in a few weeks.“

„What is that rough-looking sort of shrub out there³⁷⁹⁾, Ready?“

„I can't see so well as you, Master William, so let us walk up to it. Oh, I know it now; it is what they call the prickly pear in the West Indies. I am very glad to have found that, for it will be very useful to us.“

„Is it good eating, Ready?“

„Not particularly; and the little spikes run into your fingers, and are very difficult to get rid of; but it is not bad by way of a change³⁸⁰⁾. No, sir; the use it will be to us is to hedge in our garden, and protect it from the animals; it makes a capital fence, and grows very fast, and without trouble. Why, there's half an acre of them; they are just coming into blossom. Now let us go on to that patch of trees, and see what they are.“

„What is this plant, Ready?“

379) Out there, da weiter draußen. 380) By way of change, zur Abwechslung.

„I don't know, Master William; I can't say that I ever saw it before.“

„Then I think I had better make a collection of all those you don't know, and take them back to my father, for he is a very good botanist, and I dare say will know them all.“

„We will do so, sir; it is a very good thought of yours.“

William pulled a branch of the plant off, and carried it with him. On their arrival at the next patch of trees, Ready looked at them steadfastly for some time.

„Let me see,“ said he; „I think I know that tree, I have often seen it in hot countries. Yes, I have it, Master William; it's the guava.“

„What! is it the fruit they make guava jelly of?“ said William.

How Tommy will smack his lips when he hears of it. Captain Osborne gave us guava jelly on our passage out, and Tommy was never satisfied, he always wanted more.“

„Little boys of Master Tommy's age do think more of eating than any thing else; that's very natural, so we must not be too hard upon Master Tommy; he'll turn out a fine fellow yet, depend upon it, Master William.“

„I'm sure I hope so, Ready, and I really think that he will. Shall we go on now?“

„Yes, sir; which way would you like to go?“

„Let us walk in the direction of those five or six trees, and from there down to the rocks; I want to find out how it is³⁸¹⁾ that they are so white.“

„Be it so, sir, if you wish,“ replied Ready.

„Why, Ready, what noise is that? Hark! such a chattering, it must be monkeys.“

„No, sir, they are not monkeys; but I'll tell you what they are, although I cannot see them; they are

381) How it is, wie es fommt.

parrots — I know their noise well. You see, Master William, it's not very likely that monkeys should get here, but birds can, and it is the birds that we have to thank for the bananas, and guavas, and other fruits we may find here."

As soon as they came under the trees, there was a great rioting and fluttering, and then flew away, screaming as loud as they could, a flock of about three hundred parrots, their beautiful green and blue feathers glistening in the beams of the sun.

"I told you so, sir; well, we'll have some capital pies out of them, Master William."

"Pies! do they make good pies³⁸²), Ready?"

"Yes, excellent; and very often have I had a good dinner from one in the West Indies, and in South America. Stop, sir, let us come a little this way; I see a leaf which I should like to examine."

"The ground is very swampy just here, Ready; is it not?"

"Yes; there's plenty of water below, I don't doubt. So much the better for the animals; we must dig some pools when they come here."

"Oh! I thought I was not wrong. Look, sir! this is the best thing I have found yet — we now need not care so much about potatoes."

"Why, what are they, Ready?"

"Yams, sir; yams, which they use instead of potatoes in the West-Indies. Indeed, potatoes do not remain potatoes long, when planted in the hot climates."

"How do you mean, Ready?"

"They turn into what they call sweet potatoes, after one or two crops: yams are better things, in my opinion."

At this moment the dogs dashed among the broad 382) They make good pies, man bereitet eine gute Art Pasteten aus ihnen.

yam leaves, and commenced baying; there was a great rustling and snorting.

„What's that?“ cried William, who had been stooping down to examine the yam plant, and who was startled at the noise.

Ready laughed heartily. „It isn't the first time that they've made you jump, Master William.“

„Why, it's our pigs; isn't it?“ replied William.

„To be sure; they're in the yam patch, very busy feeding on them, I'll be bound³⁸³).“

Ready gave a shout, and a grunting and rushing were heard among the broad leaves, and very soon, out rushed, instead of the six, about thirty pigs, large and small; who, snorting and twisting their tails, galloped away at a great rate across the pasture-land, until they gained the cocoa-nut grove.

„How wild they are, Ready,“ said William.

„Yes, sir, and they'll be wilder every day: but we must fence these yams from them, or we shall get none ourselves.“

„But they'll beat down the fence before it grows up.“

„Yes, sir; but we'll pale it in with cocoa-nut palings, and plant the prickly pears outside; before the palings are rotten, the prickly pears will make a hedge which no animal can get through. Now, sir, we'll go down to the seaside.“

As they neared the rocks, which were bare for about fifty yards from the water's edge, Ready said, „I can tell you now what those white patches on the rocks are, Master William: they are the places where the sea-birds come to every year to make their nests, and bring up their young. They always come to the same place every year, if they are not disturbed.“ They soon arrived at the spot, and found it white with the feathers of birds, mixed up with dirt.

I see no nests, Ready, nor the remains of any.“

383) I'll be bound, ich will wetten.

„No, sir, they do not make any nests, further than scratching a round hole, about half an inch deep, in the soil, and there they lay their eggs, sitting quite close to one another; they will soon be here, and begin to lay; and then we will come, and take the eggs, if we want any, for they are not bad eating.“

„Why, Ready, what a quantity of good things we have found out already. This has been a very fortunate expedition of ours³⁸⁴).“

„Yes, it has; and we may thank God for his goodness, who thus provides for us so plentifully in the wilderness; and recollect, that every year, if we are industrious, we shall add to our means³⁸⁵).“

„Do you know, Ready, I cannot help thinking, that we ought to have built our house here.“

„Not so, Master William; we have not the pure water, recollect, and we have not the advantages of the sandy beach, where we have our turtle and fish pond. No, Master William: we may feed our stock here; we may gather the fruit, taking our share of it with the poor birds; we may get our yams, and every other good provided for us; but our house and home must be where it is now.“

„You are right, Ready; but it will be a long walk.“

„Not when we are accustomed to it, and have made a beaten path, Master William; besides, we may bring the boat round, perhaps. I wish to go down to the rocks to see.“

They then walked along the sea-side for about a quarter of a mile, until they came to where the rocks were not so high, and there they discovered a little basin, completely formed in the rocks, with a narrow entrance.

384) Of ours, eine oft pleonastisch, zuweilen lächerliche Zuthat, z. B. That husband of yours is a strange being. 385) To add to a thing, eine Sache vermehren; to add a thing, eine Sache hinzufügen.

„See, Master William, what a nice little harbour for our boat; we may here load it with yams, and take it round to the bay, provided we can find an entrance through the reefs on the southern side of it, which we have not looked for yet, because we have not required it.“

„Yes, Ready — it is, indeed, a nice, smooth little place for the boat; but how shall we find it out again, when we come on this side of the island in the boat?“

„Very easily, Master William, for I'll fix up a flag-staff as a mark.“

„What is that thing on the bottom, there, Ready?“ said William, pointing in the direction.

„I see it, sir; that is a sea craw-fish, quite as good eating as a lobster. I wonder if I could make a lobster pot³⁸⁶); we should catch plenty, and very good they are.“

„And what are those little rough things on the rocks?“

„They are a very nice little sort of oyster, sir, very sweet; not like those we have in England, but very much better indeed, they are so delicate.“

„Why, Ready, we have two more good things for our table, again,“ replied William; „how rich we shall be.“

„Yes, sir; but we have to catch them, recollect: there is nothing to be had in this world without labour. The world is full of all that is useful to man; but the Almighty has declared that it is by the sweat of the brow that we are to gain our bread.“

„Ready,“ said William, „we have good three hour's daylight; suppose³⁸⁷) we go back and tell what we have seen; my mother will be so glad to see us.“

„I agree with you, Master William. We have

386) A lobster pot, eine aus Ruthen gebildete, mit Röder versehene Falle. 387) Suppose, etwa für let us suppose, wie wär's, wenn wir ic.

done well for one day; and may safely go back again and remain for another week, if that is all; that is, if we are wanted. There are no fruits at present, and all I care about are the yams: I should like to protect them from the pigs. But let us go home and talk the matter over with Mr. Seagrave."

William, as he walked away from the beach towards the cocoa-nut grove, picked a sprig of every plant he fell in with³⁸⁸), to take back to his father. They found out the spot where they had left their knapsacks and hatchets, and again took their path through the cocoa-nut trees, following the blaze which they had made in the morning. One hour before sunset they arrived at the house, where they found Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave sitting outside, and Juno standing on the beach with the two children, who were amusing themselves with picking up the shells which were strewn about. William gave a very clear account of all they had seen, and shewed his father the specimens of the plants which he had collected.

"This," said Mr. Seagrave, "is a well-known plant; and I wonder Ready did not recognize it: it is hemp."

"I never saw it, except in the shape of rope," replied Ready. "I know the seed well enough."

"Well, if we require it, I can tell you how to dress it," replied Mr. Seagrave. "Now, William, what the next?"

"This odd-looking, rough thing."

"That's the egg-plant: it bears a fruit of a blue colour. I am told they eat it in the hot countries."

"Yes, sir, they do; they fry it with pepper and salt: they call it bringal. I think it must be that."

"I do not doubt but³⁸⁹) you are right," replied Mr. Seagrave. "Why, William, you should know this."

388) To fall in with a thing, eine Sache zufällig finden.

389) Nach to doubt wird das deutsche daß gewöhnlich mit but übersetzt.

„It is like the grape-vine³⁹⁰).

„Yes, and it is so; it is the wild grape: we shall eat them by-and-by; perhaps make wine; who knows?

„I have only one more, papa: what is this?“

„You don't know it, because it has sprung up so high, William; but it is the common mustard plant, what we use in England, and sold as mustard and cress. Well, I think you have now made a famous day's work of it³⁹¹); and we have much to thank God for. Here comes Juno to get supper on the table; so we will go: the sun is just disappearing, and it will be dark in a few minutes.“

As soon as they had returned to the house, a consultation was held as to their future proceedings; and, after some debate, it was agreed that it would be advisable that they should take the boat out of the sand; and, as soon as it was ready, examine the reef on the southward, to see if they could find a passage through it, as it would take a long while to go round it; and, as soon as that was accomplished, Mr. Seagrave, Ready, William, and Juno, should all go through the wood, carrying with them a tent to pitch on the newly discovered piece of ground; and that they should set up a flag-staff at the little harbour, to point out its position. Of course, that would be a hard day's work; but that they would, nevertheless, return the same night; and not leave Mrs. Seagrave alone with the children. Having accomplished this, Ready and William would then put the wheels and axle in the boat, and other articles required, such as saw, hatchets, and spades, and row³⁹²) round to the south side of the island, to find the little harbour. As soon as they had landed them, and secured the boat, they would then return by the path through the wood.

390) Grape-vine, ein Weinstock, der Trauben trägt (wohl ein Pleonasmus). 391) Of it wird häufig in dieser Art gebraucht, z. B. we will have a merry day of it — I know the truth of it. (S. Feller's Grammatik in Beispielen p. 47). 392) To row (roh) rudern, to row (rauh) lärmen.

The next job would be to rail in the yam plantation to keep off the pigs, and, at the same time, to drive the sheep and goats through the wood, that they might feed on the new pasture ground; the old one was to be reserved for cutting and making into hay for fodder. Ready and William were then to cut down cocoa-nut trees sufficient for the paling, fix up the posts, and when that was done, Mr. Seagrave was to come to them and assist them in railing it in, and drawing the timber. This they expected would be all done in about a month; and during that time, as Mrs. Seagrave and Juno would be, for the greatest part of it, left at the house, they were to employ themselves in clearing the garden of weeds, and making preparation for fencing it in.

As soon as this important work had been completed, the boat would return to the bay with a load of prickly pears for the garden fence, and then they were to direct their attention to the stores which had been saved from the wreck, and were lying in the cove where they had first landed. When they had examined them, and brought round what were required, and secured them in the storehouse, they would then have a regular survey of the island by land and by water, and make a map of it, which Mr. Seagrave knew very well how to do. Such were the arrangements proposed for the season of fine weather which had now commenced. But man proposes and God disposes³⁹³), as will be shewn by the interruption to their intended projects which we shall have to narrate in the ensuing chapter.

393) Man proposes and God disposes, der Mensch denkt und Gott lenkt.

CHAPTER XLI.

As usual, Ready was the first up on the following morning, and having greeted Juno, who followed him out of the house, he set off on his accustomed rounds, to examine into the stock and their other point. First he thought that it would be necessary to get ready some sticks for the peas, which were now seven or eight inches out of the ground; he had proceeded a little farther, to where the calivances, or French harriçot beans, had been sown, and had decided upon the propriety of hoeing up the earth round them, as they were a very valuable article of food, that would keep, and afford many a good dish during the rainy or winter season. He had gone on to ascertain if the cucumber seeds had shewn themselves above ground, and was pleased to find that they were doing well³⁹⁴). He said to himself, „We have no vinegar, that I know of³⁹⁵), but we can preserve them in salt and water; as they do in Russia; it will be a change, at all events;“ and then he raised his eyes and looked out to the offing, and, as usual, scanned the horizon. He thought he saw a ship to the north-east, and he applied his telescope to his eye. He was not mistaken — it was a vessel.

The old man's heart beat quick; he dropped his telescope on his arm, and fetched some heavy breaths before he could recover from the effect of his unexpected sight. After a minute, he again put his telescope to his eye, and then made her out to be a brig, under top-sails and top-gallant sails, steering directly for the island.

Ready walked to the rocky point, from which they fished, and sat down to reflect. Could it be that the 394) They were doing well, ſie gediehen gut. know of, ſo viel ich weiß.

395) That I

vessel had been sent after them, or that she had by mere chance come among the island? He decided after a short time that it must be chance, for none could know that they were saved, much less that they were on the island. Her steering towards the island must then be either that she required water or something else; perhaps she would alter her course and pass by them. „At all events,“ thought the old man; „we are in the hands of God, who will, at his own time and in his own way, do with us as he thinks fit. I will not at present say any thing to Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave. It would be cruel to raise hopes which might end in disappointment. A few hours will decide. And yet I cannot do without help — I must trust Master William — he is a noble boy, that, and clever beyond his years; if he lives, he we will turn out a great, and, what is better, a good man.“

Ready rose up again, examined the vessel with his telescope, and then walked towards the house. William was up, and the remainder of the family were stirring³⁹⁵).

„William,“ said Ready to him, as they walked away from the house, „I have a secret to tell you, which you will at once see the necessity of not telling to any one at present. A few hours will decide the question.“ William readily gave his promise. „There is a vessel off³⁹⁶) the island; she may be the means of rescuing us, or she may pass without seeing us. It would be too cruel a disappointment to your father and mother, if the latter were the case.“

William stared at Ready, and for a moment could not speak, his excitement was so great.

„O Ready, how grateful I am! How I do thank God! I trust that we may be taken away, for you 395) The family (d. h. all the members of the family) were stirring, die Familie regte sich zum Aufstehen. 396) Off the island, auf der Höhe im Angesichte der Insel.

have no idea how my poor father suffers in silence — and so does my mother.“

„I know it, Master William, I know it, and it is natural; they do their best to control their yearnings, and they can do no more. But now, Master William, we must be quick, and at work before breakfast. But stop, I will shew you the vessel.“

Ready caught the vessel in the field of the telescope, which he leant against the trunk of a cocoa-nut, and William put his eye to the glass.

„Do you see her, sir?“

„O yes, Ready, and she is coming this way.“

„Yes, sir, she is steering right for the island; but do not talk so loud; I will put the telescope down here, and we will go about our work; there is an axe at the storehouse. Come, Master William; come quick, before your father leaves the house.“

William and Ready went to the storehouse for the axe. Ready selected a very slight cocoa-nut tree nearest to the beach, which he cut down, and as soon as the top was taken, with the assistance of William, he carried it down to the point.

„Now, Master William, go for a shovel and dig a hole here, that we may fix it up as a flag-staff. When all is ready, I will go for a small block and some rope for halyards to hoist up the flags as soon as the vessel is likely to see them. When the hole is deep enough, come up to breakfast as if nothing had happened. At breakfast-time, I shall propose that you and I get the boat out of the sand and examine her, and give Mr. Seagrave some work indoors.“

„But the flags, Ready; they are round my mother's bed. How shall we get them?“

„Suppose I say that it is time that the house should be well cleaned, and that the canvas hangings of the beds should be taken out to be aired this fine day. Ask your father to take direction of the work while we dig out the boat; that will employ them all inside the house.“

„Yes, that will do ³⁹⁷), Ready.“

During breakfast-time, Ready observed that he intended to get the boat out of the sand, and that William should assist him.

„And what am I to do, Ready? said Mr. Seagrave.

„Why, sir, I think, now that the rains are over, it would not be a bad thing if we were to air bedding, as they say at sea; it is a fine, warm day, and if all the bedding was taken out of the house and well shaken, and then left out to air, it would be a very good job over; for you see, sir, I have thought more than once that the house does smell a little close ³⁹⁸).“

„It will be a very good thing, Ready,“ observed Mrs. Seagrave; „and, at the same time, Juno and I will give the house a thorough cleaning and sweeping.“

„Had we not better have the canvas screens down, and air them too?“ said William.

„Yes, sir, replied Ready;“ we had better air every thing. We will assist in taking down the screens and flags, and spread them out to air, and then, if Mr. Seagrave has no objection, we will leave him to superintend and assist Madam Seagrave and Juno.“

„With all my heart,“ replied Mr. Seagrave. „We have done breakfast, and will begin as soon as you please.“

Ready and William took down the canvas screens and flags, and went out of the cottage with them; they spread out the canvas at some distance from the house, and then William went down to the beach with the flags, while Ready procured the block and small rope to hoist them up with.

397) That will do, ein sehr gewöhnlicher Ausspruch, so wird's gehen. 398) A room smells close, stockig, wenn lange nicht geöffnet

Ready's stratagem answered well. Without being perceived by those in the cottage, the flag-staff was raised, and fixed in the ground, and the flags all ready for hoisting; then Ready and William returned to the fuel-stack, and each carried down as much stuff as they could hold, that they might make a smoke to attract the notice of those on board of the vessel. All this did not occupy much more than an hour, during which the brig continued her course steadily towards the island. When Ready first saw her the wind was light, but latterly the breeze had increased very much, and at last the brig took in her top-gallant sails. The horizon behind the vessel, which had been quite clear, was now banked up with clouds, and the waves curled in white foam over the reefs of rocks extending from the island.

„The breeze is getting up strong, Master William,“ said Ready, and she will soon be down, if she is not frightened at the reefs, which she can see plainer now the water is rough, than she could before.“

„I trust she will not be afraid,“ replied William. „How far do you think she is off now?“

„About five miles, Master William; not more. The wind has hauled round more to the southward, and it is banking up fast, I see. I fear that we shall have another smart gale; however, it won't last long. Come, Master William, let us hoist the flags; we must not lose a chance; the flags will blow nice and clear for them to see them.“

William and Ready hoisted up the ensign first, and below it the flag, with the ship's name, „Pacific,“ in large letters upon it. „Now then,“ said Ready, as he made fast the halyards, „let us strike a light and make a smoke; that will attract their notice.“

As soon as the cocoa-nut leaves were lighted, Ready and William threw water upon them, so as to damp them and procure a heavy column of smoke. The vessel approached rapidly, and they were watching her in silent suspense, when they perceived Mr. and Mrs.

Seagrave, Juno carrying Albert, with Tommy and Caroline running down as fast as they could to the beach. The fact was, that Tommy, tired of work, had gone out of the house and walked towards the beach; there he perceived, first, the flags hoisted, and then he detected the vessel off the island. He immediately ran back to the house, crying out, „Papa! Mamma! Capt. Osborne come back-come back in big ship.“ At this announcement, Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave ran out of the house, perceived the vessel and the flags flying and, as we have stated, ran as fast as they could down to where William and Ready were standing by the flag-staff.

„Oh! Ready, why did you not tell us this before?“ exclaimed Mr. Seagrave, out of breath.

„I wish you had not known it now, sir,“ replied Ready; „but, however, it can't be helped; it was done out of kindness, Mr. Seagrave.“

„Yes, indeed it was, papa.“

Mrs. Seagrave dropped down on the rock, and burst into tears. Mr. Seagrave was equally excited.

„Does she see us, Ready?“ exclaimed he at last.

„No, sir, not yet, and I waited till she did, before I made it known to you,“ replied Ready.

„She is altering her course, Ready,“ said William.

„Yes, sir, she has hauled to the wind; she is afraid of coming too near to the reefs.“

„Surely she is not leaving us,“ exclaimed Mrs. Seagrave.

„No, madam; but she does not see us yet.“

„She does! she does!“ cried William, throwing up his hat; „see, she hoists her ensign.“

„Very true, sir; she does see us. Thanks be to God.“

„Mr. Seagrave embraced his wife, who threw herself sobbing into his arms, kissed his children with rapture, and wrung old Ready's hand. He was almost frantic with joy. William was equally delighted. Juno grinned and laughed, while the tears ran down her cheeks, and Tommy took little Caroline by her two hands and they danced round and round together.

As soon as they were a little more composed, Ready observed: „Mr. Seagrave, that they have seen us is certain, and what we must now do is to get our own boat out of the sand. We know the passage through the reefs, and they do not. I doubt if they will, however, venture to send a boat on shore, until the wind moderates a little. You see, sir, it is blowing up very strong just now.“

„But you don't think it will blow harder, Ready?“

„I am sorry to say, sir, that I do. It looks very threatening to the southward, and until the gale is over, they will not venture near an isle and so surrounded with rocks. It would be very imprudent if they did. However, sir, a few hours will decide.“

„But, surely,“ said Mrs. Seagrave, „even if it does blow, they will not leave the island without taking us off. They will come after the gale is over.“

„Yes, madam, if they can, I do think they will; but God knows, some men have hard hearts, and feel little for the misery of others.“

The brig had, in the meantime, kept away again, as if she was running in³⁹⁹); but very soon afterwards she hauled to the wind, with her head to the northward, and stood away from the island.

„She is leaving us,“ exclaimed William, mournfully.

„Hard-hearted wretches!“ said Mr. Seagrave, with indignation.

„You are wrong to say that, sir,“ replied Ready: „excuse me, Mr. Seagrave, for being so bold; but the fact is, that if I was in command of that vessel, I should do just as they have done. The gale rises fast, and it would be very dangerous for them to remain where they now are. It does not at all prove that they intend to leave us; they but consult their own safety, and, when the gale is over, we shall, I trust, see them again."

399) To run in, auf das Land los segeln.

No reply was made to Ready's judicious remarks. The Seagraves only saw that the vessel was leaving them, and their hearts sank. They watched her in silence, and as she gradually diminished to the view, so did their hopes depart from them. The wind was now fierce, and a heavy squall, with rain, obscured the offing, and the vessel was no longer to be distinguished. Mr. Seagrave turned to his wife, and mournfully offered her his arm. They walked away from the beach without speaking; the remainder of the party, with the exception of old Ready, followed them. How different was their return to the house from the joyous descent to the beach. Ready remained some time with his eyes in the direction where the vessel was last seen. He was melancholy, for he had a foreboding that it would be seen no more. At last he hauled down the ensign and flag, and, throwing them over his shoulder, followed the disconsolate party to the house.

CHAPTER XLII.

When Ready arrived, he found them all plunged in such deep distress, that he did not consider it advisable to say any thing. The evening closed in; it was time to retire. The children had already been put to bed; but Mr. Seagrave remained without speaking, holding his wife by her hand. Mrs. Seagrave's head was rested upon her husband's shoulder, and an occasional low sob was to be heard. The countenance of Mr. Seagrave was not only gloomy, but morose. The hour for retiring to rest had long passed when Ready broke the silence by saying, „Surely, you do not intend to sit up all night, Mr. Seagrave?“

„O! no; there's no use sitting up, now,“ replied Mr. Seagrave, rising up impatiently. „Come, my dear, let's go to bed.“

Mrs. Seagrave rose, and retired behind the canvas screen. Her husband seemed as if he was about to follow her, when Ready, without speaking, laid the Bible on the table before him. Mr. Seagrave did not appear to notice it; but William touched his father's arm, pointed to the book, and then went inside of the screen, and led out his mother.

„God forgive me!“ exclaimed Mr. Seagrave. „In my selfishness and discontent I had forgotten“ —

„Yes, sir, you had forgotten those words, Come unto me, all ye who are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Those words are true, sir; I have felt them to be so.“

„I am ashamed of myself,“ said Mrs. Seagrave, bursting into tears.

Mr. Seagrave opened the Bible, and read the psalm. As, soon as he had closed the book, „good night“ were all the words that passed, and they all retired to rest.

During the night, the wind howled and the rain beat down. The children slept soundly, but Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave, Ready, and William, were awake during the whole of the night, listening to the storm and occupied with their own thoughts. It was the most unhappy night that had been passed since they first landed.

Ready was dressed before daylight, and out on the beach before the sun had risen. The gale was at its height; and, after a careful survey with his telescope, he could see nothing of the vessel. He remained on the beach till breakfast time, when he was summoned by William, and returned to the house. He found Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave up, and more composed than they were the evening before; and they welcomed him warmly.

„I fear, Ready,“ said Mr. Seagrave, „that you have no good news for us.“

„No, sir; nor can you expect any good news until after the gale is over.“

„Tell me, Ready,“ said Mrs. Seagrave, „do you really think that the vessel will come back for us?“

„I will tell you what our chances are, madam, and I can do no more. The vessel could not remain here during the gale — that is certain; and there is no saying what the effects of the gale may be. She may lie to⁴⁰⁰), and not be far from us when the gale is over; or she may be obliged to scud before the gale⁴⁰¹), and run some hundred miles from us. Then, madam, comes the next chance. I think, by her running for the island, that she was short of water; the question is, then, whether she may not find it necessary to run for the port she is bound to, or water at some other place. You know, madam, that a captain of a vessel is bound to do his best for the owners. At the same time I do think, that if she can with propriety come back for us, she will. The question is, first, whether she can; and, secondly, whether the captain is a humane⁴⁰²) man, and will do so at his own inconvenience.“

„There is but poor comfort in all that, Ready,“ replied Mr. Seagrave.

„It is useless holding out false hopes, sir,“ replied Ready; „but even if the vessel continues her voyage, I consider we have much to be thankful for.“

„In what, Ready?“

„Why, sir, no one knew whether we were in existence or not, and probably we never should have been searched for; but now we have made it known, and by the ship's name on the flag they know who we are, and, if they arrive safe in port, will not fail to communicate the intelligence to your friends. Is not that a great deal to be thankful for? We may not be taken off by this vessel, but we have every hope that another will be sent out for us."

400) To lie to, (in einem Sturme) vor Anker liegen. 401) To scud before the gale, vom Winde gejagt werden. 402) Man darf human mit humane, menschlich und menschenfreundlich, nicht verwechseln.

"Very true, Ready; I ought to have seen that before; but my despair and disappointment were yesterday so great, that it almost took away my reason. We must trust in God."

"I'm glad to hear you say that, sir," replied Ready; "I thought you would soon return to your usual frame of mind⁴⁰³). I felt for you, I assure you; and indeed I feel for you now. I know how dreadful this state of suspense must be."

"Let us say no more about it, Ready; we are but imperfect creatures; and God is merciful when we repent of our folly and our wickedness."

The gale continued during the day, and shewed no symptoms of abatement, when they again retired for the night. The following day Ready was up early, as usual, and William accompanied him to the beach.

"I don't think that it blows so hard as it did, Ready."

"No, Master William, it does not; the gale is breaking, and by night, I have no doubt, will be over. It is, however, useless looking for the vessel, as she must be a long way from this. It would take her a week, perhaps, to come back to us if she was to try to do so, unless the wind should change to the northward or westward."

"Ready! Ready!" exclaimed William, pointing to the south-east port of the reef; "what is that? Look! it's a boat."

403) One's usual frame of mind, seine gewöhnliche Gemüthsstimmung.

Ready put his telescope to his eye. „It's a canoe, Master William, and there are people in it.“

„Why, where can they have come from, Ready? See! they are among the breakers; they will be lost. Let us go towards them, Ready.“

They hastened along the beach to the spot nearest to where the canoe was tossing on the surf, and watched it as it approached the shore.

„Master William, this canoe must have been blown off from the large island, which lies out there,“ and Ready again looked through his telescope: „there are two people⁴⁰⁴⁾ in it, and they are islanders. Poor things! they struggle hard for their lives, and seem much exhausted; but they have passed through the most dangerous part of the reef.“

„Yes,“ replied William, „they will soon be in smoother water; but the surf on the beach is very heavy.“

„They won't mind that, if their strength don't fail them — they manage the canoe beautifully.“

During this conversation the canoe had rapidly come towards the land. In a moment or two afterwards, it passed through the surf and grounded on the beach. The two people in it had just strength enough left to paddle through the surf, and then they dropped down in the bottom of the canoe, quite exhausted.

„Let's drag the canoe higher up, Master William. Poor creatures! they are nearly dead.“

While dragging it up, Ready observed that the occupants were both women: their faces were tattooed all over, which disfigured them very much; otherwise they were young, and might have been good-looking.“

„Shall I run up and get something for them, Ready?“

„Do, Master William; ask Juno to give you some of whatever there is for breakfast; anything warm.“

404) People, gezählt, für individuals, ungewöhnlich.

William soon returned with some thin oat-meal porridge, which Juno had been preparing for breakfast; and a few spoonfuls being forced down the throats of the two natives, they gradually revived. William then left Ready, and went up to acquaint his father and mother with this unexpected event.

William soon returned with Mr. Seagrave, and as the women were now able to sit up, they hauled up the canoe as far as they could, to prevent her being beat to pieces. They found nothing in the canoe, except a piece of matting and the two paddles which had been used by the natives. The latter were very curiously carved, as well as the bow of the canoe.

„You see, sir, said Ready,“ it is very clear that these two poor women, having been left in charge of the canoe, have been blown off from the shore of one of the islands to the south-east; they must have been contending with the gale ever since the day before yesterday, and, as it appears, without food or water. It's a mercy⁴⁰⁵⁾ that they gained this island.“

„It is so,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „but, to tell the truth, I am not overpleased at their arrival. It proves what we were not sure of before, that we have near neighbours who may probably pay us a very unwelcome visit.“

„That may be, sir,“ replied Ready; „still these two poor creatures being thrown on shore here does not make the matter worse, or the danger greater. Perhaps it may turn to our advantage; for if these women learn to speak English before any other islanders visit us, they will interpret for us, and be the means⁴⁰⁶⁾, perhaps, of saving our lives.“

„Would their visit be so dangerous, then, Ready?“

„Why, sir, a savage is a savage, and, like a child, wishes to obtain whatever he sees; especially he covets what he may turn to use, such as iron, &c.

405) It's a mercy, es ist Gottes Fügung. 406) By the means of saving, dergestalt, daß sie retten.

If they came, and we concealed a portion, and gave up the remainder of our goods, we might escape; but still there is no trusting to them, and I would infinitely prefer defending ourselves against numbers to trusting to their mercy.

„But how can we defend ourselves against a multitude?“

„We must be prepared, sir! if we can fortify ourselves, with our muskets we would be more than a match for hundreds⁴⁰⁷).“

Mr. Seagrave turned away. After a pause he said, „It is not very pleasant to be now talking of defending ourselves against savages, when we hoped two days ago to be leaving the island. Oh, that that brig would make its appearance again!“

„The wind is going down fast, sir,“ observed Ready; it will be fine weather before the evening. We may look out for her; at all events, for the next week I shall not give up all hopes.“

„A whole week, Ready. Alas! how true it is, that hope deferred maketh the heart sick.“

„It is a severe trial, Mr. Seagrave; but we must submit when we are chastened. We had better get those poor creatures up to the house, and let them recover themselves.“

„Yes, Ready; I presume they will understand signs.“

Ready then beckoned to them to get on their feet, which they both did, although with some difficulty. He then went in advance, making a sign for them to follow; they understood him, and made the attempt, but were so weak, that they would have fallen if they had not been supported by Mr. Seagrave and William.

It required a long time for them to arrive at the house. Mrs. Seagrave, who knew what had happened, received them very kindly, and Juno had a mess ready, 407) A match for hundreds, gewachsen einem Feinde von Hunderten.

which she put before them. They ate a little and then lay down⁴⁰⁸), and were soon sound asleep.

„It is fortunate for us that they are women,“ observed Mr. Seagrave: „we should have had great difficulty had they been men.“

„Yes, sir,“ replied Ready; „but still we must not trust women too much at first, for they are savages. If it is the will of God that we still remain on this island, they may be very useful to us in many ways — indeed, I may say, be very valuable to us, as we have plenty of employment for them.“

„Where shall we put them to-night, Ready-“

„Why, sir, I have been thinking about that. I wish we had a shed close to us; but as we have not, we must let them sleep in the storehouse.“

„Yes, that will do very well.“

We must now pass over a space of fifteen days, in which there was nothing done. The expectation of the vessel returning was still alive, although each day decreased these hopes. Every morning Ready and William were at the beach with the telescope, and the whole of the day was passed in surmises, hopes, and fears. In fact, the appearance of the vessel and the expectation of leaving the island had completely overturned all the regularity and content of our island party. No other subject was broached — not any of work proposed was begun, as it was useless to do any thing if they were to leave the island. After the first week had passed, they felt that every day their chances were more adverse, and at the end of the fortnight all hopes were very unwillingly abandoned. They had had time to school themselves into resignation⁴⁰⁹), and now once more turned their thoughts to their own immediate pursuits.

The Indian women had, in the meantime, reco-408) To lie down, sich zur Ruhe begeben, sich schlafen legen.

409) To school one's self into resignation, sich in seine Lage fügen.

vered their fatigues ⁴¹⁰), and appeared to be very mild and tractable. Whatever they were able to do, they did cheerfully, and had already gained a few words of English. The party to explore was again talked over, and arranged for the following Monday, when a new misfortune fell on them, which disconcerted all their arrangements.

On the Saturday morning, when Ready, as usual, went his rounds, as he walked along the beach, he perceived that the Indian canoe was missing. It had been hauled up clear of the water, so that it could not have floated away. Ready's heart misgave him ⁴¹¹); he looked through his telescope in the direction of the large island, and thought he could distinguish a speck on the water at a great distance. As he was thus occupied, William came down to him.

„Master William,“ said Ready, „I fear those island women have escaped in their canoe. Run up, and see if they are in the outhouse, or anywhere else, and let me know as soon you can.“

William in a few minutes returned, breathless, stating that the women were not to be found, and that they had evidently carried away with them a quantity of the large nails and other pieces of iron, which were in the small kegs in the storehouse.“

„This is bad, Master William — very bad indeed; this is worse than the vessel not coming back.“

„Why, we can do without them, Ready.“

„Yes, sir; but when they get back to their own people, and shew them the iron they have brought with them, and describe how much more there is to be had, depend upon it, we shall have a visit from them in numbers, that they may obtain more. I ought to have known better than to have left the canoe here; it should have been burnt. We must go and consult with

410) Recover one's fatigues, flatt from one's fatigues. So auch 3. B. he was banished the country. 411) My heart mis-gives me, mir ahnet nichts Gutes.

Mr. Seagrave, for the sooner we begin to work now, the better. Come, Master William; but recollect, we must make light of this to your mamma."

They communicated the intelligence to Mr. Seagrave when they were outside. He at once perceived their danger; but considered it better to acquaint Mrs. Seagrave with it, and to conceal nothing.

This was done accordingly; and then they held a council⁴¹²), and came to the following resolutions: —

That it would be necessary that they should immediately stockade the storehouse, so as to render it impossible for any one to get in; and that, as soon as the fortification was complete, the storehouse should be turned into their dwelling-house; and such stores as could not be put within the stockade should be removed to their present house, or concealed in the cocoa-nut grove. That after they had thus arranged for their security against any sudden attack, they would follow up their former plans.

It was decided that nothing should be begun on that day, Saturday; that Sunday should be spent in devout prayer for help and encouragement from the Almighty, who would do towards them as his wisdom should ordain; and that, on Monday, with the blessing of God, they would recommence their labour.

„I don't know why, but I feel more courage now that there is a prospect of danger, than I felt when there was little or none," said Mrs. Seagrave.

„I do not doubt it madam; and should it be called into request, that you will prove it; which I hope may not be the case."

„How little do we know what the day may bring forth," exclaimed Mr. Seagrave. „How joyful were our anticipations when the vessel hoisted her colours; we felt sure that we were to be taken off the island. The same gale that drove the vessel away brought down to us the island women. The fair weather after the gale, which we hoped would have brought back the vessel to our succour, on the contrary, enabled the women to escape in the canoe, and make known our existence to those who may come to destroy us. How true it is that man plans in vain: how true that he is as naught⁴¹³); and that it is only by the Almighty will and pleasure that he can obtain his ends. All that we can say is, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

412) A council, eine Berathung, eine Rathversammlung, a counsel, ein Rath.

CHAPTER XLIII.

The family were in so sad a state of suspense, that for three weeks after the vessel had been driven away, notwithstanding their consultations and resolutions, they still remained quite inactive: at times⁴¹⁴), indulging the hope that the vessel might return; at others, looking anxiously in the direction of the larger island, to ascertain if there was not a fleet of canoes coming down for their destruction.

One morning, at sunrise, as they were looking round with the telescope, close to the turtle-pond, Robinson Ready said to Mr. Seagrave, „Indeed, Sir, we must no longer remain in this state of idleness; I have been thinking a great deal of our present position and prospects; as to⁴¹⁵) the vessel coming back, we must, at present, give up all hopes of it. I only wish that we were quite as sure that we shall not have a visit from the savages: that is my great fear, and it really haunts⁴¹⁶) me; the idea of our being surprised some night, and Mrs. Seagrave and the dear children, per-413) To be as naught (gewöhnlicher nought), so gut als Nichts sein. 414) At times, zuweilen. 415) As to, was betrifft. 416) An idea haunts me, ein Gedanke kommt mir nicht aus dem Sinne.

haps, upon."

up his time it will gi expect

if we steps expect shock,

put our

„I agree deed, I have days past."

„We have all been thinking of it, I believe," said Mr. Seagrave; „I'm sure I have lain awake night after night, considering our position and what we ought to do, but I have never been able to come to any satisfactory resolution."

„No more have I till last night, Mr. Seagrave, but I think that I have now something to propose which, perhaps, will meet with your approval," replied Ready; „so now, Sir, suppose we hold another council, and come to a decision."

„I am most willing, Ready," said Mr. Seagrave, sitting down upon a rock; „and as you are the oldest, and moreover the best adviser of the three, we will first hear what you have to propose."

„Well, then, Mr. Seagrave, it appears to me that it will not do⁴¹⁷) to remain in the house, for we may, as I have said, be surprised by the savages at any hour in the night, and we have no means of defence against numbers."

417) Miracles sind nämlich übernatürliche Wunder, zum Unterschied von wonders, marvels. 418) To put one's own shoulders to the wheel, selbst Hand an's Werk legen. 419) It will not do, es wird nicht angehen.

murdered in their beds, is awful to reflect face.

God

is give that remain

as we now

are, inactive,

and taking no steps

to meet the divine assistance.

We have had a heavy shock,

but it is now

time

that we recover from

it,

and put our own shoulders

to the wheel

and we have no means of defence

„I feel that, and have felt it for some time,“ replied Mr. Seagrave. „What shall we do, then; shall we return to the cove?“

„I should think not, Sir,“ said Ready; „what I propose is this: we have made a discovery on the south of the island, which is of great importance to us; not that I consider the fruit and other plants of any great value, as they will only serve to increase our luxuries, if I may so call them, during the summer season. One great advantage to us, is the feed which we have found for our live stock, and the fodder for them during the rainy season; but principally, the patch of yams, which will afford us food during the winter. They are of great importance to us, and we cannot too soon protect them from the pigs, which will certainly root them all up⁴²⁰), if we do not prevent them. Now, Sir, you know what we had arranged to do, but which we have not done; I think the coconut rails will take too much time, and it will be sufficient to make a ditch and hedge round the yams, Sir; but it will be very tedious if we are to go backwards and forwards to do the work, and Mrs. Seagrave and the children will be left alone. I therefore propose that, as the weather is now set in fair⁴²¹), and will remain so for months, that we pitch our tents on that part of the island, and remove the whole family there; we shall soon be very comfortable, and at all events much safer there than if we remain here, without any defence.“

„It is an excellent plan, Ready; we shall, as you say, be removed from danger for the time⁴²²), and when there, we may consider what we had best do, by-and-by.“

„Yes, Sir. Those women may not have gained the other island, it is true, for they had the wind right

420) To root up, mit der Wurzel ausreißen. 421) The weather is set in fair, das Wetter ist schön geworden. 422) For the time, für diesmal.

against them for several days after they went away in the canoe, and, moreover, the current sets strong this way; but if they have, we must expect that the savages will pay us a visit; they will, of course, come directly to the house, if they do come."

"But, Ready, you don't mean to say that we are to leave this side of the island altogether, and all our comfortable arrangements?" said William.

"No, Master William, not altogether; for now I come to the second part of my proposition. As soon as we have done our work at the yam plantation, and made every thing as comfortable there as we can, I think we may then leave Mrs. Seagrave and the children in the tents, and work here. As we before agreed, let us abandon the house in which we live at present, and fit out the out-house which is concealed in the cocoa-nut grove, as a dwelling-house, and fortify it so as to be secure against any sudden attack of the savages; for, return here we must, to live, as we cannot remain in the tents after the rainy season sets in."

"How do you propose to fortify it, Ready?" said Mr. Seagrave; "I hardly know. What is a stockade?"

"That I will explain to you by-and-by, Sir. Then if the savages come here, at all events we should be able to defend ourselves with firearms; one man behind a stockade is better than twenty who have no other arms but spears and clubs; and we may, with the help of God, beat them off."

"I think your plan is excellent, Ready," said Mr. Seagrave, "and that the sooner we begin, the better."

That there is no doubt of, Sir. Now, the first job is for William and me to try for the passage through this side of the reef with the boat, and then we will look for the little harbour, which we discovered; as soon as that is done, we will return, and take the tents and all we require round in the boat, and when we have pitched the tents and all is arranged, Mrs. Seagrave and the children can walk through the wood with us, and take possession. Now, Mr. Seagrave, if we are all agreed, the sooner we begin, the better, for we have plenty to do, and we must recollect that we shall have to go up to the cove before we can commence the stockade, to procure nails, and many other things; indeed, we may as well have a regular survey of our stores there when we are about it."

"Let us not lose a day, not an hour, Ready; we have lost too much time already," replied Mr. Seagrave; "and may the blessing of Heaven attend our endeavours. What shall we do to-day?"

"At breakfast, Sir, we will communicate our intentions to Mrs. Seagrave; after breakfast, William and I will take the boat, and try for the passage. You can remain here, packing up the tents, and such articles as must first be carried round. We shall be back, I hope, by dinnertime."

They then rose, and walked towards the house; all felt relieved in their minds, after they had made these arrangements, satisfied that they would be using all human endeavours to ward off the danger which threatened them, and might then put their confidence in that Providence who would, if He thought fit, protect them in their need.

CHAPTER XLIV.

The subject was introduced to Mrs. Seagrave while they were at breakfast, and as she perceived how much more secure they would be, she cheerfully consented. In less than an hour afterwards, William and Ready had prepared the boat, and were pulling out among the rocks of the reef to find a passage, which, after a short time, and by keeping two or three cables from the point, they succeeded in doing.

„This is very fortunate, Master William,“ observed Ready; „but we must now take some marks to find our way in again. See, Sir, the large black rock is on a line with the garden point: so, if we keep them in one, we shall know that we are in the proper channel, and now for a mark abreast of us, to find out when we enter it.“

„Why, Ready, the corner of the turtle-pond just touches the right wall of the house,“ replied William.

„So it does, Sir; that will do, and now let us pull away as hard as we can, so as to be back in good time.“

They soon were on the south side of the island, and pulling up along the shore.

„How far do you think that it is by water, Ready?“

„I hardly know, Master William; but at least four or five miles, so we must make up our minds to a good hour's pull⁴²³). At all events, we shall sail back again with this wind, although there is but little of it.“

„We are in very deep water now,“ observed William, after a long silence.

„Yes, Sir; on this side of the island we must expect it; the coral grows to leeward only. I think that we cannot be very far from the little harbour we discovered. You see, Sir, we have opened upon the meadow land and the clumps of trees. Suppose we leave off rowing for a minute, and look about us.“

„There are two rocks close to the shore, Ready,“ said William pointing, „and you recollect there were two or three rocks outside of the harbour.“

„Very true, Master William, and I should not wonder if you have not hit upon the very spot. Let us pull in.“

They did so; and, to their satisfaction, found that

423) We must — pull, wir müssen uns auf eine derbe Stunde rudern gefaßt machen.

they were in the harbour, where the water was as smooth as a pond.

„Now, then, Master William, we will step the mast⁴²⁴), and sail back at our leisure.“

„Stop one moment, Ready; give me the boat-hook. I see something between the clefts of the rocks.“

Ready handed the boat-hook to William, who lowering it down into the water, drove the spike of iron at the end of it into a large crayfish, which he hauled up into the boat.

„That will be an addition to our dinner, Master William,“ said Ready; „we do not go back empty-handed, and, therefore, as the saying is, we shall be more welcome, now, then, let us start, for we must pull here again this afternoon, and with a full cargo on board.“

„They stepped the mast, and as soon as they had pulled the boat clear of the harbour, they set the sail, and in less than an hour had rejoined the party at the house.

William had brought up the crayfish, which had only one claw, and Juno had put on another pot of water to boil it, as an addition to the dinner, which was nearly ready. Tommy at first went with his sister Caroline to look at the animal, and as soon as he had left off admiring it, he began, as usual, to tease it, as he did the lion at the Cape: first he poked its eyes with a stick, then he tried to unfold its tail, but the animal flapped, and he ran away. At last he was trying to put his stick into the creature's mouth, when it raised its large claw, and caught him by the wrist, squeezing him so tight that Tommy screamed and danced about as the crayfish held on. Fortunately for him, the animal had been so long out of water, and had been so much hurt by the iron spike of the boat-hook, that it was more than half dead, or he would have been severely hurt. Ready ran to him, and disengaged the crayfish; but Tommy was so frightened, that he took to his heels⁴²⁵), and did not leave off running until he was one hundred yards from the house, while Juno and Ready were laughing at him till the tears came into their eyes. Tommy was very sulky at being laughed at, so he sat down when he had left off running, till he saw the dinner going in, and then he came back, looking very foolish. When he saw the crayfish on the table, he appeared to be afraid of it, although it was dead.

424) To step the mast, den Mast einsetzen.

„Well, Tommy,“ said Mr. Seagrave, „I suppose you won't eat any of the crayfish?“

„Won't I?“ replied Tommy. „I'll eat him, for he tried to eat me.“

„What part will you have, Tommy — the claw?“ said Mr. Seagrave.

„Yes, I'll eat the claw, nasty beast; I'll eat him out of spite.“

„Why did you not leave the animal alone, Tommy?“ said Mr. Seagrave; „if you had not tormented it, it would not have bitten you; I don't know whether you ought to have any, if you only eat it out of spite; you should eat with joy and gratitude. What do you say in your grace before meat, Tommy? tell me, Sir.“

„For what we are going to receive, the Lord make us truly thankful,“ said Tommy, gloomily.

„Well, but by your account you are only truly spiteful, and therefore I do not think you ought to have any.“

„I don't like it; I won't have any,“ replied Tommy. „I like salt pork better.“

„Well, then, if you don't like it, you shall not have it forced upon you, Tommy,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „so now we'll divide it among the rest of us.“

Tommy was not very well pleased at this decision, for he really did wish to have some of it, so he turned 425) To take to one's heels, Reißaus nehmen.

very sulky for the rest of the dinnertime, especially when old Ready told him that he had had his share of the crayfish before dinner.

CHAPTER XLV.

As soon as the meal was over, Mr. Seagrave and Juno assisted them in carrying down the canvas and poles for the tent, with shovels to clear away, and the pegs to fix the tents up properly. Before they started, William observed, „I think it would be a good thing, if Ready and I were to take our bedding with us, and then we could fix up one tent this evening, and sleep there; to-morrow morning we might set up the other, and get a good deal of work over before we came back.“

„You are right, Master William,“ replied Ready; let us see what Juno can give us to eat, and then we will do as you say, for the sooner we are all there the better.“

As Mr. Seagrave was of the same opinion, Juno packed up a piece of salt pork and some flour cakes, which, with three or four bottles of water, they took down to the boat; the axes, saw, and mallet, were also put in. Ready having thrown in a piece of rope to moor the boat with, they shoved off and were soon through the reef, and, after a smart pull, for they were anxious to get round as soon as possible, they arrived again at the small harbour.

As soon as they had landed all the things, they made the boat fast by the rope, and then carried a portion of the canvas and tent poles up to the first copse of trees, which were the guavas; they then returned for the remainder, and after three trips every thing was up.

„Now, Master William, we must see where we must pitch the tent; we must not be too near the co-coa-nut grove, or we shall have too far to go for water.“

„Don't you think that the best place will be close to the bananas? the ground is higher there, and the water is, you know, between the bananas and the yams.“

„Very true, Master William, I think it will not be a bad place; let us walk there first, and reconnoitre²²⁶⁾ the ground.“

They walked to where the bananas were now throwing out their beautiful large green leaves, and decided that they would fix the tents upon the north side of them; first, because the trees would prevent the tents from being seen from the seaward, and secondly, because the clumps would shade them from the sun during the hottest portion of the day.

„So here let it be, Master William,“ said Ready; „and now let us go and fetch all the things; it is a nice dry spot, and I think will do capitally.“

They were soon hard at work, and long before sunset one tent was ready, and they had put their bedding in it.

„Well, now, I suppose you are a little tired, Sir,“ said Ready; „I'm sure you ought to be, for you have worked hard to-day.“

„I don't feel very tired, Ready, but it's not time to go to bed yet.“

„No, Sir; then I think we had better take our shovels and dig the pits for the water, and then we shall know by to-morrow morning whether the water is good or not.“

„Yes, Ready, we can do that before we get our suppers, and go to bed.“

They walked to where the ground between the bananas and yam patch was wet and swampy, and dug 426) To reconnoitre, reconnoître, ein dem Französischen entlehnter Militair-Ausdruck.

two large holes about a yard deep and square; the water trickled in very fast, and they were up to their ankles before they had finished.

„There'll be no want of water, Ready, if it is only fit to drink.“

„I've no fear of that, Sir,“ replied Ready, „but still there's nothing like having all done before they come here; so now our work is finished for the day.“

They returned to the tent and made their supper off the salt pork and flour cakes, and then lay down on the mattresses. They were soon fast asleep, for they were well tired out with the hard work which they had gone through.

The next morning, at sunrise, they were up again; the first thing they did was to go and examine the holes they had dug for water; they found them full and running over, and the water had settled quite clear; they tasted it, and pronounced it very good, but not so good as what they had in the well near the house in the bay.

As soon as they had washed themselves, they went back and made their breakfast, and then set to work to get up the other tent, which being for Mrs. Seagrave and the children, was more carefully put up. They then cleared all the ground near the tents of brushwood and high grass, and levelled it nicely with their shovels inside⁴²⁷).

„Now, Master William, we have another job, which is to prepare a fire-place for Juno: we must go down to the beach for stones. Let us take this large bit of canvas, and then between us we may carry up as many as we require.“

In another hour, the fire-place was completed, and Ready and William looked at their work.

„Well, I call this a very comfortable lodging-house,“ said Ready.

427) With their shovels inside, mit umgekehrter Schaufel.

„And I am sure,“ replied William, „it's very pretty. Mamma will be delighted with it.“

„We shall have no want of bananas in a few weeks, Sir,“ said Ready; „look, they are all in blossom already. Well, now I suppose we had better leave every thing here, and go back again. We must have another trip this afternoon, and sleep here to-night.“

They went down to the boat, and sailed back as before; by ten o'clock in the morning they had regained the house, and then they made the arrangements for their work during the remainder of the day. It was agreed that the provisions necessary for a day or two, the table and chairs, the cooking utensils, and a portion of their clothes, should be taken round that afternoon, that Ready and William should come back early the next morning, and then they should all set off⁴²⁸) together through the wood to the new location, Little Albert could now walk very well, and would not require to be carried, except now and then. Tommy and Caroline of course⁴²⁹) would walk with Juno, the sheep and lambs (for they had four lambs), the goats and kids, were to be driven through the wood by Mr. Seagrave, William, and Ready, and the dogs would be very useful in driving them. As for the fowls and chickens, it was decided they should be left, as Ready and William could look after them on their occasional visits.

428) To set off oder out, to start, abreisen. 429) Of course, natürlich, es versteht sich.

CHAPTER XLVI.

The boat was well loaded that afternoon, and they had a heavy pull round⁴²⁹), and hard work afterwards, to carry all the articles up. William and Ready were, therefore, not sorry when their work was done, and they went to bed as soon as they had taken their supper.

At sunrise, they went back to the bay in the boat, which they hauled up, and then proceeded to the house, where they found that every one was ready to start. Mr. Seagrave had collected all the animals, and they set off; the marks on the trees were very plain, and they had no difficulty in finding their way; but they had a good deal of trouble with the goats and sheep, and did not get on very fast. It was three hours before they got clear of the cocoa-nut grove, and Mrs. Seagrave was quite tired out. At last they arrived, and Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave could not help exclaiming⁴³⁰) „how beautiful!“

When they came to where the tents were pitched by the side of the bananas, they were equally pleased: it was quite a fairy spot. Mrs. Seagrave went into her tent to repose after her fatigue; the goats and sheep were allowed to stray away as they pleased; and were feeding with avidity upon the fresh herbage; the dogs laid down, panting with their long journey; Juno put little Albert on the bed, while she went with William to collect fuel to cook the dinner; Ready went to the pits to get some water, while Mr. Seagrave walked about, examining the different clumps of trees, with which the meadow was studded; Caroline was in the tent with her mother, and Tommy sat on the ground, and stared about him.

429) They-round, sie hatten schwere Arbeit, um die Insel herum zu rudern. 430) Could not help exclaiming, konnte nicht umhin auszurufen.

When Ready returned with the buckets of water, he called the dogs, and went back towards the yam plantation. Tommy got up after a while, and followed; the dogs went into the yams, and were soon barking furiously, which pleased Tommy very much; when, of a sudden, out burst again in a drove⁴³¹) all the pigs, followed by the dogs, and so close to Tommy that he screamed with fright, and tumbled over head and heels.

„I thought you were there, my gentlemen,“ said Ready, „looking after the pigs: the sooner we fence you out the better.“

The pigs scampered away, and went into the cocoa-nut grove as they had done before. Tommy also scampered away as soon as he could recover his legs. The dogs followed the pigs, and did not return for a long while afterwards, and then came back hot and tired, proving that they must have chased them for a long distance.

It was late before the dinner was ready, and they were all very glad to go early to bed.

At day dawn, William and Ready had again started, and walked through the cocoa-nut grove back to the house, to bring round in the boat the articles of furniture and the clothes which had been left. Having collected every thing in the house, and procured some more pork and flour from the storehouse, they completed the load by spearing one of the turtles which remained, and putting it into the bottom of the boat; they then set off again for their new residence, and arrived in time for breakfast. After the meal was over, they were assisted by Juno and Mr. Seagrave in bringing the contents of the boats up to the tents.

„What a delightful spot this is,“ said Mrs. Seagrave. „I think we ought always to make it our summer residence, and on'y go back to the house during the rainy season."

431) Man sagt a drove of pigs, a herd of horn cattle, a flock of geese.

„It is much cooler, Madam, during the summer, and much more pleasant; but we are more protected in the house by the cocoa-nut grove."

„Yes; that is true, and is very valuable during the rainy season; but it makes it warmer in the summer time; we have not such a nice breeze as we have here. I assure you, Ready, that I like the change, and shall be sorry when we have to go back again."

„I saw such pretty parrots this morning," said little Caroline; „I wish I had one for my very own."

„I'll try, Miss, to find you a young one by-and-by; but it is too soon yet," replied Ready. „Now I must go, and help Juno to cut up the turtle. We must make our larder among the banana trees."

„But what are we all to do, Ready?" said Mr. Seagrave; „we must not be idle."

„No, Sir; but I think we must give up this day to putting every thing to rights⁴³²), and making every thing comfortable inside the tents; we must be at Mrs. Seagrave's orders to-day, and to-morrow we will commence the ditch and hedge round the yam plantation. We need not work very hard at it, for I don't think the pigs will venture here again, as I mean to tie up all the dogs round the yam patch every night, and their barking will keep them off."

„That will be a very good plan, Ready. What beautiful food there is for the sheep and goats."

„Yes, Sir; this must be their future residence for the best part of the year. Now, Sir, I think that to-morrow we will begin a piece of the ditch, and shew William how to put in the cuttings of prickly pear for the hedge, and then, Sir, I should propose that we leave Master William here with his mother, to work at his leisure, while you and I go to the cove to examine the stores, and select what it will be necessary to bring round. I think you said that you must go yourself?"

432) To put to rights, in Ordnung bringen.

„Yes, Ready, I wish to go; Mrs. Seagrave will not object to parting with me⁴³³) for three or four days. When we have made selection, I will then return, and then you and William, who is more used to the boat than I am, can bring the stores round. I presume we shall not bring them here?"

„No, Sir; we will take them round to the storehouse. When we have done that job, we must then commence our alterations and our stockade."

CHAPTER XLVII.

The next morning, they went with their shovels to the yam plantation, and commenced their work. As the ground was soft and swampy, the labour was very easy. The ditch was dug nearly a yard wide, and the earth thrown up on a bank inside. They then went to where the large patch of prickly pears grew, and cut a quantity, which they planted on the top of the bank. Before night, they had finished about nine or ten yards of the hedge and ditch.

„I don't think that the pigs will get over that when it is finished," said Ready, „and Master William will be able to get on by himself when we are gone, as well as if we were with him."

„Yes; but not quite so fast, Ready."

„Don't overwork yourself, Master William; all you have to do is to tether the dogs as I did last night, and I have no doubt, that after one or two more attempts, the pigs will come no more."

„I'll try if I cannot shoot a pig or two," said William.

433) To part with one, sich ven Jemand trennen.

„Let it be a young one, then, Sir; we must not kill the old ones. Now I think we may as well go back; the sun will soon be down, and Juno is carrying in the supper.“

Before Mr. Seagrave and Ready started on the following morning, the latter gave William directions as to the boat. The provisions and the knapsack having been already prepared, they took leave of Mrs. Seagrave, and set off, each armed with a musket, and Ready with his axe slung over his shoulder. They had a long walk before them, as they had first to find their way back to the house, and from thence had to walk through the wood to the cove, so that it was a long round to take, but that could not be helped, as they were obliged to follow the blazing or marks which they had made in the trees.

As soon as they arrived at the house, they stopped there an hour to rest, and then went down to the garden at the point; the potatoes and peas in the garden were looking very well, and the onion seed had not failed. Ready carefully examined and repaired the fence, because, as he observed, now that the wild pigs were driven away from the yams, they would, in all probability, come there in search of food.

„How solitary and deserted the place looks now, Ready, that there is nothing living to be seen,“ observed Mr. Seagrave. „Let us go on.“

They recommenced their journey, and in two hours more reached the cove, where they had first landed. The rocks near to it were strewn with timber and planks, which lay bleaching in the sun, or half buried in the sand at the little cove. Mr. Seagrave sat down, and sighed deeply, as he said, „Ready, the sight of these timbers, of which the good ship Pacific was built, and which are now strewn in every direction, recalls feelings which I had hoped to have dismissed from my mind; but I cannot help them rising up. The remains of this vessel appear to me as the last link between us and the civilized world, which we have been torn from, and all my thoughts of home and country, and I may say all my longing for them, are revived as strong as ever."

„And very natural⁴³⁴) that they should, Mr. Seagrave; I feel it also. I am content, it is true, because I have nothing to wish or look forward to; but still I could not help thinking of poor Captain Osborn and my shipmates, as I looked upon the wreck, and wishing that I might take them by the hand again. It is very natural that one should do so. Why, Sir, do you know that I feel unhappy even about the poor ship. We sailors love our vessels, especially when they have good qualities, and the Pacific was as fine a vessel as ever was built (a little wall sided⁴³⁵), perhaps, but that was of no consequence⁴³⁶). Now, Sir, I feel quite melancholy when I see her planks and timbers lying about here. They seem to me like the skeleton of some human being, who has been cast away, and whose bones, after a time, lie bleaching in the sun and wind. But, Sir, if we cannot help feeling as we do, it is our duty to check the feeling, so that it does not get the mastery over us. We can do no more."

„Very true, Ready," said Mr. Seagrave, rising up; „it is not only useless, but even sinful, to indulge in them, as they only can lead to our repining at the decrees of Heaven. Let us now examine the rocks, and see if any thing has been thrown up that may be of use to us."

They walked round, but with the exception of spars and a barrel or two of tar, they could find nothing of value. There was no want of staves and iron hoops of broken casks, and these, Ready observed, would make excellent palings for the garden when they had time to bring them round: and he said, that he thought there were so many, that they might pale off a piece of land to sow their wheat and barley in by-and-by, and in the meantime it would enable them to make hay for the winter provisions of the stock, which, however, was not of such consequence, now that they had such a quantity of Banana stems to feed the animals with during the rainy season.

434) And very natural, zu suppliren: it is. 435) A little wall-sided, mit zu wenig Einweichung. 436) That was of no consequence, das hatte nichts zu bedeuten.

After they had returned, they sat 'down to rest themselves⁴³⁷⁾, and then they went to the tents in the cocoa-nut grove, in which they had collected the articles thrown up when the ship went to pieces.

„Why! the pigs have been at work here,“ said Ready; „they have contrived to open one cask of flour somehow or another: look, Sir — I suppose it must have been shaky, or they could not have routed into it; the canvas is not good for much, I fear; fortunately, we have several bolts⁴³⁸⁾ of new, which I brought on shore. Now, Sir, we will see what condition the stores are in. All these are casks of flour, and we run no risk in opening them, and seeing if they are in good order.“

The first cask which was opened had a cake round it as hard as a board; but when it was cut through with the axe, the inside was found in a good state.

„That's all right, Sir; and I presume the others will be the same; the salt water has got in so far and made a crust, which has preserved the rest; however, we shall open them all as they come to hand. But now let us go to dinner, and to work afterwards. We have some nice cold fried turtle steaks, which Juno has packed up for us.“

437) Hier könnte themselves auch wegbleiben. 438) Bolts of new, neue ungebrauchte Bolzen.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

After dinner they resumed their labour. „I wonder what's in this case?“ said Mr. Seagrave, pointing to the first at hand. Ready set to work with his axe, and broke off the lid, and found a number of paste-board boxes full of tapes, narrow ribbons, stay laces, whalebones, and cottons on reels⁴³⁹).

This has been sent out for some Botany Bay milliner,“ said Mr. Seagrave, „I presume, and I don't doubt she has been very much put out⁴⁴⁰) at not receiving it; however, we must confiscate it for the benefit of Mrs. Seagrave and Miss Caroline. We will take them to them as soon as we have time. Now for another, Ready.“

The next was a box without a lock; the lid was forced up, and they found a dozen half-gallon square bottles of gin stored in divisions.

„That's Hollands⁴⁴¹), Sir, I know,“ said Ready; „what shall we do with it?“

„We will not destroy it, Ready, but at the same time we will not use it but as a medicine,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „we have been so long used to spring-water, that it would be a pity to renew a taste for spirituous liquors; we will take a bottle or two of it round when we have room for it; it may be useful.“

„I trust we shall never want to drink a drop of it, Sir, either as a medicine, or otherwise. Now for this cask with wooden hoops.“

The head was soon out, and discovered a dinner set of painted china with gold edges, which was very beautiful.

„Well, Mr. Seagrave, this may be useful, for we

439) Cottons on reels, Baumwollengarn auf Rollen. 440) To be put out, in Verlegenheit sein. 441) Hollands, oder Holland-gin, auch Geneva, Wachholder-Branntwein.

are rather short of plates and dishes. Common white would have served as well.“

„And be more suitable, certainly, with our present outfit,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „but nevertheless, as you say, this fine china is just as useful as common, and therefore not to be despised.“

Here's a box with your name on it, Sir,“ said Ready; „do you know what is in it?“

„I have no idea, Ready, but your axe will decide the point.“

When the box was opened, every thing appeared in a sad mouldy state from the salt water which had penetrated; but on removing the brown paper and pasteboard, it was found to contain stationery⁴⁴²⁾ of all sorts, and except on the outside, it was very little injured.

This is indeed a treasure, Ready. I recollect now; this is paper, pens, and every thing requisite for writing, besides children's books, copy-books, paint-boxes, and a great many other articles in the stationery line⁴⁴³⁾.“

„Well, Sir, that is fortunate. Now, we may set up our school, and as the whole population of the island will attend it, it will really be a National School.“

„Very true, Ready. Now for that cask.“

„I can tell what that is by the outside; it is oil, and very acceptable, for our candles are nearly out. But there are two or three cases more of candles which we saved. We shall come to them by-and-by. Now we come to the most valuable of all our property.“

„What is that, Ready?“

„All the articles which I brought on shore in the different trips I took in the boat before the ship went to pieces; for you see, Sir, iron don't swim, and, therefore, what I looked after most was iron ware of all sorts, and tools. I have a famous lot of nails. Here are three kegs of small nails, besides two bags of large, and there are several axes, hammers, and other tools, besides all these hanks of twine, sailing needles, and bees-wax, and here's a few bolts of fine canvas, and all in good order.

442) Unter Stationery versteht man alle Arten Artikel, die zum Schreiben, Zeichnen, Malen u. gehören. 443) In the stationery line, was in den Handel eines Stationer einschlägt.

„They are indeed valuable, Ready.“

„Yes, Sir, we should have been sadly in want of them, for those two savages took all that they could lay their hands upon in the way of iron⁴⁴⁴) when they started off in the canoe. It was fortunate we had not brought any more round. Here's some more of my plunder, as the Americans say. All these are wash-deck buckets⁴⁴⁵), this a small harness-cask⁴⁴⁶) for salting meat, and here's the cook's wooden trough for making bread, which will please Miss Juno; and in it, you see, I have put all the galley-hooks, ladles, and spoons, and the iron trivets (they will be very useful), and here's⁴⁴⁷) two lamps. I think I put some cotton wicks some where — I know I did; we shall find them by-and-by. Here's the two casks, one of cartridges made up, and the other of gunpowder; and here's the half-cask of cartridges, all in good order and the other six muskets, which, by-the-bye, will want a little cleaning. But that was to be expected.“

„These are really treasures, Ready, and yet how well we have done without them.“

„Very true, Sir, but we shall do better with them, and when we fit up the storehouse for a dwelling, Mr. Seagrave, we shall be able to make it a little more comfortable in every respect than the present one; for you see there, all the fir-planking and deals, which Master William and I buried in the sand; why, Sir, we shall be able to floor the house, and make capital bed places.“

444) In the way of iron, was nur irgend von Eisen vorhanden war. 445) Wash-deck bucket, das Waschfaß mit Deckel. 446) Harness-cask for salting meat, das Pöfelfaß. 447) Here's für here are.

„I really had quite forgotten them, Ready; but, as you say, there are enough for all that you propose, and twice over. If I could but get the fear of the savages coming over out of my head, I really think we might live very comfortably, even on this island.“

„Do you know, Mr. Seagrave, I am glad to hear you say that, for it proves that you are more contented and resigned than you were.“

„I am so, Ready — at least I think so; but perhaps it is, that the immediate danger from the savages so fills my thoughts, that I no longer dwell so much upon our being taken off the island. One anxiety has to a certain degree driven away and quelled the other.“

„I dare say⁴⁴⁸⁾ it is as you state, Sir; but now let us go on with our search. Here are the ship's compasses, and deep sea line and reel, also the land lead⁴⁴⁹⁾. The stuff will be very useful for our little boat.“

„And I am very glad of the compasses, Ready; for with them I shall be able to make a sort of survey of the island, when I have a little time. Your pocket compass is too small for surveying. Perhaps you don't know that in my younger days I went out to Sydney as a surveyor?“

„No, I never did hear of that. I suppose, then, you'll be able to tell exactly how many acres of feed we have for the animals?“

„Yes, I will tell you that as soon as we get back; but I shall take some bearings now⁴⁵⁰⁾, while I am here, as I may not be back again very soon.“

„Well, Sir, I think if we open this other case, which I perceive has your name on it, it will be as much as we need do to-day, for the sun is going down, 448) I dare say, ich glaube wohl, bin überzeugt. 449) Land lead, das kleinere Sentblei, im Gegensatz von deep sea-line with the log, wozu the reel, die Logrolle gehört. 450) take some bearings, einige geometrische Vermessungen machen.

and I feel a little tired; we can then make up some kind of bed, eat our suppers, and go to sleep."

„I am very tired, Ready, and shall be glad to do as you propose. That case contains books; but what portion of my library I do not know."

„But you soon will, Sir," replied Ready, wrenching it open with his axe. „They are a little stained on the outside, but they are jammed so tight, that they do not appear to have suffered much. Here are one or two, Sir."

„Plutarch's Lives⁴⁵¹). I am glad I have them: they are excellent reading for young or old; there is no occasion to open any more, Ready, as I know all the other books in the case are History; perhaps the best case which could have been saved."

„I think there are two others, Sir; but that we can see to-morrow."

CHAPTER XLIX.

Mr. Seagrave and Ready then set to work, and made a rough sort of cocoa-nut branches; and, after eating their supper, committed themselves to the divine protection, and went to sleep. The next morning they resumed their labour, and opened every other case and package that had been saved from the wreck; they found more books, four boxes of candles, three casks of rice (good and damaged), and several other useful articles, besides many others which were of no value to them.

A chest of tea, and two bags of coffee, which Ready had brought on shore, were, much to their delight, found in good order; but there was no sugar, 451) Plutarch's vitae, eine Sammlung von 44 Biographien und Parallelen, sind allgemein bekannt.

the little which they had saved having been melted away.

„That's unfortunate, Sir. Master Tommy won't like to go without sugar; but it is not absolutely necessary.“

„Master Tommy must learn privation, Ready. We cannot expect to get things here, as though⁴⁵²⁾ we were a hundred yards from a grocer's shop. Now let us go to where we covered up the other articles with sand.“

The sand was shovelled up, and the barrels of beef and pork and the deal boards found in good order, but many other things were quite spoilt. About noon they had finished, and as they had plenty of time, Mr. Seagrave took the bearings of the different points of land with the compasses. They then shouldered their muskets, and Ready taking a few pounds of damaged rice for the fowls, set off on their return.

They gained the house in the bay, and having rested a little while at the storehouse, they proceeded on their way to the tents in the meadow. They had about half a mile to go, when Ready heard a noise, and made a sign to Mr. Seagrave to stop. Ready whispering to Mr. Seagrave that the pigs were all close to them, loaded his musket; Mr. Seagrave did the same, and they walked very softly to where they now heard their grunting; they did not see them till they were within twenty yards, and then they came upon the whole herd: the pigs raised their heads; the old ones gave a loud grunt, and then, just as Ready fired his musket, they all set off at full speed. Mr. Seagrave had no opportunity of firing, but Ready had shot one, which lay kicking and struggling under a co-coa-nut tree.

„A piece of fresh pork will be quite a treat⁴⁵³⁾,“ 452) As though we were, als wenn wir wären. 453) Quite a treat, ein vollständiges Tractament, ein richtiger Schmaus.

Mr. Seagrave," said Ready, as they walked up to where the animal was lying.

„It will, indeed, Ready," replied Mr. Seagrave; „we must contrive to carry the beast home between us."

„We will sling it on the musket, Sir, and it will not be very heavy. It is one of those born on the island, and a very fine fellow for his age."

The pig was soon slung, and they carried it between them. As they cleared the wood, they perceived Mrs. Seagrave and William, who had heard the report of the musket, and had come out to meet them. Mrs. Seagrave was a little agitated, but as soon as she saw the pig, she knew why the musket had been fired.

„I was a little alarmed when I heard the musket fired, I must say," said Mrs. Seagrave, as she embraced her husband. „I had no idea that you would be back to-day. We are all quite well."

„William took the load from his father, who walked on with Mrs. Seagrave.

„Well, Master William, what news have you?" said Ready.

„Why, very good, Ready. Yesterday evening, when I was tired of work, I thought I would take the boat, and try if there was any fish to be caught on this side of the island, in the deep water, and I caught three large ones, quite different from those we took among the reefs. We had one for breakfast and dinner to-day, and it was excellent."

„Did you go out in the boat by yourself?"

„No; I took Juno with me. Mamma said that she could spare her for an hour or so. She pulls very well, Ready."

„She is a handy girl, Master William. Well, we have had our survey, and there will be plenty of work for you and me, I can tell you; I don't think we can bring every thing round in a week; so I suppose to-morrow we had better be off. But we must hear what your father says."

„Well, I like boating better than ditching, I can tell you, Ready,“ replied William. „I shan't be sorry to leave that work to my father.“

„I suppose it must fall to him, Sir; as he will, of course, prefer staying with Mrs. Seagrave and the children.“

As soon as they were at the tents, Ready hung up the pig to the cross pole of the tent in which he and William and Mr. Seagrave slept, and having propped the muskets up against the side of the tent, he went with William to get his knife and some stretchers of wood to open the pig with. While he and William were away, Caroline and Tommy came out to look at the pig, and Tommy, after telling Caroline how glad he was that they were to have roast pig⁴⁵⁴) for dinner, took up one of the muskets, and said, „Now, Caroline, I'll shoot the pig.“

„Oh! Tommy, you must not touch the gun,“ cried Caroline; „papa will be very angry; recollect you made it go off when we were at the cove.“

„I don't care,“ replied Tommy. „I'll shew you how to shoot the pig.“

„Don't, Tommy,“ cried Caroline: „if you do, I'll go and tell mamma.“

„Then I'll shoot you,“ replied Tommy, trying to point the musket at her.

Caroline was so frightened, that she ran away as fast as she could, and then Tommy, using all his strength contrived to get the musket up to his shoulder, and pulled the trigger.

It so happened that Tommy had taken up Mr. Seagrave's musket, which had not been fired, and when he pulled the trigger it went off, and as he did not hold it tight to his shoulder, it recoiled, and hit him with the butt right on his face, knocking out two of his teeth, and bruising his cheek very much, besides making his nose bleed very fast.

454) Man sagt nämlich roast beef, roast pig &c. im Gegensatz von boiled.

Tommy was so astonished and frightened at the musket going off, and the blow which he received, that he gave a loud yell, dropped the musket, and ran to the tent where his father and mother were, just as they had started up and had rushed out at hearing the report.

When Mrs. Seagrave saw Tommy all covered with blood, and screaming so loud, she was so alarmed that she could not stand, and she fell fainting in Mr. Seagrave's arms. Ready and William, on hearing the musket go off, had run as fast as they could, fearing that some accident had happened; and while Mr. Seagrave supported his wife, Ready went to Tommy, and wiping the blood off his face with the palm of his hand, perceived that there was no wound or serious mischief, and cried out to Mr. Seagrave, „He's not hurt, Sir; it's only his nose bleeding. Leave off crying and screaming, you naughty boy. How dare you touch the musket?“

„Musket knock me down,“ cried Tommy, sobbing, as the blood ran out of his mouth.

„Serve you right, Master Tommy; you'll take care not to touch the musket again?“

„I won't touch it again,“ cried Tommy, blubbering; „it shoot me.“

Juno now came up with some water to wash his face; Mrs. Seagrave had recovered, and gone back into the tent, on Mr. Seagrave telling her that it was only Tommy's nose which was bleeding.

In about half an hour Tommy had ceased crying, and his nose had left off bleeding; his face was washed, and then it was discovered that he had lost two front teeth, and that his cheek and lips were very much bruised. He was undressed, and put to bed, and was soon fast asleep.

„I should not have left the muskets,“ said Ready to William; „it was my fault, but I thought Mr. Tommy had been told so often not to touch fire-arms, that he would not have dared to do so; but if there is mischief to be done, he is certain to find it out."

"He pointed it at me, and tried to shoot me," said Caroline, "but I ran away."

"Merciful heavens! what an escape!" cried Mrs. Seagrave. "Had he pulled the trigger then, my dear child would have been killed. Naughty boy that he is."

"He has been well punished this time, Madam, and I'll venture to say he will not touch a musket again in a hurry."

"Yes; but he must be punished more," said Mr. Seagrave; "he must remember it."

"Well, Sir, if he is to be punished more, I think you can punish him no better than by not allowing him to have any of the pig when it is cooked. Master Tommy is so fond of his dinner, that it will be the greatest punishment which you can inflict."

"I think so too, Ready; and therefore that is a settled thing — no pig for Master Tommy."

After this conversation they had their supper; and went to bed.

CHAPTER L.

The next morning Master Tommy's face presented a very woful appearance. His cheek and lips were swelled and black, and the loss of his two front teeth made him look much worse; fortunately, they were his first teeth, or it would have been of more serious consequence.

Tommy looked very glummy when he came to breakfast. But he had been very saucy to Juno, telling her that he had shot the pig, and would go out and shoot another, as soon as this one was eaten up.

There was the pig's fry⁴⁵⁵) for breakfast, and the smell of it had been very inviting to Tommy; but when his father scolded him, and told him that he was not to have one bit of the pig, he began to cry and roar so loud, that he was sent away from the tents till he had left off.

After breakfast, Ready proposed that he and William should take the boat, and begin their labour of carrying the articles round from the cove to the bay where the house was, pointing out that there was not a day to be lost. Juno had, at his request, already baked a large piece of the pig for them to take with them, and boiled a piece of salt-pork, so that they were all ready to start. Mr. Seagrave agreed to work at the hedge and ditch round the yam plantations during their absence.

„But, Ready,“ said Mrs. Seagrave, „how long do you intend to remain absent with William?“

„Why, Madam, this is Wednesday; of course we shall be back on Saturday night. We must get the work done, and the sooner the better.“

„My dear William, I cannot bear the idea of your being absent so long, and as you will be on the water every day, I shall be in a continual fright until I see you again.“

„Well, Mamma, I suppose I must write by the penny post⁴⁵⁶), to let you know how I am.“

„Don't laugh at me, William. I do wish there was a penny post, and that you could write every day.“

Ready and William made every preparation for a continued absence. They took their blankets with them, and a small pot for cooking, and when all was prepared, they bade Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave farewell. Juno assisted to get the luggage down to the boat. They were now to pull to the bay, and leave their luggage, 455) The pig's fry, Wellfleisch. 456) The penny post, die Stadtpost so genannt, weil der Brief einen Penny Porto kostet.

and then to go round to the cove. As they shoved off, William took the dog Remus into the boat.

„Why do you take the dog, Master William? he will be of use here in keeping the pigs away, but of no use to us.“

„Yes, he will, Ready; I must take him; for I have an idea come into my head, so let me have my own way.“

„Well, Mr. William, you can always have your own way, as far as I'm concerned; if you wish to take the dog, there is an end of the matter. Good bye, Juno.“

„Good bye, Massa Ready; good bye, Mr. William; mind⁴⁵⁷⁾ you come back Saturday, and bring fish with you.“

„We'll bring you a turtle, Juno; for they will come to the island again soon, and then we will turn plenty more.“

They hoisted the sail, and as the breeze was fresh, were round to the bay in a very short time. They took their provisions and stores up to the house, and made fast the door, called the fowls, and gave them some of the damaged rice which Ready had brought round with him, and found, to their great delight, that they had now upwards of forty chickens, all healthy, and doing well; some, indeed, quite grown, and large enough to kill; but as they had plenty of fresh provisions, it had been decided that they should not be touched yet, for the eggs would be of more value to them than the fowls.

They then got into the boat again, and pulled away for the cove; the wind was fresh, and against them, so they had a long pull; but, as Ready observed, it was much better that it should be so, as, when the boat was loaded, they could very quickly sail back again to the bay.

As soon as they arrived at the cove, they lost no time in loading the boat; the nails, and iron work of every description, with the twine and tools which Ready had brought on shore, composed the major part of the first cargo; a cask of flour, and a box of candles, with some bolts of canvas, filled the boat, and calling Remus, who was lying on the sandy beach at the cove, they shoved off, hoisted their sail, and in an hour had regained the bay, and passed through the reef.

457) Mind you come back, vergeßet nicht zurückzukommen.

„I'm glad that this cargo has arrived safe, Master William, for it is very valuable to us. Now we will take them all up, and that will be sufficient for to-day; to-morrow, if we can, we will make trips; do you think you can manage it, Sir⁴⁵⁸)?“

„Oh! yes; if we only start very early,“ replied William; „but now let us have our dinner, and carry the remainder of the things up afterwards.“

As they were eating their dinner, and William was giving the bones to the dog, Ready said, „Pray, Master William, what was the idea in your head which made you bring Remus with you?“

„I will tell you, Ready; I may be wrong, but I think I am not; I mean him to carry a letter to mamma; you know that he always goes back when he is ordered, and now I wish to see if he will not go back to the tents, if he is told. I have brought a piece of paper and pencil with me.“

William then wrote on the paper, „Dear Mamma: — We are quite well, and just returned with the first cargo quite safe. Your affectionate Son, William.“

William tied the paper round the dog's neck with a piece of twine, and then calling him out of the house, said to him, „Remus, go back, Sir — go back, Sir;“ the dog looked wistfully at William, as if not sure of what he was to do, but William, took up a stone, and pretended to throw it at the dog, who ran away a little distance, and then stopped.

„Go back, Remus — go back, Sir. William again

458) You can manage it, daß ihr es aushalten könnt.

pretended to throw the stone, repeating the order, and then the dog set off as fast as his legs could carry him through the cocoa-nut grove.

„He is gone at all events,“ said William; I think he will go home.“

„We shall see, Sir,“ replied Ready; „and now that we have finished our dinner, we will bring up the things.“

„Where shall we put them?“

„In the storehouse, Master William. It will be a good long job, for those kegs of nails and cases are very heavy, and will require both of us to carry them; so we must make a good many trips. However, we have three or four hours' daylight.“

CHAPTER LI.

As soon as they had carried up the whole of the cargo, they secured the boat, and went up to the house to sleep. Just as they went in, Remus came bounding up to them with the letter round his neck.

„Here's the dog, Master William,“ said Ready; „he won't go home after all.“

„How provoking; I made sure⁴⁵⁹) he would go back; I really am disappointed. We will give him nothing to eat, and then he will; but dear me, Ready, this is not the paper I tied round his neck. I think not. Let me see. William took the paper, opened it, and read, „Dear William: — Your letter arrived safe, and we are glad you are well. Write every day, and God bless you; it was very clever of you and Remus.

„Your affectionate Mother,

„Selina Seagrave.“

459) I made sure für I was sure.

„Well, it is very clever,” said Ready; „I’m sure I had no idea he had gone; and his coming back again, too, when he was ordered.”

„Dear Remus, good dog,” said William, caressing it; „nice, good dog: now I’ll give you a good supper, for you deserve it.”

„So he does, Sir. Well, you’ve established a post on the island, which is a great improvement. Seriously, Mr. William, it may prove very useful.”

„At all events it will be a great comfort to my mother.”

„Yes, Sir; especially as we shall be obliged all three to be here when we fit up the storehouse, and make the proposed alterations. Now I think we had better go to bed, Sir, for we must be up with the lark to-morrow, as they say in England.”

„And here I suppose we must say, up with the parrots; for they are the only land birds on the island.”

„You forget the pigeons, Sir; I saw one of them in the wood the other day, but they are breeding just now. Good night, Sir.”

The next morning, they were off before breakfast, and as the wind was not so fresh, they had not so hard a pull. The boat was soon loaded, and they returned under sail. They then breakfasted, and having left the things they had brought on the beach, that they might lose no time, they set off again, and returned with another cargo two hours before dusk; this they landed, and then secured the boat. As soon as they were in the house, William wrote on a piece of paper: —

„Dear Mamma: — We have brought round two cargoes to-day. All well, and very tired. Yours, William.”

Remus did not require any teaching this time. William patted him, and said, „Good dog. Now, Remus, go back — go home, Sir;” and the dog wagged his tail, and set off immediately.

Before they were in bed, the dog returned with the answer.

„How fast he must run, Ready; he has not been away more than two hours.“

„No, Sir. What does mamma say?“

„Only, All's well; won't⁴⁶⁰) detain your messenger.“

„So now, Remus, you shall have plenty of supper, and plenty of patting and coaxing, for you are a clever, good little dog.“

The next day, as they had to take the two cargoes to the house, they could only make one trip to the cove. The post was sent to the tents, and returned with the answer as before.

On Saturday they only made one trip, as they had to return to the tents, which they did by water, having first put a turtle into the boat; on their arrival, they found them all at the little harbour, waiting to receive them.

„Well, William, dear, you did keep your promise and send me a letter by post,“ said Mrs. Seagrave. „How very delightful it is; I shall have no fear now when you are all away.“

„I must teach Romulus and Vixen to do the same, Mamma.“

„And I'll teach the puppies,“ said Tommy; „and I'll write letters.“

„Yes, Master Tommy; by the time you can write a letter, the puppies will be old enough to carry it,“ said Ready. „I see your face is not quite well yet; you won't shoot any more dead pigs, I hope.“

„No, I wont; but I'll eat plenty more of the next one that you kill.“

„That will be much wiser, Master Tommy. Come, Albert, dear, I'll carry you up, you and I haven't had a game of play for a long while. How does the ditch and hedge get on, Mr. Seagrave?“

460) Won't für I would not.

„Pretty well, Ready,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „I have nearly finished two sides. I think by the end of next week I shall have pretty well enclosed it.“

„Well, Sir, you must not work too hard, there is no great hurry; William and I can get through a great deal together⁴⁶¹).“

„It is my duty to work, Ready; and I may add, it is a pleasure. Now we will go to supper.“

As they were at supper the conversation turned upon the cleverness shewn by the dog Remus.

„Mr. Seagrave then narrated many instances of the sagacity of animals, when William asked the question of his father: „What is the difference then between reason and instinct?“

„The difference is very great, William, as I will explain to you; but I must first observe, that it has been the custom to say that man is governed by reason, and animals by instinct, alone. This is an error. Man has instinct as well as reason; and animals, although chiefly governed by instinct, have reasoning powers.“

„In what points does man shew that he is led by instinct?“

„When a child is first born, William, it acts by instinct only, the reasoning powers are not yet developed; as we grow up, our reason becomes every day more matured, and gains the mastery over our instinct, which decreases in proportion.“

„Then, when we have grown to a good old age, I suppose we have no instinct left in us?“

„Not so, my dear boy; there is one and a most powerful instinct implanted in man which never deserts him on this side of the grave. It is the fear, not of death, but of utter annihilation, that of becoming nothing after death. This instinctive feeling could not have been so deeply implanted in us, but as an assurance 461) We can get through a great deal together, wir können zusammen ein gutes Stück Arbeit verrichten.

that we shall not be annihilated after death, but that our souls shall still exist, although our bodies shall have perished. It may be termed the instinctive evidence of a future existence."

CHAPTER LI.

On the Monday morning, William and Ready went away in the boat, as before, to bring round the various articles from the cove. It had been arranged that they were not to return till the Saturday evening, and that the dog Remus was to bring intelligence of them and their welfare every afternoon. They worked hard during the week, and on Saturday they had completed their task; with the exception of a portion of the timbers of the ship, every thing had been brought round, but had not been carried up to the storehouse, as that required more time.

On Saturday morning, they went for the last time to the cove, and Ready selected some heavy oak timber out of the quantity which was lying on the beach, part of which they put into the boat, and the remainder they towed astern. It was a heavy load, and although the wind was fair to sail back again to the bay, the boat went but slowly through the water.

"Well, Master William," said Ready, "we have done a good week's work, and I must say it is high time that it is done; for the boat is in rather a crazy condition, and I must contrive to patch her up by-and-by, when there is time."

"We shall not want to use her very much after this, Ready," replied William; "a few trips round to the little harbour will be all that will be required before we come back again to our old quarters."

"That's true, Master William; but she leaks very much, and at all events I'll give her a coat of pitch as soon as possible. For a slight-built little thing as she is, she has done hard duty.“

„Pray, Ready, why, when you speak of a ship or boat, do you always call it she?“

„Well, Master William, I don't know why, but it is certain that we sailors always do so. I believe it is because a sailor loves his ship. His ship is his wife, is a very common saying with us; and then you see, Master William, a vessel is almost a thing of life in appearance⁴⁶²): she sits like a duck on the water, and when it is calm, she rolls to and fro like a lazy person; make sail on her, and she flies through the water as if she was a porpus or a dolphin; press her with too much canvas⁴⁶³), and she complains; and when buffeted⁴⁶⁴) by the tempest, she groans like one who suffers. So that being to us sailors a sort of living thing, and we being fond of her, we call her she; I suppose, because a man gets fonder of a woman than any other thing that's living. I believe that's the reason, and of course if a vessel is she, a little boat must be a she also.“

„Well, I think you have explained it very well, Ready. I suppose on Monday we shall set to at the storehouse, and alter it for our future residence?“

„Can't begin too soon, Master William,“ replied Ready; „I don't doubt but Mr. Seagrave has finished the hedge and ditch round the yams by this time, and if so, I expect that Madam will not like to be left in the tents alone with Juno and the children, and so we shall all move back to the house again until we have altered the storehouse; I must say that I would rather that your mamma should remain in the tents until all was finished.“

„Because you are afraid of a visit from the savages, Ready?“

462) In appearance, dem Scheine nach. 463) Canvas für sails. 464) Mit den Zeitwörtern auf et verhält es sich wie mit denen auf el, die Verdoppelung des t ist oft unnöthig.

„I am, Sir, and that's the truth.“

„But, Ready, if they do come, we shall see them coming, and would it not be better that we should all be together, even if we are obliged to conceal ourselves in consequence of not being prepared? Suppose the savages were to overrun the island, and find my mother, my little brother and sister defenceless, at the time we were obliged to retreat from our house; how dreadful that would be!“

„But, Master William, I counted upon retreating to the tents.“

„So we can altogether, Ready, unless we are surprised in the night.“

„That we must take care not to be. There's not three hours' dark in this season of the year. Well, Master William, I doubt not you may be right, and if they are all with us, Juno will be a great help, and we shall get through our work the faster⁴⁶⁵).“

„We had better let the question be decided by my father and mother.“

„Very true, Master William; here's the point at last. We will haul the timber on the beach, and then be off as fast as we can, for it is getting late.“

It was, indeed, much later than they had usually arrived at the little harbour, owing to the heavy load⁴⁶⁶), which made the boat so long in coming round from the cove; and when they pulled in, they found Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave and the children all down, waiting for them.

„You are very late, William, dear,“ said Mrs. Seagrave. „I was quite uneasy till I saw the boat at a distance.“

„Yes, Mamma; but we could not help it⁴⁶⁷); we had a heavy load to bring round, and now our work is done.“

465) The faster, um so schneller. 466) Owing to the heavy load, woran die schwere Ladung Schuld war. 467) We could not help it, wir konnten es nicht ändern.

„I am delighted to hear it, William; for I cannot bear you being away so long.“

„And my work is done,“ said Mr. Seagrave; „the hedge and ditch were finished this morning.“

„Well, then,“ observed Ready, we must hold another council, but I presume it will not take very long.“

„No; I expect not; it seldom does when people are of the same mind. Mrs. Seagrave won't be left here, Ready, and I don't want to leave her, so I presume on Monday we all start home again.“

„Yes, Sir; if you please,“ replied Ready.

„Juno, I hope you have a good supper,“ said William; „for I'm very hungry.“

„Yes, Massa William; plenty fried fish; Massa catch 'em this morning.“

„I like turtle soup,“ said Tommy.

„I believe you like every thing, Master Tommy,“ replied Ready, „except castor oil beans. You won't eat any more of them.“

„No, that I won't; but I'll eat the bananas when they are ripe.“

„You would have eaten them before if you could have reached them, I think; but you must grow a little taller first.“

„I shall be a man by-and-by,“ said Tommy.

„I hope you will, and a good man, too,“ replied old Ready; „but now I must help Juno in getting the supper underway⁴⁶⁸).“

468) Ein Schiffsausdruck: To ship underway oder weigh, die Anker lichten, absegeln.

CHAPTER LIII.

The next day being Sunday was a day of repose, and as they had all worked so hard, they felt the luxury of a day of rest. In the afternoon, they agreed that on Monday they should make every preparation for quitting the tents, and returning to the house at the bay. They decided that the live stock should all be left there, as the pasturage was so plentiful and good, with the exception of one goat, which they would take back with them, to supply them with milk, and they also agreed that the tents should be left standing, with some cooking utensils, that in case William and Ready went round for the bananas or yams, or to examine the live stock, they should not be compelled to sleep in the open air, and should have the means of dressing their dinner. William and Ready were to carry the beds, &c., round to the bay in the boat, which they could do in two trips, and Mrs. Seagrave, with the family, were to walk through the woods after taking a very early breakfast.

The next morning was one of bustle; there was packing up and every preparation for the departure. Juno was called here and called there, and was obliged to ask little Caroline to look after the kettle and call to her⁴⁶⁹⁾ if it boiled over. Master Tommy, as usual, was in every one's way, and doing more harm than good in his attempt to assist; but, however, as he meant well⁴⁷⁰⁾, nobody scolded him.

At last, Ready, to get rid of him⁴⁷¹⁾, sent him down with a large bundle to the beach. Tommy shouldered it with great importance, but when he came back looking rather warm with the exertion⁴⁷²⁾, and Ready asked him to take down another, he said he was too tired, and sat down very quietly till breakfast-time, before which every thing was ready.

469) To call to one, Einem zurufen, to call on oder upon one, Einem besuchen. 470) As he meant well, da seine Absicht gut war. 471) To get rid of one, Einem los werden. 472) With the exertion, von der Anstrengung.

Mrs. Seagrave and Juno packed up the breakfast and dinner things in a basket after breakfast was over, and then Mr. und Mrs. Seagrave and the family set off on their journey, accompanied by the dogs, through the cocoa-nut grove. Little Albert could now walk very well, and only required to be occasionally carried by Juno, who led him by the hand. Caroline walked by her papa and mamma, and Master Tommy was too independent to walk with any one.

William and Ready lost no time in getting through their work; the crockery, kitchen utensils, table, and chairs, were the first articles put into the boat. The goat was then led down, and they set off with a full load, and arrived at the bay long before the party who were walking through the wood. They landed the things on the beach, and then shoved off again to bring round the bedding, which was all that was left. By three o'clock in the afternoon, they had arrived at the bay with their second and last load, and found that the other party had been there about an hour, and Mr. Seagrave and Juno were very busy taking the articles up from the beach.

„Well, Master William,“ said Ready, „this is our last trip for some time, I expect, and so much the better⁴⁷³), for our little boat must have something done to her⁴⁷⁴) as soon as I can find time.“

„Yes, indeed, Ready, she has done her work well. Do you know I feel as if I were coming home, now that we are back to the bay. I little thought that I ever should consider any part of this island as my home. I really feel quite glad that we have left the tents. I found the pigeons among the peas, Ready, so 473) So much the better, und dies ist um so besser. 474) Must have something done to her, es muß Etwas an ihm gethan werden.

we must pick them as soon as we can. They have increased very much; I think there were near twenty of them."

"We shall have pigeon pies next year, I expect," replied William.

"If it pleases God that we live and do well⁴⁷⁵," replied Ready, who had his eyes fixed upon the sea.

Before night, every thing was in its place again in the house, and as comfortable as before, and as they were very tired, they went very early to bed; having first arranged what they should do in the morning. Mrs. Seagrave said that she could attend to the cookery and the children, and that Juno was at their service, if they required her. At daylight Ready and William went down to the turtle pond and speared a turtle, for now the time was coming on for turning the turtle again, and the pond would soon be filled. Having cut it up and put a portion of it into the pot, all ready for Mrs. Seagrave, as soon as breakfast was over, they proceeded to the storehouse in the grove.

After a little consultation with Mr. Seagrave, Ready marked out a square of cocoa-nut trees surrounding the storehouse, so as to leave a space within them of about twenty yards each side, which they considered large enough for the enclosure. These cocoa-nut trees were to serve as the posts between which were to be fixed other cocoa-nut trees cut down, and about fourteen feet high, so as to form a palisade or stockade, which could not be climbed over, and would protect them from any attack of the savages.

As soon as the line of trees had been marked out, they set to work cutting down all the trees within the line, and then outside to a distance of ten yards, so as to give them room for their work. Ready cut out cross pieces, to nail from tree to tree⁴⁷⁶), and now they found the advantage of having saved so many of 475) And do well, und uns wohl befinden. 476) To nail statt to be nailed.

the large spike nails, without which they never could have made so good or so quick a job of it. Mr. Seagrave cut down trees, William and Juno sawed them off at a proper length with one of the cross-cut saws, and then carried them to Ready. They soon had more cut out than he could use, and then they dragged away the tops and branches, and piled them at a distance on the ground, to use as winter fuel, while Mr. Seagrave helped Ready in fixing up the palisades. They worked very hard that day, and were not sorry to go to bed. Ready, however, took an opportunity to speak to William.

„I think, Sir,“ said he, „that now we are here again, it will be necessary to keep a sort of night-watch, in case of accident. I shall not go to bed till it is quite dark, which it will be by nine o'clock, and shall have my glass to examine the offing the last thing. You see, Sir, there is little fear of the savages coming here in the night-time, but they may just before night or very early in the morning, so one of us must be up again before daybreak, that is between two and three o'clock in the morning, to see if there is any thing to be seen of them; if there is not, of course we may go to bed again, as they cannot arrive till many hours afterwards, and we must watch the wind and weather, if it is favourable for them to come to us, which, indeed, the wind will not be except at the commencement of the rainy season; but it may be very light, and then they would not care for its being against them. I've been thinking of it, Master William, a great deal, and my idea is, that it will be at the beginning of the rainy season that we shall have a visit, if we have one at all; for you see that the wind don't⁴⁷⁷) blow regular from one quarter, as it does now, but is variable, and then they can make sail in their canoes, and come here easily, instead of pulling between thirty 477) Don't unrichtig für does not — regular unrichtig für regularly.

and forty miles, which is hard work against wind and current. Still, Master William, we must not be careless, and we must keep a good look-out even now. I don't want to fret your father and Mrs. Seagrave with my fears on the subject, but I tell you what I really think, and what we ought to do."

"I agree with you, Ready, and I will take care to be up before daybreak, and examine very carefully with the spy-glass as soon as the day dawns. You take the night part, and I will do the morning part of the watching."

"Very well, Master William; for the matter of that⁴⁷⁸), I could do both myself, but I think if you were to get up in the morning, they would not notice it so much; as for my staying out at night, that they are accustomed to."

After this conversation, they separated, and from that time forward William and Ready were continually on the look-out, from dawn of day till it was too dark to distinguish any thing.

CHAPTER LIV.

For nearly a fortnight, the work upon the stockade continued without any intermission, when a circumstance occurred which created the greatest alarm and excitement. One day, as the party returned to dinner, Mrs. Seagrave said with surprise, "Why, was not Tommy with you?"

"No," replied Mr. Seagrave; "he has not been near us all day; he went with us after breakfast, but did not remain a quarter of an hour."

"No, Missy; I tell Massa Tommy to help carry cocoa-nut leaves, and then he go away directly."

478) For the matter of that, was dies anbelangt.

„Goodness! where can he be?“ exclaimed Mrs. Seagrave, alarmed.

„I dare say he is picking up shells on the beach, Ma'am,“ replied Ready, „or perhaps he is in the garden. I will go and see.“

„I will go with you, Ready,“ said William.

„I see him — oh, mercy! — I see him,“ said Juno, pointing with her finger; „he in the boat, and boat go to sea.“

It was but too true: there was Tommy in the boat and the boat had drifted from the beach, and was now a cables length away from it, among the breakers of the reef.

William ran off like the wind, followed close by Mr. Seagrave and Ready, and at a distance by Mrs. Seagrave and Juno, the former dreadfully alarmed; indeed, there was no time to be lost, for the wind was off the shore, and in a short time the boat would have been out to sea.

William, as soon as he arrived at the beach, threw off his hat and jacket, and dashed into the water. He was already up to his middle, when old Ready, who followed him, caught him by the arm, and said, —

„Master William, go back immediately. I insist upon it. Your going can do no good, as you do not understand the thing so well as I do; and go I will, so there will be double risk for nothing. Mr. Seagrave, order him back. He will obey you. I insist upon it, Sir.“

„William,“ said Mr. Seagrave, „come back immediately, I command you.“

William obeyed; but, before he was clear of the water, old Ready had swam across to the first rocks on the reef, and was now dashing through the pools between the rocks, towards the boat.

„Oh! Father,“ said William, „if that good old man is lost, I shall never forgive myself. I almost feel as if I did wrong to obey you. Look, Father, one — wot — three sharks, here, close to us. He has no chance⁴⁷⁹⁾ See, he is again in deep water. God protect him! — O God! hear my prayer.“

In the meantime, Mr. Seagrave, whose wife was now by his side, and who was shuddering at the scene, after glancing his eye a moment at the sharks, which were within a few feet of the beach, had kept his gaze steadily upon Ready's movements. If he passed through the passage of deep water between the rocks, he might be considered safe, as the boat was now beating on a reef on the other side, where the water was shallow. It was a moment of intense anxiety. At last Ready had gained the reef, and had his hands upon the rocks, and was climbing on them.

„He is safe, is he not?“ whispered Mrs. Seagrave faintly.

„Yes; now I think he is“ replied Mr. Seagrave, as Ready had gained a footing on the rocks, where the water was but a little above his ankles. „I think there is no deep water between him and the boat.“

In another minute Ready was over the rocks, and had seized the gunnel of the boat.

„He is in the boat,“ cried William. „Thank God!“

„Yes; we must thank God, and that fervently,“ replied Mr. Seagrave. „Look at those monsters,“ continued he, pointing to the sharks; „how quick they swim to and fro⁴⁸⁰⁾: they have scented their prey on the water. William, it is fortunate they are here; they might have been out there, when Ready passed through the deep water.“

„Yes, indeed, Papa. See, he has the boat-hook, and is pushing the boat off the reef into the deep water. Oh! he is quite safe now.“

Such, however, was not the case. The boat had been beating on the rocks of the reef, and had knocked a hole in her bottom, and as soon as Ready had forced the boat into deep water, she began to fill immediately. Ready pushed as hard as he could with the boat-hook, and tearing off his neckcloth, forced as much as he could of it into the hole. This saved them; but the boat was up to the thwarts with water, and the least motion on the part of Ready, or even Tommy, would have upset her immediately, and they had still to pass the deep water between the reef and the beach, where the sharks were swimming. Ready who perceived his danger, called out to them to throw large stones at the sharks as fast as they could, to drive them away. This was immediately done by Mr. Seagrave and William, aided by Juno and Mrs. Seagrave, who found courage in this present instance.

479) He has no chance, er kann der Gefahr nicht entrinnen.

480) To and fro, hin und her.

The pelting of the stones had the desired effect. The sharks swam away, and Ready passed through to the beach, and the boat grounded just as she was up to the gunnel in water, and about to turn over. He handed out Master Tommy, who was so dreadfully frightened, that he could not cry, but remained as pale as a sheet, and his mouth and eyes wide open.

As soon as Ready landed, William sprung into his arms, crying, „Thank God, you are safe, Ready.“ Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave each took his hand, and shook it heartily. At last, Mrs. Seagrave, overpowered by her feelings, sank her head upon William's shoulder, and burst into tears. Juno, after smiling at Ready, took Tommy by the hand, and led him away, saying, „Come along, you nasty, naughty boy. You get fine whipping to-night, soon as all the work is over.“ Whereupon Tommy set up a miserable howling, which he never left until long after he was in the house.

„It was touch and go⁴⁸¹), Master William,“ observed Ready, as they walked up to the house, preceded by Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave. „How much mischief may be created by a thoughtless boy! However, one can't put old heads on young shoulders, and so Master Tommy must be forgiven.“

481) It was touch and go, es ging auf Leben oder Tod.

„He has been punished enough, as far as fright goes,” replied William; „I’ll answer for it, he’ll never get into the boat again by himself.“

„No, I think not; but now, Master William, you saw how nearly I was swamped in the boat; indeed, it was only by His mercy that I was preserved; but taking the question merely as far as our endeavours could help us, do you think that if you had gained the boat instead of me, you would have brought her to the beach as I did?“

„No, Ready; for I never should have thought of taking off my neckcloth to put into the hole, I’m afraid; but even if I had, I never could have managed her so skillfully as you did, and therefore I must have been swamped before I got on shore.“

„Well, Master William, as I am an old sailor and you are not, therefore it is not vanity which makes me say that you could not have managed the boat so well as I did. Now, as I had not three or four seconds to spare, you, as you say, must have been swamped. I mention this to prove to you that I was right in desiring your father to order you back.“

„Certainly, Ready; but Tommy is my brother, and I felt that it was more my duty than yours to risk my life for him.“

„A very proper feeling, Master William, but you have other duties, which are, to look after your father and mother, and be a comfort and solace to them. Your life is more valuable than mine. I am an old man on the brink of the grave, and a year or two makes no difference; but your life is, I hope, of more consequence. What would have been the agony and distress, and, I may say, continual source of future regret to your parents; had you perished before their eyes by so horrible a death! They never would have smiled again.“

„And do you not think that their regret would have been as great, if you had perished in the same way?“

„I do not know but that at first it would have been very painful to them, but time would have made them forget it, and poor Tommy, too, would have been a source of deep sorrow; but to lose two sons, and their eldest now grown up, you may say, it would have been hard, very hard to bear, and nothing but the sincere religion of your parents could have brought them to submit with resignation. But here we are at the house, so let us say no more about it.“

That evening the prayers were more than usually solemn, and the thanksgivings more heartfelt and sincere. Exhausted with the exciting scene of the day, they all retired early to bed.

CHAPTER LV.

When Tommy was questioned on the following morning as to his inducement to get into the boat, to their great surprise he replied, that he wanted to go round to the tents again, to see if the bananas were ripe; that he intended to eat some of them and be back before dinner-time, that he might not be found out.

„I suspect, Master Tommy, you would have been very hungry before you ate any bananas if we had not perceived you,“ said Ready.

„I won't go into the boat any more,“ said Tommy.

„I rather think you will keep to that resolution, Tommy,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „however, I must leave your mother to point out to you the danger you were in yourself, and in which you placed others by your folly. It is time for us to go to work.“

The stockade was now almost finished; the door was the occasion of a good deal of consultation; at last, it was agreed that it would be better to have a door of stout oak plank, but with second door-posts inside, about a foot apart from the door, between which could be inserted short poles one above the other, so as to barricade it within when required. This would make the door as strong as any other portion of the stockade. As soon as this was all complete, the store-house was to be altered for a dwelling-house, by taking away the wattles of cocoa-nut boughs on the sides, and filling them up with logs of cocoa-nut trees.

Before the week was ended, the stockade and door were complete, and they now began to fell trees, to form the sides of the house. This was rapid work; and while Mr. Seagrave, William and Juno felled the trees, and brought on the wheels to the side of the stockade, all ready cut⁴⁸²⁾ to their proper lengths, Ready was employed in flooring the house with a part of deal planks which they had brought round from the cove. But this week they were obliged to break off for two days, to collect all their crops from the garden; as soon as this was done, they again set to work.

A fortnight more passed away in continual hard work, but the house was at last finished, and very complete, compared to the one they were residing in. It was much larger, and divided into three rooms by the deal planking: the middle room which the door opened into was the sitting and eating-room⁴⁸³⁾, with a window behind; the two side rooms were sleeping-rooms⁴⁸³⁾, one for Mrs. Seagrave and the children, and the other for the male portion of the family. This made it much more comfortable and complete.

„See, Master William,“ said Ready, when they were alone, „what we have been able to do by means of those deal planks; why, to have floored this house, and run up⁴⁸⁴⁾ the partitions, would have taken us half a year, if we had had to saw the wood.“

482) All ready cut, ganz fertig zugehauen. So sagt man I bought it ready made. 483) Man unterscheidet in England: eating oder dining room, das Speisezimmer, sitting oder drawing room oder parlour, das Besuchzimmer, bed oder sleeping room, das Schlafzimmer. 484) To run up, aufrichten.

„Yes; and what a comfort it is to have so many shelves about. When shall we shift into this house?“

„The sooner the better, Master William. We have plenty of work still to do, but we can work outside of the stockade.“

„And what do you propose to do with the old house?“ said William.

„We had better put some of our stores of least value in it for the present, until we can fit up another storehouse inside the stockade.“

„Then we'll put those casks in, for they take up a great deal of room.“

„All but that large one, Master William; we shall want that; I shall fix it up in a corner.“

„What for, Ready?“

„To put water in, Master William.“

„But we are closer to the spring than we were at the other house.“

„I know that; but perhaps, we may not be able to go out of the stockade; and then we shall want water.“

„I understand, Ready; how thoughtful you are.“

„If at my age I did not think a little, Master William, it would be very odd. You don't know how anxious I am to see them all inside of this defence, William. I shall not be happy until they are.“

„But why should we not come in, Ready?“

„Why, Sir, as there is still plenty of work, I do not like to press the matter, lest your mamma should be fitgetted, and think there was danger; but, Master William, danger there is; I have a kind of forewarning of it. It weighs on my mind⁴⁸⁵), and I can't shake it off. I wish you would propose that they should come it at once; the standing-bed places⁴⁸⁶) are 385) It weighs on my mind, es geht mir im Kopfe herum.

486) Standing-bed places, Pfostenbettstellen, im Gegensatz von truckle-bed, Rollbett, das am Tage unter das standing-bed geschoben wird.

all ready, except the canvas, and I shall nail on new by to-night."

In consequence of this conversation, William proposed at dinner-time that the next day they should go into the new bouse, as it was so much more handy to work there and live there at the same time. Mr. Seagrave was of the same opinion, but Mrs. Seagrave thought it better that every thing should be tidy first.

"Why, Ma'am," said Ready, the only way to get things tidy is to go yourself, and make them so. Nothing will ever be in its place unless you are there to put it in."

"Well, Ready," said Mrs. Seagrave, since you are against me as well as all the rest, I give up, and if you please we will shift over to-morrow."

"Indeed, Ma'am, I think it will be better; this is the last month of fine weather, and we shall have plenty to do. We shall get on much faster if we go there."

"Be it so, Ready; you are the best judge; to-morrow we will take up our quarters in the stockade."

"Thank God!" muttered old Ready very softly. William only, who was next to him, heard what he said.

The next day was fully employed in changing their residence, and shifting over the bedding and utensils; and that night they slept within the stockade. Ready had run up a very neat little out-house of plank, as a kitchen for Juno, and another week was fully employed as follows: the stores were divided; those of least consequence, and the salt provisions, flour, and the garden produce, &c. were put into the old house; the casks of powder and most of the cartridges were also put there for security; but a cask of beef, of pork, and flour, all the iron-work and nails, canvas, &c., were stowed away for the present under the new house, which had, when built as a storehouse, been raised four feet from the ground to make a shelter for the stock. This was very spacious, and, of course, quite dry, and contained all they wished to put in. Ready also took care, by degrees, to fill the large water-butt full of water, and had fixed into the bottom a spigot for drawing the water off.

„Well, Mr. Seagrave,“ said Ready on the Saturday, „we have done a good many hard weeks' work lately, but this is the last of them. We are now comfortably settled in our new house: our stores are all under cover, and safe from the weather, and so we may now take things a little easier. William and I must go and turn some turtle, if we can, for the season is getting late for them, and I must repair the boat, so that we may take a trip round to examine how the stock and yams get on.“

„And the bananas and the guavas,“ said Tommy.

„Why, we have quite forgotten all about them,“ observed Mrs. Seagrave.

„Yes, Ma'am; we have been so busy, that it is no wonder; however, there may be some left yet, and I will go round as soon as the boat is able to swim, and bring all I can find.“

„We must put our seeds and potatoes in before the rainy season, Ready.“

„It will be better, Sir, if we can find time, as we shall not have much more fine weather now; at all events, we can get them in at intervals when the weather is fine; now I shall go my rounds for turtle. Good-night, Ma'am — good-night, Sir. Come, Master William.“

William and Ready went down to the beach, but meeting Juno coming from the kitchen, Ready desired her to collect as much fuel as she could, and stack it up in a corner inside of the stockade, as it would be more handy.

„Yes, Massa Ready, replied Juno; „I understand; nothing like being all ready case of accident.“

„Exactly so, Juno,“ replied William. „Good-night.“

William and Ready succeeded in turning six more turtles to add to their stock, and having taken a careful survey with the telescope, they came back, fastened the door of the stockade, and went to bed.

CHAPTER LVI.

Another week passed away, during which Ready repaired the boat, and William and Mr. Seagrave were employed in digging up the garden. It was also a very busy week at the house, as they had not washed linen for some time. Mrs. Seagrave and Juno, and even little Caroline, were hard at work, and Master Tommy was more useful than ever he had been, going for the water as they required it, and watching little Albert. Indeed, he was so active, that Mrs. Seagrave praised him before his papa, and Master Tommy was quite proud.

On the Monday, William and Ready set off in the boat to the little harbour, and found all the stock doing well, and promising to increase. Many of the bananas and guavas had ripened and withered, but there were enough left to fill the boat half full. The yams had not been broken in upon by the pigs, and the tents were in good order.

„We cannot do better than to leave the stock where it is at present, Master William; they can run into the cocoa-nut grove for shelter if there is a storm, and there is feed⁴⁸⁷⁾ enough for ten times as many.“

„I think so too.“

„But in a few days we must come round again for the tents; we must not leave them here the whole rainy season. Now, Sir, shall we go back?“

„Yes; at all events, Tommy will be delighted

487) Feed gewöhnlicher food.

with our cargo. But will you not dig up a few yams first?"

„I had quite forgotten it, Master William. I will go for the spade; we left one in the nearest tent.“

Having procured the yams, they set off on their return. Before they arrived at the bay, the sky clouded over, and threatened a storm. It did not, however, rain till after they had landed, when a smart shower announced the commencement of the rainy season. The fruit was very welcome to all of them, it was so long since they had tasted any; but Tommy was ravenous to obtain it; he could not eat it fast enough to please himself, and Mr. Seagrave was compelled to prevent him from eating any more.

The following day was beautifully fine, and every thing appeared refreshed by the rain which had fallen. It was, however, agreed that Ready and William should go round the next morning, bring home the tents, and as many yams as the boat could carry. William and Ready went out at night as usual, when Ready observed that the wind had chopped round to the eastward.

„That will be bad for us to-morrow, Ready,“ replied William. „We may sail to the harbour, but we shall have to pull back with the loaded boat.“

„I trust it will be no worse than that, at all events,“ replied Ready; „but we must now return, and go to bed. I shall be up by daylight, so you need not wake without you like⁴⁸⁸).“

„I can't help waking,“ replied William, „and I shall, therefore, be up with you.“

„Very well, Sir, I am always glad of your company.“

The next morning, just before the day dawned, Ready and William unfastened the door of the stockade, and went down to the beach. The wind was still to the eastward, and blowing rather fresh, and the sky was 488) Without you like flatt without your liking it.

cloudy. As the sun rose, Ready, as usual ⁴⁸⁹), had his telescope with him, and looked through it. As he kept the spy-glass to his eye for some time without speaking, William said —

„Do you see any thing, Ready, that you look so long in that direction?“

„Either my old eyes deceive me, or I fear that I do,“ replied Ready; „but a few minutes more will decide.“

There was a bank of clouds on the horizon to the eastward, but as soon as the sun had risen above them, Ready, who had the telescope fixed in the same direction, said —

„Yes, Master William, I am right. I thought that those dark patches I saw were their brown grass sails.“

„Sails of what, Ready?“ said William hastily.

„Of the Indian canoes, Master William; I knew that they would come. Take the glass, and look yourself, Master William; my eye is quite dim from straining it so long.“

„Yes, I have them now,“ replied William, with his eye to the glass; he at last said —

„Why, there are twenty or thirty of them, Ready, at least.“

„And each with twenty or thirty men in them, too, Master William.“

„Good heaven! What must we do, Ready? How frightened my poor mother will be. I'm afraid we can do nothing against such a number.“

„Yes, William, we can do a great deal, and we must do a great deal. That there are hundreds of savages there is no doubt; but recollect that we have a stockade, which they cannot easily climb over, and plenty of fire-arms and ammunition, so that we can make a good fight of it, and perhaps beat them off, for they have nothing but clubs and spears."

489) As usual, sehr gewöhnlich statt as usually.

"How fast they come down, Ready; why, they will be here in an hour."

"No, Sir, nor in two hours either; those are very large canoes. However, there is no time to be lost. While I watch them for a few minutes till I make them more clearly out, do you run up to the house and beckon your father to come down to me; and then, Master William, get all the muskets ready, and bring the casks of powder, and of made-up cartridges, from the old house into the stockade. Call Juno, and she will help you. We shall have time enough to do every thing. After you have done that, you had better come down and join us."

In a very few minutes after William ran up to the house, Mr. Seagrave made his appearance.

"Ready, there is danger, I'm sure; William would not tell me, I presume, because he was afraid of alarming his mother. What is it?"

"It is, Mr. Seagrave, that the savages are now coming down upon us in large force; perhaps five or six hundred of them, and that we shall have to defend ourselves with all our might and main⁴⁹⁰)."

"Do you think we have any chance against such a force?"

"Yes, Sir, with God's help I have no doubt but that we shall beat them off; but we must fight hard, and for some days, I fear."

Mr. Seagrave examined the fleet of canoes with the glass. "It is, indeed, dreadful odds⁴⁹¹) to contend against."

"Yes, Sir, but three muskets behind a stockade are almost a match for all their clubs and spears, provided none of us are wounded."

490) With all our might and main, mit aller Macht. 491) It is dreadful odds to contend against, es ist ein Wagstück, hier einen Kampf zu wagen.

„Well, Ready, we must put our trust in the Lord, and do our best; I will second you to the utmost of my power, and William, I'm sure, will do his duty. I have, indeed, much to fight for, a wife and family; but you, Ready, have no such ties.“

„No, Sir, but I shall fight for my life and the family too, Sir, for I am attached to you all, and there's an end of the business. I think, Sir, we had better not wait here any more, as we have not long to prepare for them. We have only to fix up some of our strong deal planks on the inside of the stockade for us to stand upon when we are attacked, that we may see what the enemy is about⁴⁹²), and be able to fire upon them. But first we had better go to the old house, and take out what provisions and other articles we shall most want, and roll the casks into the stockade, for to the old house they will go first, and perhaps destroy every thing in it. The casks they certainly will, for the sake of the iron hoops. An hour's work will do a great deal, for the distance is not very great. I believe we have every thing we want in the stockade; Juno has her fuel, the large butt of water will last us two or three weeks at least, and if we have time, we will get the wheels down, and spear a couple of turtles for fresh provisions.“

„We hardly need think of turtle just now, Ready.“

„Why not, Sir, it's as well to have them as to leave them for the savages to eat for us. I will get all up I can, even if we do not eat them; they will live for weeks on their back in the shade.“

This conversation passed as they walked up to the house. As soon as they arrived, they found William and Juno had just brought in the powder and cartridges. Mr. Seagrave went in to break⁴⁹³) the matter to his wife, who, he feared, would be much alarmed.

492) What the enemy is about, was der Feind vor hat.

493) To break the matter to one's wife, sein Weib auf die Nachricht vorbereiten.

„I was told that I had to expect this, my dear,” replied Mrs. Seagrave, „so that it has not come upon me altogether unawares⁴⁹⁴), and any thing that a poor weak woman can do, I will. I feel that I have no want of courage to defend my children.“

„I am indeed greatly relieved,” said Mr. Seagrave, „by finding you thus prepared and supported. I shall feel no anxiety — but we have work to be done.“

„Then I must help, my dear Seagrave; and what I want in strength, I must make up in energy.“

Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave then joined William, Ready, and Juno, who had already proceeded to the old house. The children were all still in bed and asleep, so that there was no occasion for any one to watch them.

CHAPTER LVII.

As they could have a very good view of the canoes from where the old house stood, Ready examined them with his glass every time that he returned from rolling up a cask to the stockade. Every one worked hard; even Mrs. Seagrave did all she could, either assisting in rolling the casks, or carrying up what she was able to lift. In an hour they had got into the stockade all that they most cared for, and the canoes were still about six or seven miles off.

„We have a good hour before they arrive, Sir,” said Ready, „and even then the reefs will puzzle them not a little, I doubt if they are disembarked under two hours. We have plenty of time for all we wish to do. Juno, go for the wheels, and William, come down with the spear, and we will have some of the turtle into the stockade. Mr. Seagrave, I do not require your 494) It came upon me unawares, es überraschte mich.

assistance, so if you will have the kindness to get out the muskets, and examine the flints, it will be as well."

"Yes; and then you have to load them," replied Mrs. Seagrave. "Juno and I can do that at all events, ready for you to fire them."

"An excellent idea, Madam," replied Ready; "and you will really be of service."

In half an hour six turtle were brought up by Juno and William, and then Ready followed them into the stockade. "I don't see the goat, Master William," said Ready; "but as we have no food for her, I think we may as well leave her out; she will run away when she sees such strange creatures as these savages."

They then rolled the casks, and upheaved them by the sides of the stockade, and fixed up deal planks to stand upon, just high enough to enable them to see over the top of the palisades, and to fire at the enemy. Mrs. Seagrave had been shewn how to load a musket, and Juno was now taught the same.

"Now, Sir, we are all prepared," said old Ready, "and Madam and Juno can go and look a little after the children, and get breakfast."

"Breakfast all ready. Kettle boil long time," said Juno.

As soon as the children were dressed, Mr. Seagrave called Ready, who was outside, watching the canoes, and they went to their morning devotions, and prayed heartily for succour in this time of need. They then breakfasted in haste; for, as may be supposed, they were almost too anxious to eat. Mrs. Seagrave pressed her children in her arms, but kept up her spirits wonderfully.

"This suspense is worse than all," said she at last. "I wish now that they were come."

"Shall I go to Ready, and hear his report, my dear? I will not be away three minutes."

In a short time Mr. Seagrave returned, saying that the canoes were close to the beach, that the savages evidently had a knowledge of the passages through the reefs, as they had steered right in, and had lowered their sails; that Ready and William were on the lookout, but concealed behind the cocoa-nut trees.

„I hope they will not stay out too long.“

„No fear of that, my dear Selina; but they had better watch their motions to the last minute.“

During this conversation between Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave within the stockade, William and Ready were watching the motions of the savages, a large portion of whom had landed out of ten of the canoes, and the others were following their example as fast as they could, forcing their way through the reefs. The savages were all painted, with their war-cloaks and feathers on, and armed with spears and clubs, evidently having come with no peaceable intentions. At first they occupied themselves with beaching the canoes, and as they were very large and heavy, this was a work of some few minutes employment for the whole of them.

William, who had taken the telescope to examine them more minutely, said to Ready, „What a fierce, cruel set⁴⁹⁵⁾ of wretches they appear to be; if they overpower us, they will certainly kill us.“

„Of that there is no doubt, Master William; but we must fight hard, and not let them overpower us. Kill us they certainly will, and I am not sure that they may not eat us afterwards, but that is of little consequence.“

William shuddered at the idea, and then replied in a determined tone, „I'll fight as long as I have breath in my body; but, Ready, they are coming up as fast as they can.“

„Yes, Sir; right up to the old house; we must wait no longer. Come, Master William.“

„I thought I saw another vessel under sail, out

495) A set ist hier so viel als a number of persons having a similitude of character.

away by the garden point⁴⁹⁶), Ready, just as we turned away.“

„Very likely, Sir, a canoe which has separated from the others during the night. Come, quick, Master William, they have begun to yell.“

Another half-minute, and they arrived at the door of the stockade: they entered, shut the door, and then barricaded it with the cocoa-nut poles which they had fitted to the inner door-posts.

„That is secure enough,“ observed Ready, „and now we must trust to Heaven and our own exertions.“

CHAPTER LVIII.

The loud yells of the savages struck terror into the heart of Mrs. Seagrave; it was well that she had not seen their painted bodies and fierce appearance, or she would have been much more alarmed. Little Albert and Caroline clung round her neck with terror in their faces; they did not cry, but looked round and round to see from whence the horrid noise proceeded, and then clung faster to their mother. Master Tommy was very busy, finishing all the breakfast which had been left, for there was no one to check him as usual; Juno was busy outside, and was very active and courageous. Mr. Seagrave had been employed making the holes between the palisades large enough to admit the barrels of the muskets, so that they could fire at the savages without being exposed; while William and Ready, with their muskets loaded, were on the look-out for their approach.

„They are busy with the old house just now, Sir,“ observed Ready, „but that won't detain them long.“

496) Out away by, draußen bei.

„Here they come,“ replied William; „and look, Ready, is not that one of the women who escaped from us in the canoe, who is walking along with the first two men? Yes, it is, I am sure.“

„You are right, Master William, it is one of them. Ah! they have stopped; they did not expect the stockade, that is clear, and it has puzzled them; see how they are all crowding together and talking; they are holding a council of war how to proceed; that tall man must be one of their chiefs. Now, Master William, although I intend to fight as hard as I can, yet I always feel a dislike to begin first; I shall therefore shew myself over the palisades, and if they attack me, I shall then fire with a quiet conscience.“

„But take care they don't hit you, Ready.“

„No great fear of that, Master William. Here they come.“

Ready now stood upon the plank within, so as to shew⁴⁹⁷) himself to the savages, who gave a tremendous yell, and as they advanced, a dozen spears⁴⁹⁸) were thrown at him with so true an aim that, had he not instantly dodged behind the stockade, he must have been killed. Three or four spears remained quivering in the palisades, just below the top; the others went over it, and fell down inside of the stockade, at the further end.

„Now, Master William, take good aim;“ but before William could fire, Mr. Seagrave, who had agreed to be stationed at the corner so that he might see if the savages went round to the other side, fired his musket, and the tall chief fell to the ground.

Ready and William also fired, and two more of the savages were seen to drop, amidst the yells of their companions. Juno handed up the other muskets which were ready loaded, and took those discharged, and Mrs. Seagrave, having desired Caroline to take care of her little brother, and Tommy to be very quiet and good, came out, turned the key of the door upon them, and hastened to assist Juno in reloading the muskets.

497) So as to show himself, so daß er sich zeigte. 498) A dozen ohne of, da die Zahl hier eben so unbestimmt zu verstehen ist, als bei a hundred, thousands, &c.

The spears now rushed through the air, and it was well⁴⁹⁹) that they could fire from the stockade without exposing their persons, or they would have had but little chance. The yells increased, and the savages now began to attack on every quarter; the most active, who climbed like cats, actually succeeded in gaining the top of the palisades, but, as soon as their heads appeared above, they were fired at with so true an aim that they dropped down dead outside. This combat lasted for more than an hour, when the savages, having lost a great many men, drew off from the assault, and the parties within the stockade had time to breathe.

„They have not gained much in this bout, at all events,“ said Ready; „it was well fought on our side, and, Master William, you certainly behaved as if you had been brought up to it; I don't think you ever missed your man once.“

„Do you think they will go away now?“ said Mrs. Seagrave.

„Oh, no, Madam, not yet; they will try us every way before they leave us. You see these are very brave men, and it is clear that they know what gunpowder is, or they would have been more astonished.“

„I should think so too,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „the first time that savages hear the report of fire-arms, they are usually thrown into great consternation.“

„Yes, Sir; but such has not been the case with these people, and therefore I reckon it is not the first time that they have fought with Europeans.“

„Are they all gone, Ready?“ said William, who had come down from the plank to his mother.

499) It was well, es war ein Glück.

„No, Sir; I see them between the trees now; they are sitting round in a circle, and, I suppose, making speeches: it's the custom of these people.“

„Well, I'm very thirsty, at all events,“ said William; „Juno, bring me a little water.“

Juno went to the water-tub, to comply with William's request, and in a few moments afterwards came back in great consternation.

„Oh, Massa! oh, Missy! no water; water all gone.“

„Water all gone!“ cried Ready and all of them in a breath.

„Yes; not one little drop in the cask.“

„I filled it up to the top!“ exclaimed Ready very gravely; the tub did not leak, that I am sure of; how can this have happened?“

„Missy, I think I know now,“ said Juno; „you remember you send Massa Tommy, the two or three days we wash, to fetch water from well in little bucket. You know how soon he come back; and how you say what good boy he was, and how you tell Massa Seagrave when he come to dinner. Now, Missy, I quite certain Massa Tommy no take trouble go to well, but fetch water from tub all the while, and so he empty it.“

„I'm afraid you're right, Juno,“ replied Mrs. Seagrave. „What shall we do?“

„I go speak Massa Tommy,“ said Juno, running to the house.

„This is a very awkward thing, Mr. Seagrave,“ observed Ready gravely.

Mr. Seagrave shook his head.

The fact was, that they all perceived the danger of their position: if the savages did not leave the island, they would perish of thirst or have to surrender; and in the latter case, all their lives would most certainly be sacrificed.

Juno now returned: her suspicions were but too true. Tommy, pleased with the praise of being so quick in bringing the water, had taken out the spigot of the cask, and drawn it all off. He was now crying, and promising not to take the water again.

„His promises come too late,“ observed Mr. Seagrave; „well, it is the will of Heaven that all our careful arrangements and preparations against this attack should be defeated by the idleness of a child, and we must submit.“

„Very true, Sir,“ replied Ready; „all our hopes now are, that the savages may be tired out⁵⁰⁰), and leave the island.“

„If I had but a little for the children. I should not care,“ observed Mrs. Seagrave; „but to see those poor things suffer — is there not a drop left, Juno, anywhere?“

Juno shook her head. „All gone, Missy; none nowhere.“

Mrs. Seagrave said she would go and examine, and went away into the house accompanied by Juno.

„This is a very bad business, Ready,“ observed Mr. Seagrave. „What would we give for a shower of rain now, that we might catch the falling drops!“

„There are no signs of it, Sir,“ replied Ready; „we must, however, put our confidence in One who will not forsake us.“

„I wish the savages would come on again,“ observed William; „for the sooner they come, the sooner the affair will be decided.“

„I doubt if they will to-day, Sir; at night-time I think it very probable, and I fear the night attack more than the day. We must make preparations for it.“

„Why, what can we do, Ready?“

„In the first place, Sir, by nailing planks from cocoa-nut tree to cocoa-nut tree above the present stockade, we may make a great portion of it much higher, and more difficult to climb over. Some of them were nearly in, this time. If we do that, we shall not have

500) To be tired out, der Müdigkeit unterliegen.

so large a space to watch over and defend; and then we must contrive to have a large fire ready for lighting, that we may not have to fight altogether in the dark. It will give them some advantage in looking through the palisades, and seeing where we are, but they cannot well drive their spears through, so it is no great matter. We must make the fire in the centre of the stockade, and have plenty of tar in it, to make it burn bright, and we must not, of course, light it until after we are attacked. We shall then see where they are trying for an entrance, and where to aim with our muskets⁵⁰¹).“

„The idea is very good, Ready,“ said Mr. Seagrave; „if it had not been for⁵⁰²) this unfortunate want of water, I really should be sanguine⁵⁰³) of beating them off.“

„We may suffer very much, Mr. Seagrave, I have no doubt; but who knows what the morrow may bring forth?“

„True, Ready. Do you see the savages now?“

„No, Sir; they have left the spot where they were in consultation, and I do not even hear them; I suppose they are busy with their wounded and their dead.“

As Ready had supposed, no further attack was made by the savages on that day, and he, William, and Mr. Seagrave, were very busy making their arrangements; they nailed the planks on the trunks of the trees above the stockade, so as to make three sides of the stockade at least five feet higher, and almost impossible to climb up; and they prepared a large fire in a tar-barrel full of cocoa-nut leaves mixed with wood and tar, so as to burn fiercely. Dinner or supper they had none, for there was nothing but salt pork and beef and live turtle⁵⁰⁴), and, by Ready's advice, 501) Where to aim, würde hier, ohne our, undeutlich sein.

502) If it had not been for, wenn nicht gewesen wäre. 503) I should be sanguine oder confident, so hätte ich Hoffnung oder das Vertrauen zu mir. 504) Live (leiv) lebendig, live (liv) leben.

they did not eat, as it would only increase their desire to drink.

The poor children suffered much; little Albert wailed and cried for „water, water;“ Caroline knew that there was none, and was quiet, poor little girl, although she suffered much; as for Tommy, the author of all this misery, he was the most impatient, and roared for some time till William, quite angry at his behaviour, gave him a smart box on the ear, and he reduced his roar to a whimper, from fear of receiving another. Ready remained on the look-out; indeed, every thing was so miserable inside of the house, that they were all glad to go out of it; they could do no good, and poor Mrs. Seagrave had a difficult and most painful task to keep the children quiet under such severe privation, for the weather was still very warm and sultry.

CHAPTER LIX.

But the moaning of the children was very soon after dusk drowned by the yells of the savages, who, as Ready had prognosticated, now advanced to the night attack.

Every part of the stockade was at once assailed, and their attempts now made were to climb into it; a few spears were occasionally thrown, but it was evident that the object was to obtain an entrance by dint of numbers. It was well that Ready had taken the precaution of nailing the deal planks above the original stockade, or there is little doubt but that the savages would have gained their object; as it was⁵⁰⁵), before the flames of the fire, which Juno had lighted by Ready's order, gave them sufficient light, three or four 505) As it was, und demungeachtet.

savages had climbed up and had been shot by William and Mr. Seagrave, as they were on the top of the stockade.

When the fire burnt brightly, the savages outside were more easily aimed at, and a great many fell in their attempts to get over. The attack continued more than an hour, when at last, satisfied that they could not succeed, the savages once more withdrew, carrying with them as before their dead and wounded.

„I trust that they will now re-embark, and leave the island,“ said Mr. Seagrave to Ready.

„I only wish they may, Sir; it is not all impossible; but there is no saying. I have been thinking, Mr. Seagrave, that we might be able to ascertain their movements by making a look-out. You see, Sir, that cocoa-nut tree,“ continued Ready, pointing to one of those to which the palisades were fastened, „is much taller than any of the others: now, by driving spike-nails into the trunk at about a foot apart, we might ascend it with ease, and it would command a view⁵⁰⁶ of the whole bay; we then could know what the enemy were about.“

„Yes, that is very true; but will not any one be very much exposed if he climbs up?“

„No, Sir, for you see the cocoa-nut trees are but down clear of the palisades to such a distance, that no savage could come at all near without being seen by any one on the look-out, and giving us sufficient time to get down again before he could use his spear.“

„I believe that you are right there, Ready, but at all events I would not attempt to do it before daylight, as there may be some of them still lurking underneath the stockade.“

„Certainly, there may be, Sir, and therefore, until daylight, we will not begin. Fortunately, we have plenty of spike nails left.“

506) It would command a view of the whole bay, es würde uns eine Uebersicht über die ganze Bucht gestatten.

„Mr. Seagrave then went into the house; Ready desired William to lie down, and sleep for two or three hours, as he would watch. In the morning, when Mr. Seagrave came out, he would have a little sleep himself.

„I can't sleep, Ready. I'm mad with thirst," replied William.

„Yes, Sir; it's very painful — I feel it myself very much, but what must those poor children feel? I pity them most."

„I pity my mother most, Ready," replied William; „it must be agony to her to witness their sufferings, and not be able to relieve them."

„Yes, indeed, it must be terrible, Master William, to a mother's feelings; but, perhaps, these savages will be off to-morrow, and then we shall forget all our privations."

„I trust in God that they may, Ready, but they seem very determined."

„Yes, Sir; iron is gold to them, and what will civilized men not do for gold? Come, Master William, lie down at all events, even if you cannot sleep."

In the meantime, Mr. Seagrave had gone into the house. He found the children still crying for water, notwithstanding the coaxing and soothing of Mrs. Seagrave, who was shedding tears as she hung over poor little Albert. Juno, had gone out, and had dug with a spade as deep as she could with a faint hope that some might be found, but in vain, and she had just returned mournful and disconsolate. There was no help for it but patience; and patience could not be expected in children so young. Little Caroline only drooped, and said nothing. Mr. Seagrave remained for two or three hours with his wife, assisting her in pacifying the children, and soothing her to the utmost of his power⁵⁰⁷); at last he went out and found old Ready on the watch.

507) To the utmost of his power, nach aller seiner Macht.

„Ready, I had rather a hundred times be attacked by these savages, and have to defend this place, than be in that house for even five minutes and witness the sufferings of my wife and children.“

„I do not doubt it, Sir,“ replied Ready; „but cheer up, and let us hope for the best; I think it very probable that the savages after this second defeat will leave the island.“

„I wish I could think so, Ready; it would make me very happy; but I have come out to take the watch, Ready. Will you not sleep for a while?“

„I will, Sir, if you please, take a little sleep. Call me in two hours; it will then be daylight, and I can go to work, and you can get some repose yourself.“

„I am too anxious to sleep, I think so, at least.“

„Master William said he was too thirsty to sleep, Sir, but, poor fellow, he is now fast enough.“

„I trust that boy will be spared, Ready.“

„I hope so too; for he is a noble fellow: but we are all in the hands of the Almighty. Good-night, Sir.“

„Good-night, Ready.“

Mr. Seagrave took his station on the plank, and was left to his own reflections; that they were not of the most pleasant kind, may easily be imagined. He had, however, been well schooled by adversity, and had lately brought himself to such a frame of mind, as to bow in submission to the will of Heaven, whatever it might be. He prayed earnestly and fervently that they might be delivered from the danger and sufferings which threatened them, and became calm and tranquil; prepared for the worst, if the worst was to happen⁵⁰⁸), and confidently placing himself and his family under the care of Him who orders all as he thinks best.

At daylight Ready woke up and relieved Mr. Sea-

508) If the worst was to happen, wenn sich das Schlimmste zutragen sollte.

grave, who did not return to the house, but lay down on the cocoa-nut boughs, where Ready had been lying by the side of William. As soon as Ready had got out the spike nails and hammer, he summoned William to his assistance, and they commenced driving them into the cocoa-nut tree, one looking out in case of the savages approaching, while the other was at work. In less than an hour they had gained the top of the tree close to the boughs, and had a very commanding view of the bay, as well as island. William, who was driving the last dozen spikes, took a survey, and then came down to Ready.

„I can see every thing, Ready: they have pulled down the old house altogether, and are most of them lying down outside, covered up with their war-cloaks; some women are walking to and fro from the canoes, which are lying on the beach where they first landed.“

„They have pulled down the house to obtain the iron nails, I have no doubt,“ replied Ready. „Did you see any of their dead?“

„No; I did not look about very much, but I will go up again directly. I came down because my hands were jarred with hammering, and the hammer was so heavy to carry. In a minute or two I shall go up light enough. My lips are burning, Ready, and swelled; the skin is peeling off. I had no idea that want of water would have been so dreadful. I think poor Tommy is more than punished already.“

„A child does not reflect upon consequences, Master William, nor could we possibly foresee that his using up the water could have created such misery. It was an idle trick of his⁵⁰⁹), and whatever may be the consequences, it still can be considered as such and nothing more.“

„I was in hopes of finding a cocoa-nut or two on the tree, but there was not one.“

509) It was an idle trick of his, es war ein müßiger Streich von ihm.

„And if you had found one, it would not have had any milk in it at this season of the year. However, Master William, if the savages do not go away to-day, something must be done. I wish now that you would go up again, and see if they are not stirring.“

William again mounted to the top of the tree, and remained up for some minutes; when he came down, he said, „They are all up now, and swarming like bees. I counted 260 of the men in their war-cloaks and feather head-dresses; the women are passing to and fro from the well with water; there is nobody at the canoes except eight or ten women, who are beating their heads, I think, or doing something of the kind. I could not make it out well, but they seem all doing the same thing.“

„I know what they are about, Master William: they are cutting themselves with knives or other sharp instruments. It is the custom of these people. The dead are all put into the canoes, and these women are lamenting over them; perhaps they are going away, since the dead are in the canoes, but there is no saying.“

CHAPTER LX.

„The second day was passed in keeping a look-out upon the savages, and awaiting a fresh attack. They could perceive from the top of the cocoa-nut tree that the savages held a council of war in the forenoon, sitting round in a large circle, while one got up in the centre, and made a speech, flourishing his club and spear⁵¹⁰) while he spoke. In the afternoon the council broke up, and the savages were observed to be very busy in all directions, cutting down the cocoa-nut trees, and collecting all the brushwood.

510) Spear wird spīhr gesprochen, wie fear, beard, ear, hear und tear (Thräne), wogegen bear, wear, pear, swear, b ā h r ic. gesprochen wird; eben so to tear, zerreißen.

Ready watched them for a long while, and at last came down a little before sunset. „Mr. Seagrave,“ said he, „we shall have, in my opinion, no attack this night, but to-morrow we must expect something very serious, the savages are cutting down the trees, and making large faggots; they do not get on very fast, because their hatchets are made of stone and don't cut very well, but perseverance and numbers will effect every thing, and I dare say that they will work all night till they have obtained as many faggots as they want.“

„But what do you imagine to be their objects, Ready, in cutting down trees, and making the faggots?“

„Either, Sir, to pile them up outside the palisades, so large as to be able to walk up upon them, or else to pile them up to set fire to them and burn us out.“

„Do you think they will succeed?“

„Not without very heavy loss; perhaps we may beat them off, but it will be a hard fight; harder than any we have had yet. We must have the women to load the muskets, so that we may fire as we can. I should not think much of their attempts to burn us, if it were not for the smoke. Cocoa-nut wood, especially with the bark on, as our palisades have, will char a long while, but not burn easily when standing upright; and the fire, when the faggots are kindled, although it will be fierce, will not last long.“

„But suffering as we are now, Ready, for want of water, how can we possibly keep up our strength to meet them in a suffocating smoke and flame; we must drop with sheer exhaustion.“

„We must hope for the best, and do our best, Mr. Seagrave,“ replied Ready; „and recollect that should any thing happen to me during the conflict, that if there is any chance of your being overpowered, you must take advantage of the smoke, to escape into the woods, and find your way to the tents. I have no doubt that you will be able to do that; of course the attack will be to windward, if they use fire, and you must try and escape to leeward; I have shewn William how to force a palisade if necessary. The savages, if they get possession, will not think of looking for you at first, and, perhaps, when they have obtained all that the house contains, not even afterwards."

"Why do you say if any accident happens to you, Ready?" said William.

"Because, Master William, if they place the faggots so as to be able to walk to the top of the palisades, I may be wounded or killed, and so may you."

"Of course," replied William; "but they are not in yet, and they shall have a hard fight for it."

Ready then told Mr. Seagrave that he would keep the watch, and call him at twelve o'clock. During these two days, they had eaten very little; a turtle had been killed, and pieces fried, but eating only added to their thirst⁵¹¹), and even the children refused the meat. The sufferings were now really dreadful, and poor Mrs. Seagrave was almost frantic.

As soon as Mr. Seagrave had gone into the house, Ready called William, and said, "Master William, water we must have. I cannot bear to see the agony of the poor children, and the state of mind which your poor mother is in; and more, without water we never shall be able to beat off the savages to-morrow. We shall literally die of choking in the smoke, if they use fire. Now, William, I intend to take one of the seven-gallon barricos, and go down to the well for water. I may succeed, and I may not, but attempt it I must, and if I fall it cannot be helped."

"Why not let me go, Ready?" replied William.

"For many reasons, William," said Ready; "and the chief one is that I do not think you would succeed 511) Added to their thirst, vermehrte ihren Durst.

so well as I shall. I shall put on the war-cloak and feathers of the savage who fell dead inside of the stockade, and that will be a disguise, but I shall take no arms except his spear, as they would only be in my way, and increase the weight I have to carry. Now observe, you must let me out of the door, and when I am out, in case of accident, put one of the poles across it inside; that will keep the door fast, if they attack it, until you can secure it with the others. Watch my return, and be all ready to let me in. Do you understand me?"

„Yes, perfectly, Ready; but I am now, I must confess, really frightened; if any thing was to happen to you, what a misery it would be.“

„There is no help for it, William. Water must, if possible, be procured, and now is a better time to make the attempt than later, when they may be more on the watch; they have left off their work, and are busy eating⁵¹²); if I meet any one, it will only be a woman.“

Ready went for the barrico, a little cask, which held six or seven gallons of water. He put on the head-dress and war cloak of the savage; and, taking the barrico on his shoulder, and the spear in his hand, the poles which barred the door were softly removed by William, and after ascertaining that no one was concealed beneath the palisades, Ready pressed William's hand, and set off across the cleared space outside of the stockade, and gained the cocoa-nut trees. William, as directed, closed the door, passed one pole through the inner door-posts for security, and remained on the watch. He was in an awful state of suspense, listening to the slightest noise, even the slight rustling by the wind of the cocoa-nut boughs above him made him start; there he continued for some minutes, his gun ready cocked by his side.

512) Gewöhnlich wird busy mit in construirt, besonders wenn ein transitives Verbum folgt.

It is time that he returned, thought William; the distance is not 100 yards, and yet I have heard no noise. At last he thought he heard footsteps coming very softly. Yes, it was so. Ready was returning, and without any accident. William had his hand upon the pole, to slip it on one side, and open the door, when he heard a scuffle and a fall close to the door. He immediately threw down the pole, and opened it just as Ready called him by name. William seized his musket, and sprang out; he found Ready struggling with a savage, who was uppermost, and with his spear at Ready's breast. In a second William levelled⁵¹³⁾ and fired, and the savage fell dead by the side of Ready.

„Take the water in quick, William,“ said Ready in a faint voice. „I will contrive to crawl in if I can.“

William caught up the barrico of water, and took it in; he then hastened to Ready, who was on his knees. Mr. Seagrave, hearing the musket fired, had run out, and finding the stockade door open, followed William, and seeing him endeavouring to support Ready, caught hold of his other arm, and they led him tottering into the stockade; the door was then immediately secured, and they went to his assistance.

„Are you hurt, Ready?“ said William.

„Yes, dear boy, yes; hurt to death, I fear: his spear went through my breast. Water, quick, water!“

„Alas! that we had some,“ said Mr. Seagrave.

„We have, Papa,“ replied William; „but it has cost us dearly.“

„William ran for a pannikin, and taking out the bung, poured some water out of the barrico, and gave it to Ready, who drank it with eagerness.

„Now, William, lay me down on these cocoa-nut boughs⁵¹⁴⁾; go and give some water to the others, and

513) Levelled, siehe die 464ste Note. 514) Bough wird bau gesprochen, ebenso plough.. Vergleiche dagegen though, through, enough, thought.

when you have all drank, then come to me again. Don't tell Mrs. Seagrave that I'm hurt. Do as I beg of you."

"Papa, take the water — do, pray," replied William; "I cannot leave Ready."

"I will, my boy," replied Mr. Seagrave; "but first drink yourself."

William, who was very faint, drank off the panikin of water, which immediately revived him, and then, while Mr. Seagrave hastened with some water to the children and women, occupied himself with old Ready, who breathed heavily, but did not speak.

CHAPTER LXI.

After returning twice for water, to satisfy those in the house, Mr. Seagrave came to the assistance of William, who had been removing Ready's clothes to ascertain the nature and extent of the wound which he had received.

"We had better move him⁵¹⁵⁾ to where the other cocoa-nut boughs lie; he will be more comfortable there," said William.

Ready whispered, "More water." William gave him some more, and then, with the assistance of his father, Ready was removed to a more comfortable place. As soon as they had laid him there, Ready turned on this side, and threw up⁵¹⁶⁾ a quantity of blood⁵¹⁷⁾.

"I am better now," said he in a low voice; "bind up the wound, William; an old man like me has not much blood to spare."

515) We had better move him to, wir thäten besser, ihn wegzuschaffen nach u. 516) To throw up, auswerfen. 517) Blood wird wie blud gesprochen, ebenso flood; vergl. dagegen door, floor, moor, poor &c.

Mr. Seagrave and William then opened his shirt, and examined the wound; the spear had gone deep into the lungs. William threw off his own shirt, tore it up into strips, and then bound up the wound so as to stop the effusion of blood.

Ready, who at first appeared much exhausted with being moved about, gradually recovered so as to be able to speak in a low voice, when Mrs. Seagrave came out of the house.

„Where is that brave, kind man?“ cried she, „that I may bless him.“

Mr. Seagrave went to her, and caught her by the arm.

„He is hurt, my dear; I am afraid very much hurt. I did not tell you at the time.“

Mr. Seagrave first briefly related what had occurred, and then led her to where old Ready was lying. Mrs. Seagrave knelt by his side, took his hand, and burst into tears.

„Don't weep for me, dear Madam, said Ready; „my days have been numbered; I'm only sorry that I cannot any more be useful to you.“

„Dear, good old man,“ said Mrs. Seagrave, after a pause, „whatever may be our fates, and that is for the Almighty to decide for us, as long as I have life, what you have done for me and mine shall never be forgotten.“

Mrs. Seagrave then bent over him, and, kissing his forehead⁵¹⁸), rose from her knees, and retired weeping into the house.

„William,“ said Ready, „I can't talk now; raise my head a little, and then leave me; I shall be better if I'm quiet. You have not looked round lately. Come again in about half an hour. Leave me now, Mr. Seagrave; I shall be better if I doze a little.“

William and Mr. Seagrave complied with Ready's request; they went up to the planks, and examined all 518) Forehead, wie forhed gesprochen.

round the stockade, cautiously and carefully; at last they stopped.

„This is a sad business, William,” said Mr. Seagrave.

William shook his head. „He would not let me go,” replied he; „I wish he had. I fear that he is much hurt; do you so, Papa?”

„I should say that he cannot recover, William. We shall miss him to-morrow if they attack us; I fear much for the result.”

„I hardly know what to say, Papa; but this I feel, that since we have been relieved, I am able to do twice as much as I could have done before.”

„I feel the same, my dear boy, but still with such a force against us, two people cannot do much.”

„If my mother and Juno load the muskets for us,” replied William, „we shall at all events do as much now, as we should have been able to do if there were three, so exhausted as we should have been.”

„Perhaps so, my dear William; at all events we will do our best, for we fight for our lives and the lives of those most dear to us.”

William went softly up to Ready, and found that the old man was dozing, if not asleep; he did not therefore disturb him, but returned to his father; they carried the barrico of water into the house, and put it in Mrs. Seagraves's charge, that it might not be wasted; and now that their thirst had been appeased, they all felt the calls of hunger. Juno and William went and cut off steaks from the turtle, and fried them; they all made a hearty meal, and perhaps never had they taken one with so much relish in their lives⁵¹⁹).

It was nearly daylight, when William, who had several times been softly up to Ready to ascertain whether he slept or not, found him with his eyes open.

519) In their lives — and poor Ready dying?

„How do you find yourself, Ready?“ said William.

„I am quiet and easy, William, and without much pain; but I think I am sinking, and shall not last long. Recollect that if you are obliged to escape from the stockade, William, you take no heed of me, but leave me where I am. I cannot live, and were you to move me, I should only die the sooner.“

„I had rather die with you, than leave you, Ready.“

„No, Sir, that is wrong and foolish; you must save your mother, and your brothers and sister; promise me that you will do as I wish.“

William hesitated.

„I point out to you your duty, Master William. I know what your feelings are, but you must not give way to them⁵²⁰); promise me this, or you will make me very miserable.“

William squeezed Ready's hand; his heart was too full to speak.

„They will come at daylight, William — I think so at least; you have not much time to spare; climb to the look-out, and wait there till day dawns; watch them as long as you can in safety, and then come down, to tell me what you have seen.“

Ready's voice became faint after this exertion of speaking so much.

He motioned to William, who immediately climbed up the cocoa-nut tree, and waited there till daylight.

At the dawn of day, he perceived that the savages were at work, that they had collected all the faggots together opposite to where the old house had stood, and were very busy in making arrangements for the attack. At last, he perceived that they every one shouldered a faggot, and commenced their advance towards the stockade; William immediately descended 520) You must not give way to them, ihr müßt ihnen nicht Raum geben.

from the tree, and called his father, who was talking with Mrs. Seagrave. The muskets were all loaded, and Mrs. Seagrave and Juno took their posts below the planking, to reload them as fast as they were fired.

„We must fire upon them as soon as we are sure of not missing them, William,“ said Mr. Seagrave, „for the more we check their advance, the better.“

When the first savages were within fifty yards they both fired, and two of the men dropped; and they continued to fire as their assailants came up, with great success for the first ten minutes; after which the savages advanced in a larger body, and took the precaution to hold the faggots in front of them, for some protection as they approached. By these means they gained the stockade in safety, and commenced laying their faggots. Mr. Seagrave and William still kept up an incessant fire upon them, but not with so much success as before.

Although many fell, the faggots were gradually heaped up, till they almost reached to the holes between the palisades, through which they pointed their muskets; and as the savages contrived to slope them down from the stockade to the ground, it was evident that they meant to mount up, and take them by escalade⁵²¹). At last, it appeared as if all the faggots had been placed, and the savages retired farther back, to where the cocoa-nut trees were still standing.

„They have gone away, Father,“ said William; „but they will come again, and I fear it is all over with us.“

„I fear so too, my noble boy,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „they are only retreating, to arrange for a general assault, and they now will be able to gain an entrance. I almost wish that they had fired the faggots; we might have escaped as Ready pointed out to us, but now I fear we have no chance.“

„Don't say a word to my mother,“ said William,

521) Escalade, nur ein militärischer Ausdruck für scaling.

„let us defend ourselves to the last, and if we are overpowered it is the will of God.“

„I should like to take a farewell embrace of your dear mother,“ said Mr. Seagrave; „but, no; it will be weakness just now. I had better not. Here they come, William, in a swarm. Well, God bless you, my boy; we shall all, I trust, meet in Heaven.“

The whole body of savages were now advancing from the cocoa-nut wood in a solid mass; they raised a yell, which struck terror into the hearts of Mrs. Seagrave and Juno, yet they flinched not. The savages were again within fifty yards of them, when the fire was opened upon them; the fire was answered by loud yells, and the savages had already reached to the bottom of the sloping pile of faggots, when the yells and the reports of the muskets were drowned by a much louder report, followed by the crackling and breaking of the cocoa-nut trees, which made both parties start with surprise; another and another followed, the ground was ploughed up, and the savages fell in numbers.

„It must be the cannon of a ship, Father,“ said William; „we are saved — we are saved!“

„It can be nothing else; we are saved, and by a miracle,“ replied Mr. Seagrave in utter astonishment.

The savages paused in the advance, quite stupefied; again, again, again, the report of the loud guns boomed through the air, and the round shot and grape came whizzing and tearing through the cocoa-nut grove; at this last broadside, the savages turned, and fled towards their canoes: not one was left to be seen.

„We are saved!“ cried Mr. Seagrave, leaping off the plank and embracing his wife, who sank down on her knees; and held up her clasped hands in thankfulness to Heaven.

William had hastened up to the look-out on the cocoa-nut tree, and now cried out to them below, as the guns were again discharged —

„A large schooner, Father; she is firing at the savages, who are at the canoes; they are falling in every direction: some have plunged into the water; there is a boat full of armed men coming on shore; they are close to the beach, by the garden point. Three of the canoes have got off full of men; there go the guns again; two of the canoes are sunk, Father; the boat has landed, and the people are coming up this way." William then descended from the look-out as fast as he could.

As soon as he was down, he commenced unbar-ring the door of the stockade. He pulled out the last pole just as he heard the feet of their deliver-ers outside. He threw open the door, and, a se-cond after, found himself in the arms of Captain Osborn.

CHAPTER LXII.

Before we wind up this history, it will be as well to state to my young readers how it was that Captain Osborn made his appearance at so fortunate a moment. It will be recollected how a brig came off the island some months before this, and the great disappointment that the party on the island experienced in her not making her appearance again, especially as they had seen the flags which they had hoisted.

The fact was, that those on board of the brig had not only seen their signals, but had read the name of the „Pacific“ upon the flag hoisted; but the heavy gale which came on, drove them so far to the southward, that the master of the brig did not consider that he should do his duty to his owners, if he lost so much time in beating up for the island again; the cargo which he had on board was one which would lose in value if it were not one of the first in the market. He there-fore decided upon making all sail for Sydney, to which port he was bound.

When Captain Osborn was put into the boat by Mackintosh and the seamen of the „Pacific,“ he was still insensible; but he gradually recovered, and after a stormy night, during which the men had the greatest difficulty in keeping the boat afloat, Captain Osborn was so far recovered as to hear from Mackintosh what had taken place, and why it was that he found himself in an open boat at sea. The next morning the wind moderated, and they were fortunate enough to fall in with a vessel bound to Van Diemen's Land, which took them all on board.

From the account given by Mackintosh, Captain Osborn had no doubt in his mind but that the Seagrave family had perished, and the loss of the vessel, with them on board, was duly reported to the owners. When at Van Diemen's Land, Captain Osborn was so much taken with⁵²²⁾ the beauty and fertility of the country, and perhaps not so well inclined to go to sea again after such danger as he had incurred in the last voyage, that he resolved to purchase land and settle there. He did so, and had already stocked his farm with cattle, and had gone round to Sydney in a schooner to await the arrival of a large order from England which he had sent for, when the brig arrived and reported the existence of some white people on the small island, and also that they had hoisted a flag with the name „Pacific“ worked on it.

Captain Osborn hearing this, went to the master of the brig, and questioned him. He found the latitude and longitude of the island to be not far from that of the ship when she was deserted, and he was now convinced that, by some miracle, the Seagrave family had been preserved. He therefore went to the Governor of New South Wales, and made him acquainted with the facts which had been established, and the Governor instantly replied, that the government armed schooner⁵²³⁾ was at his service, if he would himself go in quest of his former shipmates. Inconvenient as the absence at that time was to Captain Osborn, he at once acquiesced, and in a few days the schooner sailed for her destination. She arrived off the island on the same morning that the fleet of canoes with the savages effected their landing, and, when William made the remark to Ready as they were hastening into the stockade, that there was another vessel under sail off the garden-point, had Ready had time to put his eye to the telescope, he would have discovered that it was the schooner, and not, as he supposed, a canoe which had separated from the others during the night.

522) To be taken with a thing, von einer Sache eingenommen sein. 523) Hier ist government adjectivisch gebraucht.

The schooner stood in to the reefs, and then hauled off again, that she might send her boat in, to sound for an anchorage. The boat, when sounding, perceived the canoes and the savages, and afterwards heard the report of firearms on the first attack. On her return on board the schooner, they stated what they had seen and heard, and their idea that the white people on the island were being attacked by the savages. As the boat did not return on board till near dusk, they had not time to canvass the question⁵²⁴⁾ when the night attack was made, and they again heard the firing of the muskets. This made Captain Osborn most anxious to land as soon as possible, but as the savages were in such numbers, and the crew of the schooner did not consist of more than twenty-five men, the commander considered it was rash to make the attempt. He did, however, shew the utmost anxiety to bring his schooner to an anchor, so as to protect his men, and then agreed that they should land.

The boat had reported deep water⁵²⁵⁾ and good anchorage close to the garden-point, and every preparation was made for running at daylight on the following morning; but, unfortunately, it fell calm for the best part of the day, and it was not until the morning after, just as the savages were making their last attack upon the stockade, that she could get in. As soon as she did, she opened the fire of her carronades, and the result is already known; the savages fled in all directions, the boat was then manned, and Captain Osborn led the party who landed; and came so opportunely to their relief.

524) To canvass a question, eine Frage erörtern. 525) The boat had reported deep water, das Boot hatte berichtet, daß das Wasser zum Einlaufen tief genug sei.

My readers must, if they can, imagine the joy of Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave when they beheld their old friend Captain Osborn. All danger was now over; the party who had landed with him went out under the command of the mate, to ascertain if there were any more of the savages to be found; but, except the dead and dying, all had escaped in some of the smaller canoes. Captain Osborn remained with the Seagraves, and in a few words told his own history, and they then informed him of the state of poor old Ready, whom William had gone to attend as soon as Captain Osborn was engaged with his father and mother. Captain Osborn hurried out to see him; Ready knew him immediately, that is, he knew his voice, for the old man's eyes were already so dim, that he could not see.

„That is Captain Osborn, I know;“ said Ready, in a faint voice. „You have come in good time, Sir; I knew you would come, and I always said so: you have the thanks of a dying man.“

„I hope it is not so bad as that, Ready; we have a surgeon on board, and I will send for him at once.“

„No surgeon can help me, Sir,“ replied Ready: „another hour of time will not pass before I shall be in Eternity. I thank God for the preservation of the family, but, Captain Osborn, my time is come.“

The old man then joined his hands across his breast, and remained for some time in silent prayer.

„We had better leave,“ said Captain Osborn; „he wishes not to be interrupted. I will send for the surgeon, at all events, although I feel it is useless; the hand of death is already on him."

Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave walked away with Captain Osborn, all of them much affected with the scene. William still remained by Ready's side to give him water when he asked for it. A few minutes afterwards, Ready opened his eyes.

"Are you there, William? I can't see you. Listen to me, my dear boy. Let me be buried under the trees on the mound above the well. I wish to lie there. Poor little Tommy; don't let him know that he was the cause of my death. Bring him here now, and Juno and Caroline, to say good-by, William."

William, with the tears rolling down his cheeks, hastened into the house, and communicated Ready's wish to his father and mother. They all went out in a body, to take a last farewell; Ready called them all by name, one after another. They knelt down as he called them, and kissed him. He bade them farewell in a faint voice, which at last was changed to a mere whisper. They still remained, in silence and in tears, standing round him, William only kneeling and holding his hand, when the old man's head fell back, and he was no more!

"It is all over," said Mr. Seagrave mournfully, "and he has, I have no doubt, gone to receive the reward of a good and just man. Happy are those who die in the Lord."

Mr. Seagrave then led away his wife and children, leaving Juno and William. Poor Juno cried as if her heart would break, as soon as her master and mistress were gone, and she could give vent to her feelings. William tried to console her.

"Oh! Massa William, me often think, and me really think now, he sent by Heaven to save us all. He just live long enough to do all he could do, and now he gone to Heaven again."

"I trust he has, Juno; I hope I may live as well, and die as well as he has done."

William closed up the eyes, and Juno went and fetched the ship's ensign, which they laid over the body, after which they joined the rest of the party in the house.

During the time that William had remained with old Ready, the commander of the schooner had landed with another party of men, whom he dispatched to scour the island in pursuit of any savages who might remain; but they could find none. Captain Osborn introduced him to Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave, and arrangements were commenced for the embarkation. It was decided that the following day should be passed in packing up and getting on board their luggage, and that the day after the family should embark. William then mentioned the wish of poor old Ready, as to his burial. The commander immediately gave directions for a coffin to be made, and for his men to dig the grave at the spot that William should point out. It was also arranged that Juno should go round with the boat the next morning at daylight, to point out the little harbour, that they might take on board the Merino sheep, which were of value; all the other animals, with the exception of the dogs, were to be left on the island, for the benefit of those who might at any future time, meet with a disaster similar to that of the crew and passengers of the „Pacific.“

The boats were on shore early the next morning, and the luggage was taken on board; but Mr. Seagrave would not take any thing which could prove useful to any people who might be wrecked on the island; the furniture, tools, ironwork, nails, beef and pork, and flour, were all put into the house and locked up; the luggage therefore carried away was not very great, and was soon on board.

CHAPTER LXIII.

The hurry and bustle of preparing for their departure from the island, and the rapid succession of events which had been crowded together within so very few days, had not allowed time for much thought or reflection to Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave and William; at length, however, every preparation had been made, and they were no longer urged by the commander of the schooner to hasten their packing up and arrangements; for every thing had been sent on board during the afternoon, and it was proposed that they should sail on the following day.

Now they had time to feel, and bitterly did they lament the loss of their old friend, and deplore that he had not survived to sail with them to Sydney. They had always indulged the hope that one day they should be taken off the island, and in that hope they had ever looked forward to old Ready becoming a part of their future household. Now that their wishes had been granted, — now that their fond longings were about to be realized, — so much was the feeling of joy and gratitude mingled with regret, — so great was their grief at the loss of their preserver, — that could he have been restored to them, they felt as if they would have gladly remained on the island.

Captain Osborn, the commander, and the crew of the schooner had taken leave of them for the night, and had gone on board, having made arrangements for the interment of Ready, previous to their sailing, on the following day. The children had been put to bed, and Juno had quitted the house; Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave and William were sitting together in their now half-dismantled room, when Juno entered; the poor girl had evidently been weeping.

„Well, Juno,“ observed Mr. Seagrave, with a view to break the silence which had continued for some time previous to her entrance, „are you not glad to leave the island?“

„One time I think would be very glad, but now I not care much,“ replied Juno. „Island very nice place, all very happy till savage come. Suppose they not kill old Ready, I not care.“

„Yes, indeed,“ said Mrs. Seagrave, it is a sad blow to us all; I did hope to have fostered the good old man, and to have been able to have shewn him our gratitude, but — —“

„It is the will of Heaven that it should be otherwise,“ continued Mr. Seagrave; „I would give half that I am possessed of, that he had not perished.“

„Oh, Massa!“ said Juno, „I sit by him just now; I take off the flag and look at his face, so calm, look so happy, so good, I almost tink he smile at me, and then I cry. Oh! Massa Tommy, all because you idle boy.“

„It adds much to my regret,“ replied Mr. Seagrave, „that his life should have been sacrificed through the thoughtlessness of one of my own children; what a lesson it will be to Tommy when he is old enough to comprehend fully the consequences of his conduct.“

„That he must not know, Papa,“ said William, who had been leaning mournfully over the table; „one of Ready’s last injunctions was that Tommy was never to be told of it. He made me promise.“

„His last wishes shall be religiously attended to, my dear boy,“ replied Mr. Seagrave; „for what do we not owe to that good old man? When others deserted us and left us to perish, he remained with us to share our fate, with every prospect that the ocean would bury us. By his skill we were saved and landed in safety. He provided for our wants, added to our comforts, instructed us how to make the best use of our means, was our adviser, and, I may say, our protector. What should we have done without him? Without his precautions, we should have perished by the spears of the savages. It was his self-devotion which procured the water which saved our lives, and it was in this act that he sacrificed his own. What an example of Christian fortitude and humility did he ever shew us; and indeed, I may truly say, that by his example, sinful as I must ever be, I have become, I trust, a better man. Would that he were now sitting by us, — but the Lord's will be done.“

„I feel as if I had lost a stay or prop, my dear husband,“ replied Mrs. Seagrave. „So accustomed have I been to look to him for advice since we have been on this island. I feel now constantly that there is something wanting, and then I recollect that it is he who is away from me. Had he not been thus snatched from us — had he been spared to us a few years, and had we been permitted to have surrounded his death-bed, and have closed his eyes in peace —“ and Mrs. Seagrave wept upon the shoulder of her husband.

After a time, Mrs. Seagrave recovered herself; but silence ensued, only broken by an occasional sob from poor Juno. William's heart was too full; he could not for a long while utter a word; at last he said in a low voice —

„I feel that, next to my dear father and mother, I have lost my best friend. I cannot forgive myself for allowing him to go for the water; it was my duty to go, and I ought to have gone.“

„And yet we could have ill spared you, my dear boy; you might have perished,“ replied Mrs. Seagrave.

„It would have been as God willed⁵²⁶), my dear mother,“ replied William; „I might have perished, or I might not.“

„We never know what the morrow may bring forth,“ said Mr. Seagrave, „or what may be in store 526) Will ist nicht bloß ein unregelmäßiges Hülfzeitwort; es ist regelmäßig in der Bedeutung v. fügen, anordnen; z. B. God wills whatever comes to pass. — Auch vermachen: he willed all his estate to the Church.

for us. Had not this misfortune happened, had old Ready been spared to us, how joyfully should I and all of you have quitted this island, full of anticipation, and indulging in worldly prospects. What a change has been brought over me by his melancholy death! What a check have I received! I now am all thought and anxiety. I have said to myself, we have been happy on this island; our wants have been supplied; even our comforts have been great. We have been under no temptations, for we have been isolated from the world: am I so sure that I shall be as happy in future as I have been? Am I confident, now my long-wished-for return to the world is about to take place, that I shall have no cause to lament that I ever quitted this peaceful, quiet spot? I feel, my dear wife, that it is a duty to my family that I should return to society, but I am far from feeling that our happiness may be increased. We have, however, a plain precept to follow, which is, to do our duty in that state of life to which it has pleased God to call us."

"Yes, my dear husband," replied Mrs. Seagrave; "I feel the truth of all you have just said. We are in His hands, and let us put our trust in Him."

"We will, dearest," replied Mr. Seagrave; "but it is late, and we have to rise early to morrow morning. This is the last evening which we shall pass on this island; let us return our thanks for the happiness we have enjoyed here; let us confide in Him for our future welfare, and let us bow in humility to the chastening with which He has thought proper to visit us. We thought to have quitted this spot in joy, — it is His will that we should leave it in sorrow."

Mr. Seagrave took down the Bible, and after he had read a chapter, he poured forth a prayer suited to their feelings, and they all retired to repose.

The next morning they were up early, and packed up the few articles which still remained to go on board. Mr. Seagrave read the prayers, and they went to breakfast. Few words were exchanged, for there was a solemn grief upon all of them. They waited for the arrival of Captain Osborn and the crew of the schooner to attend the funeral of poor old Ready. William, who had gone out occasionally to look at the vessel, now came in, and said that two boats were pulling on shore. A few minutes afterwards Captain Osborn and the commander of the schooner made their appearance, and, after a short conversation, they went out to give directions. The coffin had been brought on shore; the body of Ready was put into it, and it was screwed down. William attended the process, and the tears fell fast down his cheeks as the lid was put over, and he saw the last of his old friend.

In half an hour all was prepared, and the family were summoned from the house. It was arranged that William, Mr. Seagrave, Captain Osborn, and Juno (at her own request) should be the pall-bearers⁵²⁷).

The coffin, covered with the Union Jack⁵²⁸) as a pall, was raised on the shoulders of six of the seamen, and they bore it to the grave, followed by Mrs. Seagrave and the children, the commander of the schooner, and several of the men. Mr. Seagrave read the funeral service, which was occasionally interrupted by the sobbing of Juno, the grave was filled up, and they all walked back in silence. At the request of William, the commander of the schooner had ordered the carpenter to prepare an oak paling to put round the grave, and a board on which was written the name of the deceased and day of his death. As soon as this had been fixed up, William, with a deep sigh, followed the commander of the schooner to the house, to announce that all was finished, and that the boat waited for them to embark.

„Come, my dear,“ said Mr. Seagrave to his wife.

„I will, I will,“ replied Mrs. Seagrave, „but I

527) Pall-bearer, Leichentuch-Träger. 528) The Union-Jack, die englische national Matrosenjackette. So auch Union flag, &c.

don't know how it is, now that the hour is come, I really feel such pain at quitting this dear island. Had it not been for Ready's death, I really do think I should wish to remain."

"I don't doubt but that you feel sorrow, my dear, but we must not keep Captain Osborn waiting."

"I should like to have time to visit once more all our little property; the garden, the fish-pond, the turtle-pond; I should like to wish good-by even to the animals, Seagrave; it may be a weakness, but I cannot help it."

"Do we leave Nanny, Mamma," said Caroline, "and all the chickens?"

"Yes, my dear; we leave all the goats and fowls for other people, if they come to the island."

"Do we leave all the turtle in the pond?" said Tommy: "turtle makes good soup. I like turtle."

"That's well thought of," said Captain Osborn; we will take the turtle on board. It will not be losing much time."

"Oh no," replied the commander of the schooner; "go down then, my men, push one of the boats round, and get the turtle on board."

While this little delay took place, Mrs. Seagrave walked to Ready's grave, to see the paling and board which William had told her had been put up. She would have lingered still, hanging on her husband's arm, but Captain Osborn again came to tell her that the boat waited for them.

As Mr. Seagrave was aware that the commander of the schooner was anxious to get clear of the islands before night, he now led his wife down to the boat. They all embarked, and were soon on the deck of the schooner, from whence they continued to fix their eyes upon the island, while the men were heaving up the anchor. At last sail was made upon the vessel; the garden-point was cleared, and as they ran away with a fair wind, each object on the shore became more indistinct. Still their eyes were turned in that direction. Juno and William stood abaft; William had the spy-glass, and was looking through it very steadily as the vessel ran on, when Captain Osborn inquired what he was looking at. „I am taking my last farewell of Ready's grave," replied William.

„He really a good man," said Juno in a low voice.

As they ran down to the westward, they passed the cove where they had first landed, and Mr. Seagrave directed Mrs. Seagrave's attention to it. Mrs. Seagrave remained for some time looking at it in silence, and then said as she turned away —

„We shall never be more happy than we were on that island, Seagrave."

„It will indeed be well, my dear, if we never are less happy," replied her husband.

The schooner now ran fast through the water, and the island was every minute less distinct; after a time, the land was below the horizon, and the tops of the cocoa-nut trees only to be seen; these gradually disappeared. Juno watched on, and when at last nothing could be seen, she waved her handkerchief in the direction of the island, as if to bid it farewell, and then went down below, to hide her grief.

The wind continued fair, and, after a favourable passage of little more than four weeks, they arrived at Sydney Cove, the port to which they were bound when they embarked from England on board of the good ship „Pacific."

P. S. — As my young readers will probably wish to know a little more about the Seagrave family, I will inform them that Mr. Seagrave, like the patriarch Job after his tribulation, found his flocks and herds greatly increased on his arrival at Sydney. The agent whom he had left in charge of his property had been diligent and honest, and although it was fully believed that the whole of the family had perished, and that the estates would go to distant heirs, still the delay of law proceedings and the many months which it required to communicate with England, added to the want of positive knowledge of their loss, had not yet permitted the estates to pass away, and they were still in the hands of the executors. Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave lived to see all their children grown up. William inherited the greater part of the property from his father, after having for many years assisted him in the management of it. He married, and had a numerous family. Tommy, notwithstanding all his scrapes, grew up a very fine fellow, and entered the army. He is now a major, and is said to retain his juvenile tastes so far, that, among his many arduous duties, he is still a very sedulous and efficient officer at the Mess Table. Caroline married a young clergy-man, and made him an excellent wife; little Albert went into the navy, and is at present a commander.

Mr. and Mrs. Seagrave are both dead, but poor Juno is still alive, and lives at Seagrave plantation with William, and her greatest pleasure is to take his children on her knee, and tell them long stories about the island, and make them cry when she goes through the history of old Ready's death and burial.

And now, my dear children, having given you all the informations that I possess, I have only to add that I hope you like what I have written for you, and bid you heartily farewell.

W ö r t e r b u c h.

A.

Abaft, adv., hinten am Schiffe.
 Ability, s., Fähigkeit.
 Abode, s., Wohnort, Aufenthalt.
 Abreast, adv., gegenüber.
 Abuse, s., Mißbrauch, Schimpf-rede.
 Ache, s., Schmerz; v. n. schmerzen.
 Acknowledge, v. a., erkennen, anerkennen.
 Acquiesce, v. n., genehmigen.
 Acute, adj., spitzig, heftig.
 Adhere, v. a., anleben, an-hängen.
 Admonish, v. a., ermahnen.
 Afloat, adv., flott.
 Agony, s., Todeskampf, Pein.
 Ahead, adv., vorn.
 Aim, s., Ziel; v. n. & a. zielen.
 Albatross, s., Sturmvogel.
 Allot, v. a., zutheilen.
 Amend, v. a., bessern; v. n.
 besser werden.
 Ankle, s., Knöchel.
 Annihilation, s., Vernichtung.
 Anoint, v. a., salben.
 Anon, adv., zuweilen.

Annoyance, s., Beschwerde, Ber-druß.
 Answer, v. a., & n., antworten,
 entsprechen.
 Ant, s., Ameise.
 Antic, s., Antife, Pöffen.
 Anxious, adj., ängstlich.
 Aperture, s., Oeffnung.
 Appal, v. a., erschrecken.
 Appease, v. a., beruhigen, stillen.
 Appointment, s., Bestellung.
 Apprehension, s., Besorgniß.
 Apprentice, s., Lehrling.
 Appropriate, adj., eigen, angemessen.
 Approve, v. a. (of), billigen,
 loben.
 Arduous, adj., steil, mühsam.
 Array, v. a., anordnen, ankleiden.
 Arrow, s., Pfeil.
 Ascertain, v. n., sich fest über-zeugen (von).
 Ascribe, v. a., zuschreiben.
 Assent, v. n., beipflichten.
 Assertion, s., Behauptung.
 Astern, adv., hinter dem Schiffe.
 Astray, adv., irre, vom rechten Wege ab.
 Attend, (to) v. n., aufwarten, bedienen, besuchen.

Avidity, s., Begierde.
 Awful, adj., Ehrfurcht erweckend.
 Axle, s., Achse.

B.

Baby, s., Säugling.
 Baboon, s., Bavian.
 Bachelor, s., Junggeselle.
 Back, s., Rücken; adv. zurück;
 v. n. sich nach hinten zurückziehen.
 Bait, s., Köder; v. a. mit Köder versehen.
 Bank, s., Damm; — up, sich auf-dammen.
 Bar, s., Stange.
 Bark, v. n., bellen — s. Rinde.
 Barn, s., Scheune.
 Barracks, s. pl., Caserne.
 Barrico, s., Fäßchen.
 Basin, s., Becken, Teich.
 Bask, v. n., sich sonnen.
 Baulk, v. n., Furchen ziehen;
 widerstreiten.
 Bay, v. n., bellen, blöfen.
 Beach, s., Strand.
 Bean, s., Bohne.
 Beckon, v. n., winken; v. a.
 locken.
 Bedding, s., Bettzeug.
 Bedsteads, s., Bettstelle.
 Beef, s., Rindfleisch.
 Beetle, s., Käfer.
 Bellow, v. n., brüllen.
 Bend, v. a., biegen; v. n. sich biegen, sich neigen.
 Bequeath, v. a., vermachen.
 Berry, s., Beere.
 Berth, s., Platz; Schlafstelle.
 Betimes, adv., bei Zeiten.
 Bias, s., Neigung, Trieb, schiefe Richtung.
 Bill, s., Schnabel.
 Binacle, v. Kompaßhäuschen.
 Biscuit, s., Zwieback.
 Bite, v. a., beißen — v. n. anbeißen.

Blade, s., Blättchen, Salm.
 Blanket, s., Decke.
 Blast, s., Windstoß.
 Blaze, s., Lichtschein.
 Bleat, v. n., blöfen.
 Bless, v. a., segnen.
 Blossom, s., Blüthe.
 Blubber, v. n., heulen.
 Blustering, adj., lärmend, ge-räuschvoll.
 Boatswain, s., Bootsmann.
 Board, s., Bret, Bohle, Bord.
 Boast, v. n. & a., großthun, prahlen.
 Boil, v. a. & n., kochen, wellen.
 Bold, adj., kühn, frech.
 Bolt, s., Bolzen; Rollen (von Leinen).
 Bondage, s., Knechtschaft.
 Bonetta, s., ein Seeraubfisch.
 Bonnet, s., Hut, Haube.
 Boom, v. n., fortbrausen; s.
 Stange, Segelstange.
 Boor, s., Bauer.
 Bore, v. a., bohren.
 Bottom, s., Grund, Boden.
 Bough, s., Ast, Zweig.
 Bound, v. n., springen; v. a. begrenzen.
 Bountiful, adj., freigebig, wohl-thätig.
 Bout, s., Schlag, Ansaß, Angriff.
 Bow, s., Bogen; Bug (eines Schiffes).
 Bowels, s. pl., Eingeweide.
 Box, s., Kasten; Schlag.
 Bracing, a., stärkend.
 Brackish, adj., salzig.
 Brain, s., Gehirn.
 Brakish, adj., dornig, stachelich.
 Brass, s., Erz, Messing.
 Breaker, s., Klippe.
 Breath, s., Athem.
 Breed, v., a. & n. irr., zeugen.
 Breeze, s., Bries, Lüftchen.
 Brew, v., a. brauen; v. n. — up, sich zusammenbrauen, sich zusammenziehen.

Brick, s., Ziegelstein.

Brim, s., Rand.

Brink, s., Rand.

Broach, v. a., anbrechen, äußern.

Broad, adj., breit, hell, offen.

Brow, s., Stirne.

Browse, v. n., weiden.

Bruise, v. a., schlagen, stoßen, beschädigen.

Brush-wood, s., Reißholz, Ge-sträuch.

Bucket, s., Eimer.

Buffet, v. a., schlagen.

Build, v. a., bauen.

Bulge, v. n., lech sein.

Bung, s., Spund.

Burial, s., Begräbniß.

Burthen, s., Ladung, Last.

Bustle, s., Geräusch, Auflauf.

Busy, adj., geschäftig.

Butt, s., Butte, Kolben; v. a. stoßen.

C.

Cable, s., Tau, Ankertau.

Cake, s., Kuchen.

Cancer, s., Krebs.

Candle, s., Licht.

Cannibal, s., Kannibal, Men-schenfresser.

Canter, s., kurzer Galopp.

Canvass, s., Segeltuch.

Capital, a., vortrefflich, vorzüglich.

Carcass, s., todte Körper.

Cargo, s., Ladung.

Carpenter, s., Zimmermann.

Carronade, s., eine Art kurzer Feldstücke.

Cartridge, s., Patrone.

Cask, s., Faß.

Castor-oil, s., Ricini-Öl.

Casual, adj., zufällig.

Cattle, s., zahmes Vieh.

Caulk, v. a., falsatern.

Century, s., Jahrhundert.

Chalk, s., Kalk, Kreide.

Chance, s., Zufall, Aussicht.

Char, v. a., verfohlen.

Chart, die Seekarte.

Chase, v. a., jagen, verfolgen.

Chasten, v. a., züchtigen.

Chatter, v. n., plaudern, zwit-schern.

Check, v. a., hemmen.

Cheer, v., erheitern.

Chest, s., Kiste; Brust.

Chew, v. a. & n., kauen.

Chicken, s., Küchlein.

Chief, s., Anführer, Häuptling.

Chimney, s., Kamin.

China, s., Porzellan.

Chink, s., Spalt.

Chip, s., Span; v. a. abspänen, abspitzen.

Chisel, s., Meißel.

Chivalry, s., Ritterlichkeit.

Choke, v. a., ersticken, erwürgen.

Chop, v. a. & n., hauen, verschneiden; spalten.

Cinder, s., Kohlasche, Löschkohle.

Cipher, s., Ziffer, Null.

Clap, v. a., flappen, flappern.

Claw, s., Klaue; Scheere.

Clay, s., Thon, Lehm.

Cleft, s., Spalte.

Clergy-man, s., Geistliche.

Climb, v. n., klettern.

Cling, v. n. ir., sich um Etwas winden, anhängen.

Clog, s., Last.

Clothes, pl. Kleider.

Coax, v. a., schmeicheln.

Cock, v. a., den Hahn spannen.

Cockatoo, s., Kakatu.

Coffin, s., Sarg.

Coil, v. a., zusammenlegen, aufwickeln; s. Schlag (Rolle) Tauwerk.

Collier, s., Kohlenschiff.

Comb, s., Kamm; Honigwabe.

Compel, v. a., zwingen.

Conceal, v. a., verhehlen, verbergen.

Confiscate, v. a., wegnehmen.
 Consultation, s., Berathschlagung.
 Contend, v. n., streiten.
 Contest, s., Streit.
 Contrive, v. a., ersinnen, ausmitteln; v. n. Mittel und Wege finden.
 Convalescence, s., Genesung.
 Convoy, s., Bedeckung.
 Cook, v. a., kochen; s. Koch, Köchin.
 Coop, s., Kufe; Hühnerkorb.
 Copious, adj., reichlich, häufig.
 Cord, s., Seil, Strick.
 Corn, s., Korn; Mais.
 Cottons, s. pl., baumwollene Waare; baumwollener Zwirn.
 Cove, s., Bucht.
 Covet, v. a., begehren.
 Cow, s., Kuh.
 Crack, v. a. & n., plagen; knacken.
 Crash, v. n., frachen.
 Craw-fish, Cray-fish, s., Krebs.
 Crawl, v. n., kriechen.
 Crazy, adj., gebrechlich.
 Creak, v. n., knarren.
 Cress, s., Kresse.
 Crest, s., Hochmuth.
 Crew, s., Schiffsvolk.
 Crockery, s., Töpferwaare.
 Crop, s., Ernte.
 Crouch, v. n., kriechen.
 Crow, s., Krähe.
 Crow-bar, s., Brechstange.
 Crust, s., Rinde, Kruste.
 Cucumber, s., Gurke.
 Cuff, v. a., mit der Faust schlagen.
 Cup, s., Becher; Obertasse.
 Curtain, s., Vorhang.

D.

Dart, v. a., werfen; v. n., schnell dahin fahren; schießen.
 Dash, v. a., schlagen, stoßen; bespritzen.

Davit, s., die taube Zütte, (kurze Sparre, mit einer Scheibe am Ende).
 Dawn, v. a., dämmern.
 Dazzle, v. a., blenden.
 Deal, s., Theil; Diele.
 Decay, v. n., verwelken, verfaulen.
 Decide, v. a., entscheiden.
 Defend, v. a., vertheidigen.
 Defraud, v. a., betrügen.
 Dell, s., Loch, Thal.
 Deluge, s., Ueberschwemmung, Sündfluth.
 Den, s., Höhle, Grube.
 Dependence, s., Abhängigkeit.
 Deplore, v. a., beklagen, beweinen.
 Depreciate, v. a., heruntersetzen, gering schätzen.
 Descend, v. n., herab- oder hinabsteigen.
 Descent, s., Abhang, Abfall.
 Despise, v. a., verabscheuen.
 Devastate, v. a., verwüsten.
 Deviate, v. n., abweichen.
 Dictate, s., Vorschrift, Lehre.
 Dig, v., a. & n., graben.
 Dim, adj., blöde, matt.
 Dint, s., Streich, Nachdruck.
 Dip, v. a., benetzen, eintauchen.
 Dirt, s., Koth.
 Disaster, s., Unglück.
 Dismantle, v. a., entblößen, zertrümmern.
 Dispatch, v. a., abschicken, abfertigen.
 Display, v., a. & n., ausframen, prahlen.
 Disposition, s. Verfügung; Anordnung; Sinnesart.
 Disturb, v. a., stören.
 Dive, v. n., sich untertauchen.
 Divert, v. a., ablenken.
 Dock, v. a., stützen.
 Dodge, v. n., herumziehen; List gebrauchen.
 Domestic, a., häuslich.

Doom, s., Richterspruch; Schicksal; v. a., verurtheilen; beschließen.

Dote, v. n., aberwitzig sein; — upon in Etwas vernarrt sein, es abgöttisch lieben.

Doze, v. n., schlummern.

Draft, s., Zug.

Drag, v., a. & n., ziehen, schleppen.

Drawer, s., Schubkasten.

Dreary, adj., schauervoll.

Dress, v. a., ankleiden, zurechten.

Droop, v. n., schwächen.

Drove, s., Heerde, Haufen.

Drown, v. a., ertränken; v. n. ertrinken.

Dull, adj., dumm; stumpf.

Dumb, a., stumm.

Dusk, s., Dämmerung.

Dutchman, s., Holländer.

Duty, s., Pflicht.

E.

Eddy, s., Strudel, Wirbel.

Edge, s., Schärfe; Rand.

Efficient, adj., wirksam.

Effusion, s., Vergießen.

Elm, s., Ulme.

Embers, s. pl., heiße Asche.

Embroidery, s., Stickerei.

Emerge, v. n., hervorkommen.

Enclosure, s., Zaun.

Endeavour, v. n., sich bemühen.

Ensign, s., Fahne, Flagge.

Ensue, v. a., nachfolgen.

Entangle, v. a., verwickeln.

Enterprise, s., Unternehmung.

Entice, v. a., anlocken.

Ephemeral, adj., eintägig.

Equivalent, a., gleichbedeutend.

Ermine, s., Hermelin.

Escape, v., n. & a., entkommen.

Estate, s., Zustand; Vermögen, Gut.

Evaporation, s., Verdunstung.

Eventually, adv., dem Ausgange gemäß; wirklich.

Ewe, s., Schafmutter.

Executor, s., Testamentsvollzieher.

Exhaustion, s., Erschöpfung.

Exigency, s., dringendes Bedürfnis; äußerste Noth.

Expanse, s., Ausdehnung.

Explore, v. a., erforschen, untersuchen.

Expostulate, v. n., zanken, streiten.

Extirpate, v. a., ausrotten.

Extricate, v. a., herauswickeln, herausziehen.

Eye, s., Auge; Knospe, Keim.

Eyelet, s., Loch, Schnürloch.

F.

Fagot, s., Reißbündel.

Faint, v. n., in Ohnmacht fallen.

Fair, adj., schön; günstig.

Fare, s., Kost.

Farm, s., Meierei.

Fast, a., fest; schnell.

Fasten, v. a., befestigen.

Fat, s., Fett.

Fathom, s., Klafter; Tiefe.

Fawn, v. a., schmeicheln.

Feature, s., Zug, Gesichtszug.

Feed, v. a. ir., füttern.

Fell, v. a., fällen.

Fence, s., Umzäunung.

Fervent, adj., inbrünstig.

Festoon, v. a., behängen, ausschmücken.

Fetch, v. a., holen; bringen; erreichen.

Fib, s., Lüge, Märchen.

Fictitious, adj., erdichtet.

Fidget, v. n., unruhig sein.

Fin, s., Flosse.

Fir, s., Tanne.

Fireplace, s., Heerd.

Fish, s., Fisch, Fische.

Fishy, a., nach Fisch schmeckend.
 Flap, v. a. & n., klappen; platzen, schlagen.
 Flapper, s., Flosse der Schildkröten.
 Flinch, v. n., zurückweichen, zurückschauern.
 Flint, s., Feuerstein.
 Flock, s., Heerde, Haufen.
 Flog, v. a., peitschen.
 Flounce, v. n., stampfen, plantschen.
 Flounder, v. n., strampeln.
 Flour, s. Mehl.
 Fluster, s., Uebereilung.
 Foam, s., Schaum; v. n. schäumen.
 Focus, s. Brennpunkt.
 Fodder, s. Futter.
 Fondle, v., a. & n., liebkosen.
 Foolish, adj., unbesonnen, thöricht.
 Fore-runner, s., Vorläufer, Vorbote.
 Forge, v. a., schmieden; nachahmen.
 Fork, s., Gabel.
 Forsake, v. a. ir., verlassen, entsagen.
 Foster, v. a., ernähren, pflegen.
 Fowl, s., Vogel, Geflügel.
 Fracture, v. a., brechen.
 Fragment, s., Bruchstück.
 Frame, s., Rahmen, Form.
 Frantic, adj., wahnsinnig.
 Fret, v. a., erzürnen; v. n. sich ärgern.
 Frighten, v. a., erschrecken.
 Fry, v. a., rösten, braten.
 Fuel, s., Feuerung, Brennholz.
 Furl, v. a., zusammenziehen.
 Furrow, s., Furche.

G.

Gable, s., Giebel.
 Gale, s., starker Wind.
 Galley, s., Galeere; Schiffsküche.
 Gambol, s., Luftsprung.

Game, s., Spiel; Wildpret.
 Gangway, s., der schmale Gang (am Geländer).
 Gannet, s., Art Gans.
 Gather, v. a., sammeln, versammeln; ernten.
 Gear, s., Geschirr.
 Gill, s., Kiemen.
 Gimblet, s., Bohrer.
 Gin, s., Wachholderbranntwein.
 Glad, adj., heiter, froh.
 Glass, s., Glas; Spiegel; Fernrohr.
 Glee, s., Freude, Fröhlichkeit.
 Gloom, s., Niedergeschlagenheit.
 Glove, s., Handschuh.
 Glum, adj., mürrisch.
 Glutton, s., Bielfraß.
 Goat, s., Ziege.
 God-father, s., Pathe.
 Grand, adj., groß, erhaben.
 Grape, s., Weinbeere.
 Grate, v. a., vergittern; fragen.
 Greedy, adj., begierig.
 Greet, v. a. & n., grüßen.
 Gregarious, adj., heerdenweise.
 Grief, s., Kummer.
 Grin, v. n., grinsen; fletschen.
 Grind, v. a. ir., schleifen.
 Grindstone, s., Schleifstein.
 Grisly, adj., scheußlich.
 Grocer, s., Gewürzkrämer.
 Groper, s., Krappler, Kriecher.
 Grove, s., Hain.
 Growl, v. n., fnurren.
 Grunt, v. n., grunzen.
 Guava, Guayage.
 Gunnel (eigentlich gun-wale), s. der Dahlbord (Geländer).
 Gunpowder, s., Schießpulver.
 Gust, s., Windstoß.
 Gutter, s., Rinne, Gasse.
 Guy, s., Tau, Leittau.

H.

Hale, adj., frisch, gesund.
 Hallo, v. n., zurufen.

Ham, s., Schinken.
 Hammock, s., Hangematte.
 Handle, s., Handhabe,
 Handspike, s., Hebestange.
 Handy, adj., bequem; geschickt.
 Hank, s., Knäuel.
 Hardship, s., Druck, Bedrückung;
 Ungemach.
 Harm, s., Nachtheil.
 Harsh, adj., rauh.
 Hatchet, s., Beil.
 Haughty, adj., stolz.
 Haul, v. a., ziehen.
 Haunt, v. a., belästigen.
 Hawser, s., Ring zum Befestigen des Ankertaues.
 Heap, s., Haufen; v. a. — up,
 aufhäufen.
 Heave, v. a. ir., heben; aufschwellen.
 Hedge, s., Hecke.
 Heed, s., Sorgfalt, Vorsicht; Nachdenken.
 Heel, s., Ferse.
 Helm, s., Steuerruder.
 Help, v., a. & n., helfen; vorschneiden; zulangen.
 Hemp, s., Hanf.
 Hen, s., Henne.
 Hen-coop, Hen-roost, s., der Hühnerstall.
 Herd, s., Heerde.
 Hesitate, s., v. n., unschlüssig sein.
 Hide, v. a. ir., verstecken.
 Hip, s., Hüfte.
 Hive, s., Bienenstock.
 Hoist, v. a., aufziehen.
 Hold, s., Griff; Besitz; Raum (eines Schiffes).
 Hook, s., Hafen.
 Hoop, s., Reif.
 Host, s., Wirth; Haufen, Schaar.
 Hover, v. n., schweben.
 Howl, v. n., heulen.
 Hue, s., Farbe, Färbung.
 Huge, adj., sehr groß; unge-heuer.

Humble, adj., bescheiden.
 Humility, s., Demuth.
 Hurricane, s., Orkan.
 Hurt, v. a. ir., verwunden.
 Husbandman, s., Landwirth.
 Hush, v. a., stillen.

I.

Idle, adj., faul, müßig, unnütz.
 Ignite, v. a., anzünden.
 Impervious, adj., undurchdringlich; unwegsam.
 Implement, s., Werkzeug.
 Incident, s., Zufall.
 Incumbrance, s., Beschwerde;
 Last.
 Incur, v. a., einlaufen, eingehen.
 Indenture, s., Vertrag.
 Indigenous, adj., einheimisch.
 Indraught, s., Eingang; Strömung.
 Induce, v. a., leiten, veranlassen.
 Inert, adj., träge.
 Ingenuity, s., Freimüthigkeit;
 Scharfsinn.
 Injunction, s., Befehl.
 Inlet, s., Eingang, Zugang.
 Insurance, s., Versicherung.
 Intelligence, s., Mittheilung, Nachricht.
 Intense, adj., stark; gespannt.
 Interment, s., Beerdigung.
 Interpret, v. a., erklären; übersetzen.
 Interruption, s., Unterbrechung.
 Interval, s., Zwischenraum.
 Iron, s., Eisen; v. a., bügeln.
 Irritate, v. a., reizen, entrüsten.
 Isolated, adj., getrennt.

J.

Jam, v. a., flemmen.
 Jaw, s., Kinnbacken.
 Jaw, s., Kachen.
 Jelly, s., Gallerte.
 Jerk, v. a., stoßen; zerren.

Job, s., Geschäft; (als Eigennamen: Hiob).

Jolly-boat, s., Zolle.

Jump, v. a., springen, hüpfen.

K.

Keel, s., Kiel.

Keen, adj., gierig.

Keg, s., Fäßchen.

Kid, s., junge Ziege.

Kin, s., Verwandtschaft.

Knapsack, s., Schnappsfack.

Knife, s., Messer.

Knoll, s., kleiner Hügel.

L.

Lad, s., Junge.

Ladder, s., Leiter.

Ladle, s., Kochlöffel.

Larder, s., Speisekammer.

Lark, s., Lerche.

Lash, s., Hieb; v. a., peitschen.

Lashing, s., Ziehseil.

Latent, adj., verborgen.

Lath, s., Latte.

Latitude, s., Breite.

Launch, v. a., vom Stapel lassen.

Lavish, adj., verschwenderisch.

Lazy, adj., faul.

Lead, s., Blei.

Leaden, adj., bleiern.

Leaf, s., Blatt.

Leak, s., Leck, v. n. leck sein; durch ein Leck einsickern.

Leap, v. a., hinüberspringen.

Leave, v. a., lassen; verlassen — s., Erlaubniß.

Ledge, s., Rand.

Leisure, s., Muße.

Lest, conj., damit nicht, daß.

Level, adj., gleich, flach; v. n. & a., eben machen; richten; anlegen (ein Gewehr).

Lid, s., Deckel.

Linger, v. n., zögern.

Link, s., Glied, Ring.

Litter, v. a., werfen, gebären.

Livelihood, s., Auskommen, Lebensart.

Load, s., Ladung; v. a. & n., beladen, beschweren.

Loaf, s., Laib.

Lobster, s., Hummer.

Location, s., Wohnplatz.

Lock, s., Schloß.

Log, s., Klotz, Scheit.

Log-board, s., Logbret, Wachttafel (auf Schiffen).

Long, v. n., verlangen.

Longitude, s., Länge.

Luggage, s., Gepäck.

Lull, v. a., einschläfern.

Lurk, v. n., lauern.

M.

Magnifying glass, s., Vergrößerungsglas.

Main, adj., vornehmste, hauptsächlichste.

Main-guard, s., Hauptwache.

Mallet, s., Schlägel.

Management, s., Verwaltung, Führung.

Mangle, s., Mangel, Drehrolle.

Man-of-war, s., Kriegsschiff.

Man-of-war bird, s., Fregattenvogel.

Map, s., Landkarte.

Match, s., Lunte; Streichhölzchen.

Matchless, adj., unvergleichlich.

Mate, s., Gefährte; Steueremann.

Matting, s., Matten, pl.

Meal, s., Mehl; Mahlzeit.

Meddle, v. n., sich abgeben, sich mischen.

Meek, adj., sanft.

Melt, v., a. & n., ir., flüssig machen, schmelzen.

Mend, v. a., bessern, ausbessern.

Mess, s., Speise, Antheil.

Metaphor, s., Metapher, Bild.
 Migration, s., Wanderung.
 Mildew, s., Mehlthau; v. n. be-schlagen.
 Milliner, s., Putzmacherin.
 Mirth, s., Fröhlichkeit.
 Miss, v. a., vermissen.
 Moan, v. n., ächzen.
 Moist, adj., feucht.
 Moor, v. a., anfern.
 Morose, adj., mürrisch.
 Mortar, s., Mörtel; Mörtel.
 Moth, s., Motte.
 Mould, s., Schimmel; Garten-erde.
 Mound, s., Wall, Erhöhung.
 Mustard, s., Senf.
 Muzzle, s., Mündung.

N.

Nap, s., Schläfchen.
 Narrative, s., Erzählung.
 Nasty, a., garstig.
 Naughty, adj., böse, ungezogen.
 Nervous, a., nervös; nervenschwach.
 Notch, v. a., einferben.
 Nought, adv. & s., Nichts.
 Noxious, adj., schädlich.
 Nuisance, s., Beschwerlichkeit;
 Schade.
 Nurse, s., Amme, Wärterin;
 v. a. säugen, pflegen.

O.

Oak, s., Eiche.
 Oar, s., Ruder.
 Oat, s., Hafer.
 Objection, s., Einwand, Einwurf.
 Obstinacy, s., Halsstarrigkeit.
 Odd, adj., ungerade; seltsam.
 Omniscience, s., Allwissenheit.
 Onion, s., Zwiebel.
 Opaque, adj., dunkel.
 Orbit, s., Laufbahn.

Orchard, s., Obstgarten.
 Ordain, v. a. bestimmen, an-ordnen.
 Ostrich, s., Strauß.
 Outfit, s., Ausrüstung.

P.

Pacify, v. a., beruhigen.
 Paddle, s., Ruder.
 Pain, s., Schmerz; v. a. schmerzen.
 Pall, s., Leichentuch.
 Palm, s., Palme; flache Hand;
 Leder, welches die Segelmacher beim Nähen in der flachen Hand befestigen.
 Pan, s., Pfanne.
 Pang, s., Angst, Qual.
 Pannikin, s., Pfännchen.
 Pant, v. n., feuchen, beben.
 Parapet, s., Brustwehr.
 Parish, s., Kirchspiel.
 Parlour, s., Sprachzimmer.
 Parrot, s., Papagei.
 Part, s., Theil; v. n. to-with one,
 sich von Jemand trennen.
 Pasteboard, s., Pappe.
 Pasture, s., Weide.
 Pat, v. a., streicheln.
 Patch, s., Lappen; Stückchen; Fleckchen; — up, zusammenflicken.
 Path, s., Pfad.
 Patter, s., trampeln, plätschern.
 Pauper, s., Armer, Bettler.
 Paw, s., Pfote, Taze.
 Pea, s., Erbse.
 Peal, s., Schall.
 Pear, s., Birne.
 Peel, v. a., schälen.
 Peep, s., Blick, Gucken.
 Peg, s., Pflock.
 Pelt, v. a., werfen, treffen.
 Penitent, a., reuig.
 Perch, v. n., sich setzen.
 Perge, v. n., fortfahren.
 Perish, v. n., umkommen; sterben.
 Perseverance, s., Beharrlichkeit.
 Perspiration, s., Schweiß.

- Pervade, v. a., durchgehen.
 Perverse, adj., verkehrt; eigensinnig.
 Petrel, s., stormy — Sturmvogel.
 Pick up, v. a., auflesen.
 Pickaback, s., Huckepack.
 Pie, s., Pastete.
 Pierce, v. a., durchdringen.
 Pig, s., Ferkel, Schwein.
 Pigeon, s., Taube.
 Pile, s., Haufen; v. a., auf-häufen.
 Pillow, s., Kopfkissen.
 Pin, s., Nadel.
 Pinch, v. a., kneipen.
 Pine, v. n., sich abgrämen.
 Pipe, s., Pfeife.
 Pit, s., Grube.
 Pitch, s., Bech; v. a. verpichen;
 schleudern.
 Pitchy, adj., pechig; dunkel.
 Pity, v. a., bedauern.
 Plagiarism, s., literarischer Diebstahl.
 Plank, s., Bret.
 Plate, s., Teller.
 Plead, v. a., vorschützen, zur Entschuldigung anführen.
 Plough, v., a. & n., pflügen,
 wühlen.
 Plunge, v. a., plötzlich untertauchen, hinabstürzen.
 Pod, s., Hülse, Schale.
 Point, s., Spitze; v. a. to-out,
 bezeichnen.
 Pole, s., Stange.
 Pond, s., Teich.
 Pool, s., Pfuhl.
 Pork, s., Schweinefleisch.
 Porpus, s., Seeschwein.
 Porridge, s., Suppe.
 Post, s., Post; Posten.
 Potato, s., Kartoffel.
 Pouch, s., Tasche; Wanst.
 Poultry, s., Federvieh.
 Pour, v. a., gießen; einschenken.
 Precarious, adj., unsicher.
 Precaution, s., Vorsicht.
 Predict, v. a., vorhersagen.
 Premises, s. pl., Grundstück.
 Presentiment, s., Vorgefühl.
 Press, v. a., pressen, zwingen.
 Prevent, v. a., verhindern.
 Previous, adj., vorhergehend.
 Prey, v. a., rauben; vom Raube leben.
 Prick, v. a., stechen; aufzeichnen.
 Prickly, adj., dornig.
 Prime, s., Morgen; Anfang.
 Privateer, s., Kaperschiff.
 Privation, s., Entbehrung.
 Probability, s., Wahrscheinlich-keit.
 Prodigal, adj., verschwenderisch.
 Progeny, s. pl., Nachkommenschaft.
 Prognosticate, v. a., weissagen.
 Prominent, adj., hervorragend.
 Prop, s., Stütze.
 Propagate, v. a., fortpflanzen.
 Propose, v. a., vorschlagen.
 Protection, s., Schutz.
 Protract, v. a., verlängern, ver-zögern.
 Provisions, pl., Vorräthe, Mund-vorräthe.
 Prowl, v. a., auf Raub ausgehen.
 Puff, v. a., aufblasen.
 Pull, v. a., ziehen; rudern.
 Pup, v. a., Junge werfen.
 Puppy, s., junge Hund.
 Purpose, s., Zweck.
 Push, v., a. & n., stoßen; ab-
 stoßen.
 Puzzle, v. a., verwirren.
- Q.
- Queer, adj., wunderbarlich.
 Quell, v. a., hemmen, unterjochen.
 Quench, v. a., löschen.
 Quest, v. n., suchen.
 Quit, v. a., verlassen.
 Quiver, v. n., zittern.

R.

Rabbit, s., Kaninchen.
 Rafter, s., Sparre.
 Ragged, adj., zerlumpt.
 Rail, v. a., einfassen.
 Raise, v. a., aufheben, erheben.
 Ram, s., Widder; v. a. einrammen.
 Rapid, a., reißend (schnell); gewaltsam; plötzlich.
 Rapture, s., Begeisterung.
 Rarefy, v. a., verdünnen.
 Ravenous, adj., heißhungrig; raubgierig.
 Ravine, s., Schlucht, Kluft.
 Ray, s., Strahl.
 Rear, v. a., aufziehen.
 Rebuke, v. a., tadeln.
 Reckon, v., a & n., rechnen.
 Recoil, v. n., zurückprallen.
 Recollect, v. a., sich (einer Sache) erinnern.
 Recover, v. a., wieder erlangen; v. n. genesen.
 Redemption, s., Erlösung.
 Reef, s., Klippenreihe.
 Reel, s., Haspel.
 Relate, v. a., erzählen.
 Release, v. a., loslassen, befreien.
 Relics, s. pl., Ueberbleibsel.
 Relief, s., Hülfe; Befreiung.
 Relish, s., Geschmack; Vergnügen.
 Remember, v. & a., sich erinnern.
 Remind, v. a., erinnern.
 Removal, s., Wegschaffung.
 Repine, v. n., sich grämen.
 Report, s., Gerücht; Knall.
 Repose, s., Ruhe.
 Reprove, v. a., tadeln, ausschalten.
 Require, v. a., erfordern.
 Requisite, s., Erforderniß.
 Responsible, a., verantwortlich.
 Restrain, v. a., zurückhalten; einschränken.

Resume, v. a., wieder anfangen.
 Retrogate, v. n., zurückgehen.
 Ribbon, s., Band.
 Ridge, s., Rücken; Gipfel.
 Riot, v. n., zusammenrotten.
 Ripple, v. a. & n., bespülen, rieseln.
 Roar, v. n., brüllen.
 Roll, v. a., rollen.
 Roller, s., Rolle.
 Rook, s., Fruchtfrähe.
 Roost, s., Schlafort.
 Rough, adj., rauh, stürmisch.
 Round, a., rund; s., die Runde.
 Row, v., a. & n., rudern.
 Ruffle, v. a., fräufeln.
 Rugged, a., rauh.
 Rule, v. a., reiben.
 Rupee, s., Rupie; ostindische Münze.
 Rush, v. a., (hervor od. heraus) stürzen.
 Rustle, v. n., rauschen.

S.

Sadness, s., Traurigkeit.
 Sagacity, s., Scharfsinn.
 Saturate, v. a. (von Masse) sättigen, durchdringen.
 Salvation, s., Seligmachung.
 Sauce, s., Brühe.
 Saucer, s., Untertasse.
 Saucy, adj., verwegen.
 Savoury, adj., schmackhaft.
 Saw, s., Säge.
 Scald, v. n., brühen.
 Scale, s., Schale; Schuppe.
 Scan, v. a., abmessen, prüfen.
 Scheme, s., Plan, Entwurf.
 Scold, v. n., schelten.
 Score, v. a., schneiden (ein).
 Scour, v., a. & n., durchstreifen.
 Scrape, s., Schwierigkeiten.
 Scream, v. n., freischen.
 Screen, s., Schirm.
 Screw, s., Schraube; v. a., schrauben.

- Scuffle, s., Handgemenge.
 Scull, s., Hirnschale; v. a., rudern.
 Seam, s., Naht; Fuge.
 Seamanship, s., Seewesen.
 Seclusion, s., Abschließung; Trennung.
 Sedulous, adj., emsig.
 Seeds, pl., Sämereien.
 Selfish, adj., selbstsüchtig.
 Series, s. pl., Reihe; Lieferungen.
 Set, v. a., setzen; v. n., — off, abreisen; — s., Satz; Service.
 Sew, v. a., nähen.
 Shake, v. a., schütteln.
 Shaky, adj., geborsten, gesprungen.
 Shallow, adj., leicht.
 Shark, s., Haiſſch.
 Sharp, adj., scharf; pſſig.
 Sheer, adj., hell, rein; plötzlich.
 Sheers, s., große Scheere; Krah. n.
 Sheet, s., Stück Leinwand; Segel.
 Shelf, s., Bret.
 Shellfish, s., Schalthier.
 Shelter, s., Bedeckung, Obdach, Schutz.
 Shelving, adj., abhängig; s., Simſ.
 Shield, v. a., bedecken; beschützen.
 Shift, v. a., ändern, verſetzen.
 Shingle, s., Schindel; Geſtein.
 Shipwreck, s., Schiffbruch.
 Shivering, s., Schauer.
 Shoal, s., Menge; Untiefe.
 Shot, s., Schuß; Schrot.
 Shovel, s., Schaufel.
 Shrick, v. n., freischn.
 Shrub, s., Staude, Strauch.
 Shrubs, pl., Buschwerk.
 Shudder, v. n., ſchauern.
 Shutter, s., Fensterladen.
 Sight, s., Geſicht; Obſervation.
 Sinew, s., Sehne.
 Skien, v. a., abſchäumen.
 Skin, s., Haut, Fell.
 Skirt, v. a., einfassen.
 Skull, s., Hirnschale.
 Sky, s., Himmel.
 Slanting, adj., ſchief.
 Slaver, s., Sklavenschiff.
 Slice, s., Schnitte.
 Sliding-door, s., Schiebethür.
 Slight, adj., klein, unbedeutend.
 Slip, v. n., ausgleiten, wegziehen, durchſchlüpfen.
 Slope, s., Abhang; v. a. ſenken.
 Smart, adj., ſtugerhaft; ſcharf, derb.
 Smooth, a., glatt.
 Snake, s., Schlange.
 Snap, v., a. & n., (erwiſchen), zuſchnappen; zerreißen.
 Snarl, v. n., ſchnauben.
 Snatch, v. a., raſſen; v. n. ſchnappen.
 Snort, v. a., ſchnauben.
 Snuffle, v. n., ſchnüffeln.
 Sob, v. n., ſchluchzen.
 Soil, s., Boden.
 Solace, s., Troſt.
 Sooth, v. a., ſchmeicheln.
 Sore, adj., wund.
 Sort, s., Sorte; v. a., ſortiren, ausleſen.
 Sound, v. a., blaſen; ausforſchen, ſondiren.
 Source, s., Quelle.
 Sow, v., a. & n., ir., ſäen.
 Spade, s., Spaten.
 Spaniel, s., Wachtelhund.
 Spar, s., Sparren.
 Sparrow, s., Sperling.
 Spear, s., Spieß; v. a. ſpießen.
 Speck, s., Fleckchen.
 Speed, s., Eile.
 Spice, s., Gewürz.
 Spider, s., Spinne.
 Spike, s., Nagel, Spitze.
 Spigot, s., Zapfen.
 Spirits, pl., geiſtige Getränke.
 Spite, s., Widerwille; in — of, trotz.
 Splash, s., Geſpriß.
 Split, v. a., ir, ſpalten.
 Spokesman, s., Sprecher.
 Spongy, adj., ſchwammig.
 Spoon, s., Löffel.

Spot, s., Platz; Flecken.
 Spray, s., Seeschaum.
 Spread, v. a., ir., ausbreiten; bedecken.
 Sprig, s., Reis.
 Spring, s., Sprung; Frühling; Quelle.
 Sprout, v. n., sprossen.
 Squall, s., lauter Schrei; Windstoß.
 Squander, v. a., verschwenden.
 Square, adj., viereckig.
 Squeal, v. n., quären, schreien.
 Squeeze, v., a. & n., drücken.
 Stable, s., Stall.
 Stack, s., Schober; v. a., aufhäufen.
 Stare, v. n., anstarren.
 Start, v. n., abfahren.
 Starve, v. n., Noth leiden; verhungern.
 State, s., Zustand; v. a., berichten.
 Stationery, s., Schreibmaterial.
 Stave, v. a., zerschlagen, zerbrechen; s. Faßdaube.
 Stay, s., Stütze; v. n., ir., bleiben, warten; v. a., sich aufhalten.
 Stay-lace, s., Schnürband.
 Steak, s., Fleischschnitte.
 Steep, a., steil.
 Stem, s., Stiel, Stamm.
 Stench, s., Gestank.
 Stern, s., Hintertheil (eines Schiffes).
 Stimulate, v. a., anspornen.
 Sting, v. a., ir., stechen, schmerzen.
 Stroat, s., Iltis.
 Stock, v. a., verschen.
 Stockade, s., Palisaden-Verzahnung.
 Stomach, s., Magen.
 Stoop, v. n., sich bücken.
 Store, s., Vorrath.
 Stout, adj., fest, rüstig; standhaft.
 Stow, v. a., packen; stauen.
 Strain, v. a., dehnen; v. n., sich anstrengen.

Strap, s., Riemen; Eisenflammer.
 Stratagem, s., Kriegslist.
 Stretch, v. a., dehnen, spannen.
 Stretcher, s., Spanner; Strebe-pfeiler.
 Strike, v., a. & n., ir., schlagen, stoßen.
 String, s., Schnur.
 Struggle, v. n., kämpfen.
 Stud, v. a., besetzen.
 Stuff, s., Stoff, Zeug.
 Stump, s., Stumpf; to-up, abstümpfen.
 Stun, v. a., betäuben.
 Stunt, v. a., verkommen.
 Stupify, v. a., dumm machen.
 Subservient, adj., dienlich.
 Succour, s., Beistand.
 Suckle, v. a., säugen.
 Suffocate, v. a., ersticken.
 Sulky, adj., mürrisch.
 Sulphurous, adj., schwefelig.
 Sultry, adj., schwül.
 Summon, v. a., vorladen, auffordern.
 Surf, s., Brandung.
 Surge, s., Woge.
 Surgeon, s., Wundarzt.
 Surly, adj., finster, mürrisch.
 Survey, s., Uebersicht; Messung.
 Surveyor, s., Feldmesser.
 Suspense, s., Ungewißheit.
 Swallow, v. a., verschlucken, verschlucken; Schwalbe.
 Swamp, v. a., versenken.
 Swampy, adj., sumpfig.
 Swell, v. n., ir., aufschwellen.

T.

Tack, s., Stift, Nagel.
 Tackle, s., Tafelwerk.
 Taffrail, s., das Hackerbord (wo sich das Bildniß des Schiffes befindet.)
 Tail, s., Schwanz; Ende.
 Tangle, v. a., verwickeln.
 Tank, s., Teich.

Tape, s., Band.
 Tar, s., Theer; v. a. theeren.
 Task, s., Aufgabe, Beschäftigung.
 Teaze, v. n., quälen.
 Tedious, adj., lästig.
 Tenacious, adj., anhängend.
 Tenet, s., Grundsatz.
 Term, v. a., nennen.
 Terminate, v. a. & n., enden.
 Terrier, s., Dachshund.
 Tether, v. a., anbinden.
 Thatch, v. a., mit Stroh decken.
 Theft, s., Diebstahl.
 Thimble, s., Fingerhut.
 Thistle, s., Distel.
 Thong, s., Riemen.
 Thoughtlessness, s., Gedankenlosigkeit.
 Threatening, adj., drohend.
 Thump, v. a., schlagen.
 Thwart, s., Querholz.
 Tidings, s. pl., Nachrichten.
 Tidy, adj., bequem.
 Tie, s., Knoten, Band.
 Tier, s., Reihe.
 Tight, a., dicht.
 Timber, s., Bauholz.
 Tin-can, s., zinnerne Kanne.
 Tinderbox, s., Feuerzeug.
 Tiny, adj., klein, winzig.
 Tip, s., Spitze, Ende.
 Toddy, s., süßes Getränk.
 Toil, v. a., sich anstrengen.
 Tomb, s., Grab.
 Tool, s., Werkzeug, Geräth.
 Top, s., Gipfel, Spitze.
 Torrent, s., Regenbach, Strom.
 Torrid, adj., dörrend; heiß.
 Toss, v. a., werfen, schleudern.
 Tottering, adj., schwankend.
 Touch-paper, s., Zündpapier.
 Tough, adj., zähe.
 Tow, v. a., schleppen.
 Trap, s., Falle.
 Trap-door, v., Fallthüre.
 Treat, s., Schmaus.
 Tremendous, adj., erschrecklich.
 Trench, s., Graben.

Trial, s., Probe, Prüfung.
 Tribe, s., Stamm, Volk.
 Trick, s., Kniff; Kunststück.
 Trickle, v. n., tröpfeln.
 Trifle, s., Kleinigkeit.
 Trigger, s., Drücker.
 Trip, s., kurze Reise, Tour.
 Tripod, s., Dreifuß.
 Trouble, v. a., beunruhigen; v. a., Unruhe; Mühe.
 Trough, s., Trog.
 Trunk, s., Stamm; Rüssel.
 Truss, s., Bündel.
 Tub, s., Tonne.
 Tuft, s., Büschel.
 Tumble, v. n., niederfallen.
 Tumbler, s., Wasserglas.
 Turf, s., Rasen.
 Turn, s., Wendung; Dienstleistung.
 Turtle, s., Schildkröte.
 Tusk, s., Fangzahn.
 Twine, s., Bindfaden.
 Twist, v. a., drehen, flechten.

U.

Unanimous, adj., einmüthig.
 Unaware, adv., unversehens.
 Underweigh, adv., unterwegs; unter Segel.
 Underwriter, s., Versicherer.
 Undress, v. n., sich auskleiden.
 Undulate, v. a., Wellen schlagen.
 Unit, s., Einheit.
 Unlay, v. a., aufrotteln, aufdrehen.
 Untractableness, s., Ungelehrigkeit.
 Urchin, s., Bübchen, Schelm, Schalk.
 Urge, v. a., treiben, drängen.
 Utensils, pl., Geräth, Geschirr.
 Utter, adj., äußerst; v. a. äußern.
 Utterance, s., Sprache, Ausdruck.

V.

Vast, adj., groß, ungeheuer.

Venemous, adj., giftig.
 Vent, s., Ausweg.
 Ventilation, s., Lüftung.
 Venture, s., Wagniß; Unternehmung.
 Venturesome, adj., verwegen.
 Vermine, s., Ungeziefer.
 Vest, v. a., bekleiden, anlegen.
 Vex, v. a., quälen; v. n., sich plagen, ärgerlich sein.
 Vigorous, adj., kräftig.
 Visitation, f. Heimsuchung (Gottes).
 Void, adj., nichtig.

W.

Wail, v. n., flagen.
 Waist, s., Leib, Taille.
 Wanton, adj., muthwillig.
 Ward, v. a., bewachen; vertheidigen.
 Washing-tub, s., Waschfaß.
 Waste, v. a., verwüsten; verschwenden.
 Watch, s., Wache.
 Water-pipe, s., Wasserröhre.
 Wattle, v. a., umzäunen.
 Wave, s., Welle; v. n., wallen; schwanken.
 Way, s., Weg; Richtung; Verkehrungsart.
 Wean, v. a., entwöhnen.
 Wear, v., a. ir., tragen; abmatten.
 Weary, a., müde; v. a., abmühen, ermüden.

Web, s., Gewebe.
 Weed, s., Unkraut.
 Well, s., Brunnen.
 Wet, a., naß; v. a., naß machen.
 Whale-bone, s., Fischbein.
 Wheel, s., Rad; v. n., sich drehen; rollen; sich schwenken.
 Whimper, v. a., wimmern.
 Whine, v. n., weinen; wimmern.
 Whip, s., Peitsche.
 Whistle, v. n. & a., pfeifen.
 Wick, s., Docht.
 Wickedness, s., Gottlosigkeit.
 Width, s., Breite, Weite.
 Wipe, v. a., wischen.
 Wire, s., Draht.
 Wistful, adj., gedankenvoll.
 Wither, v. n., verwelken; verfaulen.
 Woful, adj., traurig.
 Worry, v. n., zerreißen; quälen.
 Wrap, v. a., wickeln (um).
 Wrath, s., Zorn.
 Wreck, s., Bruch.
 Wrest, v. a., drehen; reißen.
 Wrist, s., Handgelenk.

Y.

Yam, s., Erdbirne.
 Yarn, s., Garn.
 Yawl, s., Jolle, Schaluppe.
 Yawn, v. n., gähnen.
 Yearn, v. n., sich sehnen.
 Yell, s., Schrei, Angstgeschrei.
 Yoke, s., Joch; v. a., anjochen.

Druck von J. B. Hirschfeld in Leipzig.

Marryat, Frederick,

Robinson Ready or the Wreck of the Pacific für die deutsche Jugend mit belehrenden Noten und einem Wörterbuche versehen

Leipzig 1857

Bamberg, Staatsbibliothek -- L.angl.o.75

urn:nbn:de:bvb:12-bsb11715492-1